Restoring brown fields to green space will require some big green money

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix County officials will spend the first month of the year investigating the feasibility of creating a county-wide Brownfield Development Authority.

A Brownfield Authority is charged with cleaning vacant, unused and contaminated property so that the land can be used again for business or residential purposes.

Tom Johnson of the Northern Michigan Economic Alliance gave a presentation to the county board of commissioners during their meeting last week to explain how such an authority works.

The board's interest in the subject has stemmed from the fact that the city of East Jordan is mulling the possibility of a city-wide authority.

Also Proposal C, an environmental clean-up package passed by voters in November of 1998, will commit $330 million of $590 million in bonds to brownfield areas.

Brownfield Authorities raise money by capturing a portion of the taxes assessed to the properties, an aspect which didn't please some commissioners who likened a Brownfield Authority to a Downtown Development Authority (D.D.A.).

"I'm opposed to capturing taxes, it's strictly illegal even if the law allows it," commissioner James Behling said. "If people vote for the Grandvue millage and the money goes elsewhere it's not right. There should be some other way to do it."

Johnson said the difference between a brownfield and a D.D.A. is that a D.D.A. can capture taxes from every parcel within the whole district, while a Brownfield Authority can only do so from the specific designated parcels within the area.

In order to tag a parcel with a brownfield designation, the plan needs approval from the Department of Environmental Quality, contamination needs to be proven and a public hearing needs to be held.

Johnson told the board that businesses which locate onto cleaned up brownfield areas will earn a 10 percent tax credit on its capital investments.

"It's a tool that should be examined and looked at," county planner Larry Sullivan said. "But you can never take care of 100 percent of the land's problems."

Sullivan said that the county's planning commission will discuss the subject in more detail during its next meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 14.

"It'll be argued later on," Behling said.

In other county board action, the board transferred $154,050 from its general funds to cover budget shortfalls from various county departments.

The biggest shortfall was a $67,500 deficit incurred by the commissioners themselves for attorney fees as the county wrangles out a new union contract with the employees at the sheriff's department.

The building inspection department went over budget by $17,000 due to the hiring of an additional part-time inspector, county clerk Jane Brannon said.

The county was also over budget on its operating transfers line item by $44,000 because of extra money appropriated to the 9-1-1 system throughout 1998.

Separate from the budget deficits, the board also approved committing $200,000 from its general funds in 1999 to further develop new house numbering systems throughout the county to better aid 9-1-1 responders.

"It doesn't matter if you have a great 9-1-1 system if the emergency responders can't find you," Brannon said

The board also approved spending $49,633 to have Advantage Systems, a Madison Heights computer company, upgrade the county's AS/400 computer systems to ensure that the machines are equipped to handle the year 2000 problem.

The board next meets at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan 13.

Winter: From temperate to tempestuous

It started so gently, with moderate temperatures and absolutely no snow. But Old Man Winter turned into a growling beast with the New Year, bringing as much 12 to 18 inches of snow, howling winds, drifts, and temperatures near zero with the wind chill factor. Schools all over northern Michigan were closed Monday because of the deep, drifting snow. It should have been the first day back to school, but ended up being an extra day of vacation. Si Perron (above) spent the final day of 1998 digging his driveway out from underneath the fresh snowfall with his snow blower. Chances are he spent the first few days of 1999 repeating the task. Island residents upset about parking fee hike at airport

By Jamie MacMillan

In an attempt to raise extra funds for continued improvements at the municipal airport, city officials have instead raised the ire of Beaver Island residents.

A large increase in parking fees, specifically for long-term seasonal passes, has stirred the islanders, who have sent city hall a petition with 200 signatures protesting the increases.

Long term seasonal passes for one year have been raised from $50 to $100 and six month passes have also doubled from $25 to $50. Every other parking fee has also doubled A one-month pass is now $30, one week is $10 and the overnight fee is now $2.

Many islanders were unaware of the changes and were caught off guard when they went to purchase their long-term parking passes for 1999.

"To say that this was a shock is an understatement," islander Richard Gillespie said. "To double the cost of parking on the grass which turns to muck in the spring is a very troubling matter."

Airport manager Lorraine Luepnitz said the increased fees are necessary so the city can improve the condition of the parking lot, which stores about 400 cars during a typical summer day.

No expansion is planned, Luepnitz said, but city officials would like to pave the lot as well as create a new entrance off U.S. 31.

The lot is on a grassy field which can be muddy and sloppy throughout the year. The current entrance to the airport is shared with the entrance to Harbor Industries.

Early cost estimates for the projects were $342,000 for the paving and another $77,000 for the new entry road.

Luepnitz explained that the city was turned down for a grant by the state's Bureau of Aeronautics, which would have covered 90 per-

Hometown news in Tiananmen Square

While Lily Matye was in Beijing, China, she got the urge to read a newspaper. Imagine her surprise when she found the Charlevoix Courier in the news racks in Tiananmen Square. OK, that's not exactly what happened. Matye and her husband, Reinhard, were in Beijing on business. The Matyes didn't want the Courier to be outdone by another northern Michigan newspaper which is seen traveling all over the world, so they took the Courier along with them. As an honored business guest, Reinhard was treated to the most desirable part of a beautiful, Chinese fish dinner — the fish head. He was so honored he could hardly stand it. Reinhard's business trip was successful, which means that his company, DCL in Charlevoix, will be shipping loading devices to China. (Photo courtesy of Reinhard Matye)

"They should, with all the money we gave them."
— Charlevoix County Commissioner Joan Blanchard's reaction when informed that the 9-1-1 system ended its fiscal year with a budget surplus. The county contributed close to $100,000 in additional funds to keep the program solvent this past year.

Commissioners committed to $3.5 million jailhouse project

By Jamie MacMillan

Amid a whirl of controversy, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners awarded a work contract to Petrie Construction to do the work on the county jail expansion project.

By awarding the contract, the county has committed itself to a project in excess of $3.5 million that will more than solve the local jail's slight overcrowding problem.

Currently, the jail has capacity for 25 inmates, but jail administrator Babette Meggison said that jail population has been around 30 for much of the year. The population has approached 40 a couple of times, but as of the middle of last week, 23 inmates called the jail home.

The expansion will double the size of the facility and triple the inmate capacity by adding at least an additional 62 beds.

The current 25 beds will remain, but the expansion will add three, 14-bed minimum security dorms, an 18-bed work release dorm and a juvenile holding cell with two beds.

Meggison said they may build in two other beds in the juvenile holding cell, increasing the total of new beds to 64.

Despite increasing capacity by 350 percent, Meggison said it will not be a challenge to fill the cells because judges will be more apt to dole out jail terms once the facility has more room.

Meggison also said that the county will look to rent out extra space to other counties with full facilities.

At the moment, the jail isn't renting out any cells, but has done so at other times during the last year, Meggison said. The county charges $35 a night to house inmates from other counties and assumes no cost responsibility for inmate transportation.

"We'd like that as much as we can to help pay for the addition," she said.

Eleven companies from throughout the state sent in bid estimates, but Petrie, an East Jordan business, was the only applicant from Charlevoix County.

Their estimate of $3,606,000 was second-lowest among the applicants.

Graham Construction of Saginaw was the lowest bid among the group, estimating a cost of $3,456,000 for the work.

Grady Graham, owner of the company, attended last week's board meeting and expressed concerns about the awarding process, which he said favored local companies.

"It defeats the purpose of competitive bidding," the Lake Charlevoix summer resident said.

Commissioner Carl Price said the decision to award the contract to Petrie was based on a number of factors, including the fact that the firm had previous experience with jail and other multi-million dollar projects. He also noted that Landmark and Harrison, the architecture firm drawing the blue prints for the jail expansion, recommended Petrie.

The architects' recommendation came after interviews with other architects and engineers who had worked with the competing con-

Coming to the rescue

Charlevoix businessman Pat McKeown (left) presents Brian Braddock of the Manna Project with a charitable donation of $1,000. McKeown's donation is in response to a recent break-in, during which the Petoskey charity lost 70 cases of food for the needy. Said McKeown, "I have a two-year-old grandson, and I couldn't even think of him going hungry. So I felt that I had to step up and do something." Braddock said the project will be able to turn the cash into "hundreds of pounds of food." Anyone else interested in helping the cause can reach the Manna Project at 347-8852. OPINIONS

Forget the flashers — they're part of a foreign conspiracy

By Dick Joseph, guest columnist

Recently our nation was faced with a very serious situation which forced large numbers of American citizens to make a choice. This situation affected virtually everyone who lives in Charlevoix. We were forced not only to make a choice, but to make that choice known to the general public as they drove by our homes.

No, I am not talking about the recent confrontation in Iraq. No, I am not talking about the Clinton crisis and whether or not he should be impeached or censured.

Rather, I am talking about something far more personal and invasive. I am talking about Christmas lights and whether you like them flashing or non-flashing.

Now before you all moan and turn the page, let me tell you that I believe that there is a international plot to subvert our cultural well being. I believe it is important to address this issue at this time because most of us are just now getting around to taking our Christmas lights down. Now is the time to take a stand!

We should throw the little imported lights away and go back to the big American screw-in bulbs. Whatever happened to those big light bulbs anyway? Back in the '50s and '60s, and even into the '70s, when men were men, we had big light bulbs. They were made in America by companies like G.E., Edison and Westinghouse. They didn't blink and when one went out, the rest of them still stayed lit. They defined the very moral fiber of this country. Then, as the Depression Era/World War II generation slowly aged and went the artificial tree route, the baby boom generation took over and began decorating. Slowly, our wives took over. They began entering things such as "home decorating competitions." I can only imagine that this was a ploy to keep their husbands from watching more and more football, particularly as the bowl games began to proliferate and start earlier in the month.

In any event, the big, easy to handle, easy to replace light bulbs soon began to be replaced by those little tiny, foreign made Christmas lights. Gradually, colored lights began to be replaced by white lights. And the whole idea of a "home decorating competition," led by some Martha Stewart wannabe, caused us to go out and purchase more and more of the new little, foreign made "twinklers." Soon we were forced to begin decorating in October and it now takes us until February to get all the lights down and put away.

But I digress.

We must turn back to our national dilemma — are you flasher or non-flasher?

I believe that the public choice on this issue is extremely clear cut. If you took a poll, and I am sure someone somewhere has, you would find that the public is decidedly non-flashing. Now I don't want this to turn into some sort of an Ann Landers toilet paper issue. (You know, when you put the toilet paper in the dispenser, does it go over the top or under the bottom?) Moreover, I don't want to offend any of our local flashers. However, I do believe that our culture and the decision-making ability of the American people is being dictated by the foreign companies who produce these tiny light bulbs.

If you have purchased these light bulbs recently, you know what I am talking about. The light bulbs come in a nice little box, all arranged, and I might add, tightly connected to a little plastic tray. After you get them home and plug them in to see if they work, which is approximately 60 percent of the time, you will discover that the lights are preordained at the factory to flash.

Now any good American manufacturer will tell you that if the public wants non-flashing light bulbs, they should come from the factory non-flashing and let the few consumers who want flashing bulbs convert them over. Only if you are trying to force a change in American society would you constantly, repeatedly, year after year, ship a product which is so contrary to the demands of the consumer.

This year I have found that these manufacturers have taken this plot to a new level. It wasn't enough just to ship the lights in a flashing mode. Being a resilient and hard-working people, we simply removed the clear flashing bulb and replaced it with the non-flashing bulb provided in the box. Then, of course, they added those tiny, tiny fuses - but that is another story. This year I discovered all of that had changed.

As I am sure you are aware, most of the strands of lights contain two flashing bulbs, while the longer ones contain three. Upon discovering how clever we Americans are, these foreign companies came up with a very devious plan to continue their plot by simply inserting one replacement bulb. Oh, they still give you two replacement flashing bulbs, which to me, only makes their plans more apparent. Obviously, one cannot replace two flashing bulbs with one non-flasher. The solution, of course is to return to the store and buy an extra strand of lights in order to "rob" it of non-flashing bulbs. But this solution can only accomplish two things. It can increase our frustration levels to the point where we simply say, "to heck with it, we will let the lights flash this year," or it will add to the corporate profits of the companies trying to change our culture in the first place.

Why, you might be asking, is it important whether or not we are being subtlety and subvertedly forced to change our holiday lighting habits? The answer is obvious. If you can get our nation to change one of its most deeply held cultural institutions, then you can get us to do anything. It won't be long before our local hospitals are canceling the health insurance held by the majority of their customers. It won't be long before we are investigating our elected leaders regarding their private sex lives. You see, if we start flashing we could soon be doing totally ridiculous, outrageous things. But before we get to that point, I have a solution. Throw those little lights away. We should go back to the big lights. One strand along the eves and perhaps, one or two strands in the bushes nearest the sidewalk should be sufficient. We fathers can then go back to laying on the couch, watching football, and soaking up some of that good American advertising, where the manufacturers know just exactly what we consumers want.

cent of the paving costs.

"In this case, grants were difficult to get because of the feeling that parking lots should be able to generate their own income," she said.

To that end, the city raised fees for the first time in 15 years.

According to Luepnitz, parking revenues with the old fees brought in about $23,000 a year.

In the past, all that money went to Island Airways who, in turn, spent the money for plowing and other parking/airport maintenance.

When the city shuffled the management hierarchy at the airport in the summer of 1997, a new contract was signed with Island Air, which gave the city access to half of the parking revenue.

With the increased fees, the city's expected revenue is budgeted at $25,000, but Luepnitz noted that the figure could be closer to $23,000 if people choose to park elsewhere.

"We feel these are reasonable fees to park a car for that long of a time," Luepnitz said.

She would get an argument from the many islanders who purchased the bulk of 240 seasonal passes sold last year and will now feel an extra financial pinch with each trip off the island.

Gillespie said many of his fellow island residents purchase second or third cars to keep on the mainland for transportation on their numerous visits to the city limits for doctor and business appointments and other necessary visits.

"Everything that any person in this community does is connected to additional cost," he said. "Combine this with the costs of keeping an extra car at the airport and you have a very expensive visit."

In a Dec. 5 letter to city council, Gillespie suggested that city council should consider a business tactic used by area hotel/motels which offers an "Island discount."

Gillespie, however, said he has received no return correspondence from the city in regard to his letter or the petition, but that it won't deter island residents from opposing the changes.

"We are not residents of Bay Harbor, but Beaver Island, and hopefully the council will reconsider the increases," he said.

Warning: floating dock is frozen

Sheriff George T. Lasater advises that a floating dock has frozen into Deer Lake near East Jordan/Boyne City Rd. and Crozier Rd., approximately 50 feet off the shore, extending above the frozen water line by 18 inches causing a serious problem for any snowmobilers who might, in the future, cross Deer Lake.

The Sheriff's office will be establishing flags around the dock as a warning until the Department of Natural Resources can make arrangements to have the dock removed.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Stephen Guthrie
Chaplaincy at Northern Michigan Hospital

In Charlevoix and around the world, mankind has kept its annual tradition with Christmas for another year. But now January has become a reality, and as the decorations are boxed and stored and life begins to resume its familiar cadence, our memories, be they joyful or bittersweet, of this most wonderful season of fellowship and sharing will soon be packed away in the closets of our hearts. It's time to drag that fire hazard of a tree outside and start fretting over losing weight and paying bills. It's time to get back to real life.

But the return to real life need not be such a let down if, before we stow our memories of Christmas '98, we pause to consider just what it is about this season that makes it forever special. Christmas is unique among holidays because it brings out all that is good about us as people; a season set aside to celebrate the whole concept of good will toward mankind. It is a season during which nostalgia tugs at us to come home, to enjoy family, to keep alive traditions. It is a time to get along, to set aside grievances with one another, to openly display the warmth and sentiment we feel. It is a season well suited to remind ourselves that if we can live kindly toward one another for a day or a week for the sake of Christmas there is some small hope that we could choose peace on this earth.

As we pack away the memory of Christmas '98 it would do us well to remember that Christmas enters our lives through the heart and not the wallet. That which we hold dear about Christmas did not come to us courtesy of the retailing industry, but through the birth of a little child into difficult circumstances. During the season, when Christians exhorted revelers to keep Christ in Christmas and remember that Jesus is the reason for the season, they were trying to keep us focused on the easily overlooked fact that everything we hold dear in our hearts about Christmas, how good we feel when we express our love for our fellow humans, is an expression of the love taught to us by Jesus Christ. That message of love has endured for 2000 years, and, absent His model for the love we are to know and show, what we now call Christmas would be nothing more than the pagan celebration of the winter solstice with credit cards and Internet shopping. Christmas is what it is within us because of Jesus, not because of the shopping mall Santa.

What we love about Christmas is founded on the love of Jesus Christ. As you pack away your decorations, don't stow that love with the tree lights and the cardboard Santa. As you return to real life, carry that love with you and celebrate Christmas throughout the year, that in every season we might keep alive the message of peace on earth, good will toward men.

FAMILY

Charlevoix's New Year Baby is Brooke

The first baby born in 1999 at Charlevoix Area Hospital was a 7 pound, 12 ounce girl named Brooke Marie McWaters. Brooke was born at 1:30 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 2, 1999.

Brooke is already off to a good start in life. She has a loving older brother Darren, who is looking out for her even on her first day.

"He called me last night and said, "Kiss Brooke for me, Momma," said Phyllis McWaters, 22, of East Jordan. Phyllis is Brooke and Darren's mother. Darren Clark, 28, is the father.

Brooke's brother is two-and-one-half years old. When he saw his new little sister, he said, "We'll keep her."

Brooke was due Jan. 6, but "She decided to come a little early, which I didn't mind," Phyllis said. "She sleeps really good. I got seven hours sleep last night (Saturday)."

By Sunday afternoon, both baby and mother were well enough to consider heading home in the middle of a blizzard that hit northern Michigan.

Andrea and Scott Cone. Chynna, 3, Chandler, 1 and Madeline, three weeks.

Credit union gets new name in new year

David Leusink

The first days of January are bringing more than just a new year at the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union. A new name and new logo are making their debut as well.

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union is the new name of the organization, chartered in 1969 and providing cooperative savings and credit to nearly 7,000 members in northwest lower Michigan.

"Our new name better reflects the membership of the Credit Union," said CEO David Leusink. "In addition to the main branch in Charlevoix, the credit union operates branches in Petoskey, Boyne City, East Jordan, and Bellaire."

Leusink himself is a recent new addition to the credit union, having started as chief executive officer in October. He formerly headed the Kent County Employees Credit Union in Grand Rapids as President/CEO.

"The opportunity to serve entire communities such as Charlevoix is one of the things that attracted me to this beautiful area,'' he said. "Rather than primarily serving members of an employee group, Bay Winds Federal Credit Union has a community charter that allows us to serve a diverse population."

A native of Northwest Iowa, Leusink graduated from Iowa State University in 1985 with a bachelor of business administration degree and major in finance. He and his wife, Carolyn, reside in Charlevoix with their three sons, David, Andrew and Daniel.

Slipping and sliding down the street is great — when you're not driving a car

For cars, it's no fun to slip down the city roads with reckless abandon. But for sledders, it's a different story. Amanda Diaz (left) and Logan Niswander ditched their regular sleds in favor of the saucer-like sleds to spin and bump their way down the Grant Street Hill, otherwise known as Dodger's Hill. conditions were ideal for sledding, with 12 to 18 inches of new snow and no cars in sight. Great sledding will probably continue, since snow will continue to fall all this week. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

First blizzard is good time for first sail of 1999

Every new year comes with a set of firsts, from the first child born to the first snow storm and, of course, the first sail. Yes, the first sail. Tom Barnes (left) and Kevin Meier flew in the face of both the cold weather and blizzard forecasts to give the J-22 boat, High Maintenance, one last tour around Round Lake before taking her out of the water for the season. Of course, sailing was made more challenging with the foot of snow on board the boat. (Photos courtesy of Valerie Barnes)

Check ice on lake before going out on it

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to caution ice fishermen and snowmobilers to be absolutely certain the ice is safe enough and thick enough before venturing out onto it.

Most smaller lakes are starting to become completely iced over. Please take every precaution before going onto the ice.

Sheriff Lasater recommends anyone going out onto the ice should do the following:

- Wear a personal flotation device (PFD).
- Carry a flashlight or some other type of signaling device.
- Always notify family or friends of the time you are going out onto the ice, the time you will be returning and the exact location of where you could be located in the event of an emergency.

New high school classes will help students with state test

By Jamie MacMillan

In order to give students more flexibility in scheduling as well as to better prepare them for the Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP), the Charlevoix High School will add at least five new classes to its roster for the 1999-2000 school year.

During its last session, the local board of education approved the addition of the classes provided that student interest during the enrollment period fills the sections.

"The big thing is that when a student becomes a junior or a senior there aren't enough choices for them," assistant principal Keith Haske said.

All of the proposed classes will be one semester in length.

The prospective classes include:

— Jazz Band: Proposed is an after-school class open to students in grades 7-12 to study theories and play jazz music. Currently about 18 students meet daily at 7 a.m. to play jazz as an extra-curricular option. The class would be a one-quarter credit and a morning slot would remain open on an independent study basis for those students who are already booked after school with activities such as athletics.

— Mass Media: Students will study how the media influences their thinking so that they can be more responsible in their choices, attitudes and actions. The offering is a proposed follow-up to the school's speech classes. Content of the class will meet a school-to-work need. The course will be open for those in grades 10-12.

— Systems, Processes and Materials: The class will teach basic understanding of specific material for the Manufacturing Technology classes. Four areas of study will encompass the curriculum: electronics, plastics, machining/robotics and automation. This class will replace Introduction to Technology, which will then be offered at the middle school level.

— The United States Marketplace: Students will trace the evolution of the American marketplace from the preindustrial revolution through the modern "post-industrial" revolution. Texts for the class will include the school's current history and economics texts as well as subscriptions to Business Week and the Wall Street Journal. The course will open to those in grades 9-12.

— Past meets Present: Students will "trouble-shoot" current events around the globe. By analyzing a given situation, students will explore what led up to the event and how the event will impact the world as well as how it will impact that locale. Four magazines will be used as texts — Newsweek, Time, U.S. News and World Report and the Wall Street Journal. Taped television programs would also be used. The course will open to those in grades 9-12.

The final two suggested classes are hoped to increase students "MEAP-readiness," since the annual exams have been expanded to include a new social study section.

The Charlevoix Board of Education next meets at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 11 in the high school study hall.

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Charlevoix and Emmet counties held its annual Fund-Raising Raffle last month.

Many area businesses generously donated prizes for this years event, including a night's stay for two at the Perry Davis Hotel with a full breakfast in the morning. Volunteer Mary Hill donated a "Limited Edition" collector's doll with hand-crafted clothes, and volunteer Bill Bridge donated a handcrafted wooden doll cradle, toy train, and treescape. Preceding the raffle, RSVP volunteers enjoyed their annual Christmas Potluck. They send a special thank you to everyone who participated in making this annual event such a great success. The funds raised will directly support volunteer services throughout the year.

RSVP is a nonprofit organization of dedicated volunteers, all 55 years and older, who commit time and energy to many nonprofit and public agencies in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. If you are interested in becoming a volunteer or learning more about the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program, call the RSVP office in Petoskey at 347-5877.

Graham said with so many tax dollars going into this project, interviews with people who will be doing the work would have been more appropriate.

"Nobody ever talked to me about the credentials of Graham Construction," he said. "We deserve some due diligence."

The board approved hiring Petrie in a 4-2 vote, with commissioners Shirley Roloff and Joan Blanchard dissenting.

Roloff said she was unable to grant the contract to anyone given the circumstances and suggested tabling the matter until the board's next meeting.

Phil Johnson, chairman of the board, explained his vote afterward by saying that the county is paying Landmark and Harrison to oversee the project and that their recommendation should be accepted.

The county board next meets at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan 13.

Community forum planned to return to school facility project

By Jamie MacMillan

They may have only been baby steps, but the Charlevoix Board of Education set in motion the first stages of developing a facility project plan Monday night during the board's monthly meeting.

The board is looking to team with the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and sponsor a community forum, similar in tenor and nature, to the Venetian Community Forum that was staged after a fireworks accident forced organizers to tinker with the festival format.

"We're not looking to brainstorm the perfect idea," superintendent John Sturock said. "We just want to facilitate ideas, gather information and find out where the community is headed."

The board, however, has been down this road before and another effort to gauge the community's heartbeat might not be met with open arms, some board members said.

"You wonder if this will elicit apathy and negativism right off the bat," Allen Telgenhof, president of the school board, said.

The board did seem to favor the forum idea over conducting another survey or forming more committees to tackle the issue.

"Is that a valuable tool?" board member Mike MacMillan questioned. "We would probably have to do what they recommend or else."

Monday's discussion veered off into a more philosophical debate on whether it's the role of the board to invent a facility plan or if it should be community members telling the board in what direction to head.

"It's more credible if it comes from the community rather than the seven of us hashing something out, and trying to be leaders," Telgenhof said. "That's what we did last time and it failed."

It was the general feeling of the board that a window of opportunity has been opened in regard to

Mount McSnowpile

At first glance, it appears that Mt. McSauba was relocated to the foot of Clinton Street. Actually, the city snow plows have been piling up snow in that location as they go through the process of removing snow from city streets. Snow has been falling daily, accompanied by cold temperatures. During this week, temperatures are expected to dip well below the zero mark. A relative heat wave is expected by the weekend, with temperatures climbing all the way up to the 30 degree level. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Fund continues to help Venetian fireworks explosion victims

By Laurie Lounsbury

It's been almost two years since the tragic fireworks explosion at the 1997 Venetian Festival killed one person and injured many others.

The accident is long over, but the needs of the families who were affected by the explosion continue. And quietly, without fanfare or hoopla, the people of this community have been doing their best to care for those people.

Shortly after the fireworks explosion, a group of people started the Venetian Fireworks Victims Fund. The fund was designed to take care of immediate needs for the victims. In an amazingly short amount of time, $271,000 was raised from over 500 donors.

It's an amount that staggers Bob Tambellini, executive director of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

"Our little community has responded incredibly to the needs of the families of the fireworks victims," he said, adding that he's never known of that much money being raised in such a short time for anyone in the state of Michigan.

The fund has been managed by Charlevoix County Community Foundation, which has distributed nearly $200,000 to the victims. Not included in the fund are the thousands of hours of labor and business products that have been donated to the families hurt by the explosion.

Tambellini said it would probably be reasonable to estimate that the total amount donated to the victims, including services and equipment from businesses, along with cash donations, is close to $500,000.

"The goal of the fund was to pay for immediate needs for the families where there wasn't coverage," Tambellini said.

The money has been used to pay for unreimbursed portions of medical bills, prescriptions, rehabilitation, physical therapy, home adaptations for handicapped needs, mortgage payments, utility payments, health care, counseling, and travel and lodging for medical treatment out of the area. A $2,000 grant was awarded to the schools for emergency response training for staff. Police and fire department workers also took part in the emergency response training.

initiating a facility plan. The community has welcomed the new superintendent with open arms and neighboring communities like Boyne Falls, Boyne City and Petoskey have passed school millages in recent months. Sturock noted that in the four months he has been on the job, the first topic people want to discuss with him is the facility issue.

"People are expecting something to be done," he said. "We just need to figure out how to get back to it."

To that end, board member Barney Way will meet this month with the chamber of commerce executive committee to discuss the possibility of a forum and inquire about the availability of Tom Kern, National Cherry Festival executive director, who also spearheaded the Venetian Community Forum.

"At least it's a start," Dennis Halverson said.

In other news, Sturock gave an update on this summer's asbestos abatement and roof repair projects.

The district is planning to repair the roof at the high school as well as replace the ceiling tiles and remove the asbestos from the building's west side.

After meeting with architects, Sturock estimated the cost of the project at $817,300. Money for the project will come out of the school's sinking fund, an account funded by a six year, one mill tax voters approved in June of 1997.

Sturock noted that the fund may not have enough money in it to cover all the costs up front, but that the school could pull from its maintenance budget to cover any shortfalls.

In the summer of 2000, the district will do asbestos abatement on the building's east side, including the gymnasium and library, at an estimated cost of $340,000, Sturock said.

The board also discussed the viability of hiring a construction manager to oversee the project. Sturock said doing so would cost an additional $20,000, but that a manager could better advertise the project and consequently drive the bid prices lower.

The school board wants the project completed before the 1999-2000 school year begins, and a manager might be able to guide the project more competently to ensure it's complete by the time school starts.

"This is a major priority and the community will be watching this," Scott Boss said. "They will want to see if we can do this project on time and if we can do it under budget."

Way suggested that if the board hires a manager, penalty and bonus clauses should be included in the contract as incentives to complete the project on time.

During administrator comments, high school principal Gary Grundman informed the board that this spring's prom will be at the Grand Traverse Resort. The prom location must be within 45 miles of the City of Charlevoix. Grundman said the distance from Charlevoix to the resort has been measured at 42.5 miles.

The board next meets at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 8 in the high school study hall.

Venetian fund continues to help victims and their families

It's been a challenge for Tambellini, the foundation and volunteers to delicately ascertain the victims' needs.

"Some people are sensitive about asking for help," Tambellini said. "They've never had to ask for anything before. This has been so traumatic for families, and it's all so new to them, they're hesitant to ask for help."

Other families, or family representatives, don't mind calling at all to learn what resources might be available.

So far, no one has tried to take advantage of the fund. Attorneys who represent some of the injured families have called on behalf of their clients to seek funds for some of their basic needs. When Tambellini suggested the families contact him directly so they wouldn't have to pay additional legal fees, the attorneys all said they weren't billing their clients for time spent getting them financial help.

"We try to verify requests without being intrusive to the families," Tambellini said.

The community foundation and the volunteer committee that works on distributions for the victims' fund find themselves busier than they originally anticipated.

"This has been a lot bigger than we thought it would be," Tambellini said of both the fund and the process of managing and distributing the money. "The community response, the needs, our involvement with the families and representatives, it's all bigger than we thought. This accident has totally changed the lives of these people.

"We will continue to make disbursements as needed," Tambellini added. "There are probably a lot of future needs out there that people aren't even aware of, like future educational costs and long term mental health care. There might be delayed trauma for people that is triggered five years from now."

Tribal property in Eveline Township is not for a casino

A new, black-topped road runs through the 160 acres of property owned by the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians in Eveline Township. The property provides rolling vistas of farmland. The tribe plans to use the land for individual home sites for tribe members and for a new community center. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

By Laurie Lounsbury

One-hundred and sixty acres of rolling farmland off Ranney Road in Eveline Township will soon become a housing development with 37 lots to accommodate single family homes.

What it won't become, according to Bob Kewaygoshkum, is a tribal casino. Kewaygoshkum works in the planning and development department for the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians, which owns the 160 acres of land in Eveline Township.

"We plan to build a new community center there eventually, but no casinos, no bingo," Kewaygoshkum said. "The land is for tribal members to build homes on."

The property may also soon become tax exempt if it is accepted into the United States federal land trust. The area director of the Minneapolis Area of the Bureau of Indian Affairs announced that the property will receive federal trust status for the benefit of the Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians.

Nancy Sherman, treasurer for Eveline Township, said that currently the tribe pays about $2,300 in property taxes. Of the five parcels of land that make up the 160 acres, some parcels have already received federal trust status and are off the county tax rolls.

Kewaygoshkum said the tribe has no intentions of trying to short the county of its tax money.

"When the land goes off the tax roll, the county can apply for the 2 percent funding the tribe pays from casino profits," Kewaygoshkum said. "We try not to hurt the communities we're in."

Sherman noted that tribal representatives have been attending the township meetings and have expressed a desire to contribute to the township for road improvements, fire and ambulance protection.

The tribe has already paid a portion of the cost to blacktop Ranney Road.

The tribal community center is in the early planning stages, and construction could start this summer or fall. A few homes have already been built on the property.

Eliminate the need for snow days — hold school in the summer

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

We're in the second of week of January and the school district has already used up its entire supply of snow days.

Is this ludicrous, or what?

We live in white-out country, the land of sub-zero temperatures, the place where spring arrives in early June, the place where ice fishing holes still can be found in May, and as of Jan. 7, we used up all our snow days.

If we have a terrible blizzard and schools are forced to close, it means kids will still be going to school while the pagans are celebrating thc summer solstice.

School days in June are throwaway days as it is. Classes take hikes to the beach, collect Petoskey stones and sea shells and call it a science field trip, count the number of people swimming at Depot Beach and call it math class, write "Johnny loves Mary" with a stick in the wet sand and call it writing class — it's not exactly high-powered learning.

The problem boils down to two factors: one is that the state has determined every school district in the state should get the same number of snow days (does that mean Ironwood and Battle Creek get the same amount of snowfall?), and that Michigan tourism will suffer mightily if kids go back to school before Labor Day weekend.

I've always been opposed to the concept of starting school after Labor Day weekend. Whoever thought up that rule obviously doesn't have children and probably owns a restaurant or marina.

Kids are usually bored silly by the last two weeks of August. Tourism always drops off significantly for the last two weeks in August. The incidence of sibling abuse increases dramatically during the last two weeks of August.

"Gimme that remote control!"

"No, I had it first!"

"I don't care! It's my turn!"

(Whacking, pinching and hair-pulling ensues)

Kids want to spend the last two weeks of August getting organized, doing their back-to-school shopping, and calling their friends to see what they're wearing on the first day of school. Parents plan family vacations with the intent of being back home for the last two weeks of August.

But Michigan resort business owners claim they need their summer help (high school and college students) to stay through Labor Day weekend or their businesses suffer.

I can't believe that restaurants, hotels, motels and marinas would all crumble and go bankrupt if kids started school the week before Labor Day. I imagine the businesses would manage to muddle through the weekend, even if they were short-staffed,

The second issue is the state's determination that two snow days are sufficient for every school district in the state. Two snow days are probably adequate in Lansing, where this policy was created, but it's generally inadequate north of the 45th parallel.

Snow days should be allotted in a similar fashion to school foundation grants. Some districts need more money than others — and some districts need more snow days than others.

I think the state should have a general allotment of three snow days per district. Then they should take a snow day away from the southernmost districts and give them to the schools in the snowbelts of northern Michigan.

A friend of mine may have had the best solution — have everyone except college kids go to school in June, July and August, and be out of school in January, February and March. School buses would never get stuck in snow drifts in July, kids would never have to wait for the bus or walk home from the bus stop in the dark, and the need for snow days would be eliminated.

Parents who work in tourist-related jobs wouldn't have to pay for day care during the summer, and during the winter they could spend quality time with their young ones during the off-season.

Daylight in the summer days lasts twice as long as in the winter, so kids could go to school and still have tons of time to play outside after their homework is done.

Think of it — this could also solve the problem of childhood obesity that we seem to have in this country. When kids are in school during the short winter days, they come home, do homework, and then usually play computer games or watch TV. It's too cold and dark to go outside and play.

Going to school in the summer would allow them plenty of daylight hours to get their work done and also go outside to play.

And in the winter, they could spend their daylight hours skiing or snowboarding.

Wow. That means Michigan could be the state to produce the next generation of Olympians.

Best of all, those of us who work all year long won't have to be so intensely jealous of teachers, who currently get the entire summer off.

It makes perfect sense to me.

School may extend well into June because of snow days

By Jamie MacMillan

> "Safety will always come first... it is just not worth a situation where we put our kids in jeopardy."
> — Superintendent John Sturock, saying he won't let the lack of state allowed snow days influence his decision to close school in bad weather.

The recent surge of winter weather might extend the local school district calendar past the midpoint of June.

Mother Nature pounded the area last week with mounds of snow, gale force winds and freezing temperatures, forcing most of the area schools, Charlevoix included, to suspend classes.

Last week was to be the first week of classes after a 12-day holiday break, but students and staff found their free time extended with the cancellation of classes on Monday, Jan. 4 and Thursday, Jan. 7.

The upshot of the free days, though, is that the district has already utilized its two "act of God days" provided by the state.

With the bulk of the season still looming, any other cancellations would require the school to tack on additional days, most likely at the end of the school year.

John Sturock, superintendent of schools, said the district can make up for lost days anywhere within the school calendar, but that adding days on to the end of the school year is the easiest and most natural method.

Doing that, however, would extend an already late dismissal date for summer vacation.

"It's already the latest we've gotten out for the summer," elementary school principal Richard Swenor said of summer dismissal. "Usually we're out by the first week of June.".

Due to the late Labor Day holiday last September, school will not recess for the summer until Tuesday, June 15. Another stretch like last week and school could extend for the remainder of that week.

"Safety will always come first," Sturock said. He will not let the lack of "act of God days" influence his decision about closing school during the next blizzard. "Against adding a day or two in June, it is just not worth a situation where we put our kids in jeopardy."

Adding more school days won't cost the district more money. Teachers are required by contract to teach on the days made up for snow days at no extra pay.

As recently as 10 years ago, schools had an unlimited amount of free days. State legislators banned the whole concept earlier this decade before a compromise of two "act of God days" was reached, Sturock said.

Last week, school was called off Monday not so much because of existing conditions, but because of weather forecasts which predicted the day's storm to worsen as the day went along.

When Charlevoix canceled its classes, shortly before 6 a.m., most other area school districts had already canceled classes, Sturock said.

On Thursday, winds created unmanageable drifts on some of the back roads. Combined with low visibility and a wind chill factor plummeting below zero, Charlevoix schools were canceled at 5:30 a.m., Sturock said.

"We didn't want any of our students standing out in the cold waiting for a bus that got stuck."

In each instance last week, classes were called off before any of the school buses began their routes.

The decision to cancel classes is both tough and subjective. Hopefully the weather will cooperate and school can continue without missing a beat, although sled dogs might be needed.

Arts council receives grant money

The Crooked Tree Arts Council of Petoskey celebrated a very merry holiday after receiving a $145,000 grant from the Frey Foundation.

Of the total amount received, $100,000 is designated to help restore and renovate the Virginia M. McCune Arts Center in downtown Petoskey. Built in 1890, the former Methodist Church has been the home of the Crooked Tree Arts Council since 1981.

"The council has shown its deep commitment to preserving and enhancing northern Michigan's cultural heritage," said Milton W. Rohwer, president of the Frey Foundation. "We share in that commitment and vision of enhancing and maintaining the Virginia M. McCune Arts Center for not only the artistic patrons, but for every resident and visitor to northern Michigan."

In addition, a three year, $45,000 grant was awarded to the council to expand its active Docent Program. Over 3,000 school children and their teachers annually visit the gallery and participate in a hands-on visual arts program. In September, the council hired Jim Beckering to coordinate the Docent Program on a full time basis.

"This funding has allowed us to obtain the artistic tools needed to develop a first class art program and is really taking the arts center to the next level of programming," Beckering said.

The Frey Foundation, based in Grand Rapids, is one of Michigan's largest family foundations. Grants are provided primarily to nonprofit organizations in western lower Michigan for projects to enhance children's development, protect natural resources, promote the arts and expand philanthropic and civic action.

The Frey Foundation was established in 1974 by the late Edward and Frances Frey. Mr. Frey was longtime chief executive officer of Union Bank (now First Chicago/NBD) and founded Foremost Insurance Company in Grand Rapids. Trustees of the Frey Foundation are David G. Frey, Edward J. Frey Jr., John M. Frey and Mary Caroline (Twink) Frey.

Couple shares spiritual renewal at St. Mary's Church

Starting Jan. 24, for three consecutive nights, St. Mary's Parish in Charlevoix will have the pleasure of having Brian and Kathryn Christian join them for evenings of prayer, healing, music, and sharing the Word of God. These three evenings will be a time for deep spiritual renewal. Brian and Kathryn are the founders of "On Earth as in Heaven" ministries. They travel to parishes throughout Northern Michigan offering their message of Christ's healing love for all of us.

Brian started his ministry in some very different places. He has ministered in Alaska, in the "God in the Wilderness" seminars and retreats in the northwest United States and in Canada. He has now turned to sharing his stories in churches, with a theme of total abandonment to God. Brian has committed his life to prayer and full time ministry to God's people.

Brian's wife, Kathryn, provides musical accompaniment during the "Becoming Christ" services.

Kathryn has a Master's degree in Theology with an emphasis in pastoral care and counseling as well as a B.A. in religion. Her life of prayer is expressed through her music which is based on sacred scripture, saints of the church and women mystics.

Brian and Kathryn will be at St. Mary's to lead "Becoming Christ" services on Jan. 24, 25 and 26. All services will begin at 7 p.m. and conclude with a laying on of hands for those who request this. The services will last for approximately one hour and will be held in the church. There is a different topic for each evening. The topic for the first night is "Love-the Keys to the Kingdom"; the topic for the second night is "Humility-Walking with God"; and the topic for the third night is "Obedience: the Joy of Living in God's Will." Brian and Kathryn's teaching and healing ministry centers on prayer, faith, praise, forgiveness, conversion, and letting go of the past and letting God take control of our lives.

St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix is located on Bridge Street. Everyone is invited to come share in this wonderful ministry. If you should have any questions, please feel free to contact Parry Furtaw, pastoral Minister/Coordinator of Youth Ministry, at 547-6438 or 547-2242.

Community churches host unity service

A Community Service of Christian Unity will be at 6 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17 at the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church on M-66. The service is sponsored by the Ministerial Association and will include both clergy and lay participation from a number of local churches. The overall theme of the service is taken from the Book of Revelation: "God will dwell with them... they will be God's people." (Rev. 21: 1-7)

A Service of Christian Unity is sponsored each year by the Ministerial Association as a time of praise and prayer when the common life in Christ is recognized. While drawing on the diverse worship patterns of the various churches, the basic unity of brothers and sisters in the one body of Jesus Christ is celebrated.

Lay involvement in this year's service through participation in the Praise Band and Youth Choir is encouraged. Those who play an instrument are invited to join the band for this special service. Any interested instrumentalists should call Steve Stargardt at 547-2045. Middle and high school students are invited to participate in the Youth Choir, which will rehearse at 5 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17 at the Assembly of God Church. Students who wish to be involved can call Joe Johnston at 547-6430, Mark Hofstra at 547-9482 or Cara Hochhalter at 547-9122.

The Christian Unity Service will be followed by a time of fellowship and light refreshments in the Fellowship Hall.

Healthshare Group receives honors for improvement

Parent company of Boulder Park Terrace, Northern Michigan Hospital takes the lead in quality care

The Healthshare Group was recently recognized among the top businesses in Michigan that demonstrate a commitment to continuous quality improvement.

Healthshare Group is the parent company of Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey, Boulder Park Terrace Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Charlevoix, Hospice of Little Traverse Bay, LifeLink Emergency Medical Services, the Living Room Adult Day Care, the Northern Michigan Hospital/Burns Clinic Foundation, VitalCare home care and nursing services, and three regional dialysis centers.

Healthshare Group staff, physicians and volunteers were honored with the Navigator Recognition by the Michigan Quality Council at the Michigan Quality Leadership Award banquet in mid-November.

The Navigator Recognition, bestowed to four honorees, was achieved by completing a self-assessment using seven categories. By completing the self-assessment, Healthshare Group compared itself to other national companies' "Best Practices" in seven categories: leadership, strategic planning, information and analysis, human resource management, process management, customer and stakeholder satisfaction, and results.

"Two years ago, we incorporated the use of these criteria into our strategic business plan," said Jeffrey T. Wendling, President/CEO of Northern Michigan Hospital and Healthshare Group. "The goal was to use the feedback to improve our system and the care we provide our patients, not win the award. This recognition shows that we are charting a course toward quality - and that's an achievement that every employee, physician and volunteer within our organization should be proud of."

Earlier this year, under the leadership of Organizational Development Director Diane Banks, the Healthshare Group completed a self assessment and submitted an award application to the Michigan Quality Council.

"We learned a tremendous amount through the self-assessment process," Banks said. "We have more work to do. Our preliminary feedback report indicates that we have a sound start, but need to focus on process management and performance results. That's what this assessment is meant to do — uncover where you are doing well, and identify those areas that need further concentration."

The Michigan Quality Council was created in 1993 by business leaders and is supported by Gov. John Engler to promote total quality management practices in businesses, educational institutions and organizations throughout Michigan. One of the council's primary functions is to oversee the Michigan Quality Leadership Award given each November to recognize organizations for outstanding quality management.

Healthshare Group representatives Diane Banks of organizational development and vice president Jev Conover accept the Navigator Recognition from the Michigan Quality Council, which recognized the parent company of Northern Michigan Hospital for outstanding quality initiatives.

Community foundation hits $1 million mark in grants

One million dollars can make a real impact in a community of just 23,000. It can improve parks and playgrounds, spearhead economic development efforts, send deserving students to college, preserve and protect natural resources, promote the arts, enhance educational programs, and make life better in countless ways.

Thanks to the generosity of many local people and a rapidly growing local community foundation, charitable grants totaling $1 million have done these things and more in Charlevoix County.

When trustees of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation tallied up their most recent round of grants at the end of 1998, they realized the foundation had passed a significant milestone in its six year history. 1998 grants topped $450,000 — and that figure pushed the foundation's total grant making to $1.1 million since its inception.

"We're so pleased and proud to have been able to do so much in so short a time," said Bill Lorne, East Jordan resident and president of the community foundation. "Few community foundations in the country have met such an ambitious goal this quickly. It's a real credit to the vision, commitment and essential goodness of the people who live in Charlevoix County."

The community foundation was started in 1992 by a group of civic leaders who wanted to establish a permanent source of charitable revenue to serve Charlevoix County's needs now, and well into the future. Like more than 550 such organizations across the country, the local community foundation accepts and manages donations, and makes grants to support a variety of worthwhile programs focusing on the arts, education; the environment, human services, civic improvement and economic development.

A volunteer board of trustees, made up of representatives from throughout the county, oversees the organization; and a youth advisory group, with representatives from each of the county's high schools, encourages the involvement of young people in civic action, and helps guide grant-making decisions related to children and families.

At year end, the community foundation held 74 different funds whose combined assets totaled just over $6 million. Some funds are designated for a specific purpose — such as historical preservation, support of a local charity, or scholarship — while others are open-ended and can be used to support emerging needs. All funds, regardless of their purpose, are permanent and only a portion of their earned income is used for grant-making. In this way, the community foundation serves as a lasting source of philanthropic dollars, even as the area's population and its needs may change.

Early and sustaining financial support from the Frey and Malpass foundations helped launch the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and underwrite operating expenses, while a challenge grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation contributed to the local foundation's substantial youth fund. In 1998, more than 450 individuals, businesses and organizations also made donations to the foundation.

In the past few years, community foundations have become the fastest growing form of philanthropy in the country. The growth is due, in part, to a renewed interest in addressing needs, locally, an increase in personal wealth, and to the flexibility community foundations offer to donors, who may choose how they want their charitable gifts used. To spur support of community foundations, the State of Michigan offers favorable tax treatment. Donations to the local community foundation are fully tax-deductible and qualify for a special Michigan Income Tax credit as well.

For more information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, or to learn about the foundation's grant-making activities, call 536-2440 or write the foundation, P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan 49727.

Organizations start new year with help from foundation

Several of this area's nonprofit organizations are ringing in the new year with good financial news. The Charlevoix County Community Foundation announced it will help fund their programs and projects with grants totaling $113,685. That figure brings the community foundation's grant-making total to just over $1 million since it was established six years ago.

Programs chosen for community foundation assistance and the amount of their grants are:

From the foundation's Unrestricted Fund:

- Crooked Tree Arts Council, $1,500 to help fund a cultural plan for the community.
- Citizens Dispute Resolution, $1,000 to support the organization's conflict resolution programs.
- Northwest Michigan Habitat for Humanity, $2,400 to purchase power tools used by volunteers in the construction of new homes for deserving families in this area.
- Charlevoix Senior Center $1,000, toward a music therapy and educational program.
- American Red Cross, $1,000 for technology and communications equipment.
- Catholic Human Services, $2,000 to support a senior-to-senior companion program.

From the East Jordan Enrichment Fund:

Rayders romp past Ramblers

Charlevoix scored the game's first seven points and never looked back en route to a 68-50 win last Friday night over their rival across the lake, Boyne City.

Matt McClellan paced the Rayders with 21 points and seven steals as Charlevoix snapped a nine game losing streak to their county rival.

The last Rayder win over Boyne City was almost five years ago when the Rayders topped the Ramblers, 64-57, in the first round of the 1994 district tournament.

Charlevoix dominated the game's first 12 minutes, steadily building their lead from seven to 12 to 18 before peaking with a 22-point advantage midway through the second quarter.

The Rayders closed the first quarter on an 8-0 run for a 17-5 advantage at the first quarter break. Sean Stockman scored six for the Rayders during that stretch.

The Rayders began the second quarter with a 14-4 run to reach its biggest lead of the game, 31-9.

The Ramblers, however, did not fold and outscored Charlevoix 16-4 to slice the margin to 35-25 at intermission. Jeremy Grice jump-started the Ramblers by drilling three treys during that run.

The Ramblers scored the first bucket of the second half, cutting the Rayders' lead to eight points, but it was as close as Boyne City would get. Charlevoix outscored the Ramblers, 18-15, in the third quarter, and 15-10 in the final stanza. Their lead was never threatened down the stretch.

"It was a real spurt kind of game with both teams going back and forth," Rayders' coach Keith Haske said. "I think our pressure defense caused them problems early in the game and early in the second half."

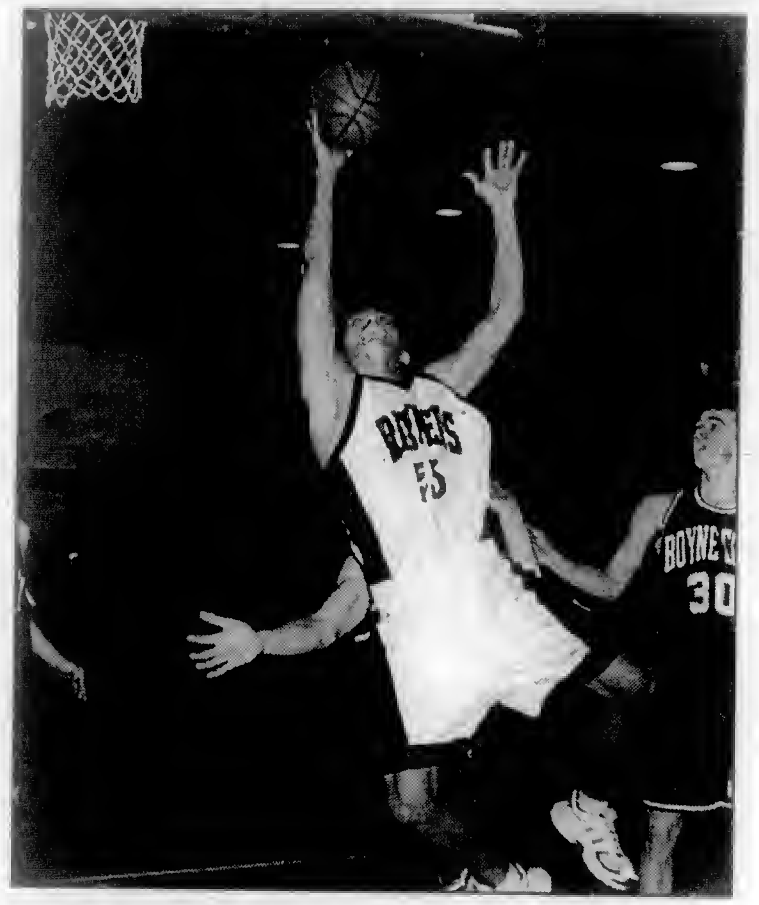
Justin Thorp added 13 points and grabbed 13 rebounds; Jim Kanine scored nine and dished out nine assists; Matt Dennis grabbed nine rebounds and swiped four steals; and Stockman scored 10.

Earlier in the week, the Rayders scored five players in double figures in a 74-57 win over Roscommon. Dennis led the charge with 15 points. Adam Wood, Thorp, McClellan and Kanine each added 10.

With the wins, the Rayders remain unblemished on the young season with a 5-0 record as they head into one the season's most important weeks. Charlevoix plays back-to-back to games against league foes who, like Charlevoix, boast perfect 5-0 records.

The team hosted Elk Rapids last night, Tuesday, but results were incomplete at press time. The Rayders then travel to Kalkaska on Friday, Jan 15. In league play, Elk Rapids is 3-0 while Charlevoix and Kalkaska are 2-0. Remarkably, none of the other four teams in the league have a conference win, compiling an 0-8 record in early season league games.

"It's easier to coach when the big games come around because the kids are that much more focused," Haske said. "We're geared up to play, as long as we continue to play good defense I like our chances."



Matt McClellan leaps to the hoop for two of his 21 points.

Volleyball team reaches semifinals

Compiling an even 5-5 record, the Charlevoix varsity volleyball team earned third place honors at the Petoskey Invitational last Saturday afternoon.

In the 10-team tournament, the Rayders were pitted against Sault Ste. Marie, Kalkaska, Gaylord and Cedarville in round robin pool play.

The Rayders swept two games from the Sault, 16-14, 15-9 before splitting games with Kalkaska, 7-15, 15-8, and Gaylord, 15-8, 15-17. Despite being swept by Cedarville, 14-16, 9-15, the club still finished pool play in second place and advanced into the semi finals.

Petoskey and Inland Lakes advanced out of the other pool which also included Harbor Springs, Grayling and St. Ignace.

In the semis, Charlevoix fell to Petoskey, 5-15, 8-15. In the third place game, the Rayders beat Inland Lakes, 15-5, 7-15, 15-4. The win over the Bulldogs was especially sweet since they eliminated Charlevoix in last year's district tournament.

Petoskey won the tournament with a three set win over Cedarville in the finals.

Since it was Charlevoix's first live action since before the holiday break, coach Brenda Bryan was surprisingly pleased with her team's performance.

"I was really impressed with my team," she said. "We worked hard on our defense in practice and we showed a lot of improvement during the games."

The star of the day went to senior Amanda Webb who was named to the all-tournament team. She was the team's top setter, and Bryan said she excelled on defense as well as controlling the flow of the game for Charlevoix.

The team improved its overall record to 10-11 and evened its league mark at 1-1 with a win Monday night over Traverse City-St. Francis.

The team's home contest against Boyne City, postponed last week due to bad weather, will be rescheduled for Monday, Feb. 22, athletic director Keith Haske said.

High school ski season begins with prime snow conditions

At long last, the high school ski season began last week with the 12-team Harbor-Petoskey Invitational at the Boyne Highlands ski resort. Racers hit the slopes last week amid snow flurries and a fresh batch of snow on the Highlands' South Challenger slalom course and North Challenger giant slalom course.

Traverse City Central dominated the meet, winning both the boys' and girls' events handily.

In the girls' event, Central finished with 46 points while Petoskey, 141, and Harbor Springs, 152, rounded out the top three. In the boys' event, Central had 44 points while Traverse City West earned 121 and Petoskey, with 142, completed the top three.

Charlevoix, meanwhile, had middle-of-the-pack finishes with the girls' squad placing seventh with 203 points and the boys finishing in eighth with 231.

Highlighting the day for the Rayders was a pair of top 10 finishes in the slalom event. Tiffany Fisher placed seventh in the girls' slalom while Todd Freidinger finished 10th in the boys' slalom. Also of note was freshman Roscoe Serrels' slalom run which placed him right behind his teammate in 11th place, finishing one-one hundredth of a second behind Freidinger.

Also for Charlevoix in the girls' event was Fisher, 17th GS; Lexi Wilson, 17th slalom, 31st GS; Karlee Barnard, 21st slalom, 38th GS; Kelly Kusina, 31st slalom, 41st GS; Kristen Brendtro, 35th slalom, 44th GS; and Marie Serrels, 52nd slalom, 53rd GS.

In the boys' competition, other Charlevoix results were Freidinger, 26th GS; Serrels, 46th GS; Steve Pirie, 20th slalom, 29th GS; Kyle Louiselle, 39th slalom, 54th GS; and Joel Trubilowicz, 49th slalom, 50th GS.

The Rayders' season continued Monday afternoon in a quad-meet at Boyne Mountain.

In the boys' meet, Petoskey took top honors, and Harbor Springs won the girls' meet. Individual results weren't known at press time.

The Rayder ski season continues with two meets this week. They will ski in the first league match of the season at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 14 at Boyne Mountain against Boyne City, Elk Rapids and East Jordan.

They will travel to Crystal Mountain for a 5 p.m. ski meet against Manistee Friday, Jan. 15.

Above, left: Tiffany Fisher glides through a slalom gate en route to a seventh place slalom finish in last week's opening ski meet at Boyne Highlands. Fisher also competed in the giant slalom finishing in 17th place. The Charlevoix girls' team placed seventh in the 13-team field.

Charlevoix Community Education classes begin the end of January

Why let Old Man Winter keep you at home stuck in front of the TV? Get involved in Charlevoix Community Education classes, which start the end of January. On six Mondays, talented local artisan, Glenda Conlan, will teach "Stained Glass" and all skill levels are welcome.

Another way to make Monday exciting is by going dancing. Ballroom dancing, that is. Take your sweetie to the Charlevoix Middle School, starting Jan. 18 and learn or relearn the waltz, fox trot, jitter bug, and maybe the tango, polka or cha cha. On Friday, Feb. 12, everyone is invited to the Charlevoix Elementary School for a ballroom dance. Instructor, Marie Volovsek, will provide a quick refresher class from 8:30-9 p.m. Then, from 9-11 p.m., you and your special someone can dance, dance, dance!

John Dodkoch, Certified Financial Planner, who has taught classes at the University of Alaska as well as many classes in Charlevoix, will instruct a two-week class beginning Tuesday, Jan. 26, called, "ABCs of Investment Clubs." You hear about these clubs on TV and in best selling books. Find out how they are organized and operate. Thursdays, starting March 2, (and just before that critical April 15 deadline) he will teach a two-week class called, "Maximizing IRA Opportunities." This is a wonderful chance to gain timely information in a risk-free, economical manner.

What better way to use winter than completing a project? Tim Whippo, local contractor, has agreed to teach "Do-it-yourself Home Maintenance and Repair." From fixing a faucet to installing a heating system to building your home, this class will help with projects, large or small, that you can do.

On March 9, Sandy Miller, a certified hypnotherapist, I.M.D.H.A. will discuss what hypnosis is and is not. Many of us have considered exploring this technique, here is a way to find out what it's all about.

Wednesdays, Judy Clock, expert seamstress with a patient enthusiasm for helping others, will teach "Basic Sewing" for seven weeks — all skill levels welcome. You may use this class to learn to sew or as an energizer to enable you to complete or get help with a sewing project you've started.

Also on Wednesdays, there will be an opportunity to learn Spanish from a native speaker when Jisell Lopez teaches "Conversational Spanish," an introductory class for beginners but also useful to those who wish to refresh their Spanish language skills. Her fall course was so successful that it will be continued with an "Intermediate Conversational Spanish" class.

Feb. 24, Suzanne Dalton, vivacious Master Gardener and nationally known artist, will present a delightful slide show of her summer bulb garden in bloom. This class, "Designing with Summer Bulbs," highlights imaginative uses and unusual combinations of lilies, English irises, glads, and alliums.

Jim Jinsky has been lured out of retirement to lead his very popular "Woodworking" class in the middle school wood shop.

Experienced instructor, Evelyn Wujcik, is providing "Beginning Band for Adults," on Thursdays, beginning Jan. 28. This is for people who always wanted to play a band instrument or for those who played at one time and would like to play again. Those who enrolled in her fall course or new members who kept up their instrumental skills will continue in "Intermediate Band for Adults."

Call the Charlevoix High School at 547-3222, from now until Jan. 22 to enroll. Call Marlynn Hughes, Community Education Director, at 547-3161 or 536-2113 for late enrollment, more information, or if you are interested in teaching or taking a class not listed.

The "Beast" plow could handle even the worst of winters

Hometown Chronicles

By Marilyn Boss

As I sit here, looking out the window at the continuously falling snow, I wonder if we are having a repeat of the winter 40 years ago, in 1958 and '59. It started much the same way, and snowed every day until spring.

I vividly recall the big old army truck, owned by Don Meggison, which he used for plowing and wrecker work. He called it the "Beast," and it truly did many jobs that nobody else in town could do. The Grant Street hill, going down to the Michigan beach, had about seven feet of solid snow on it, and Don was called upon to open it up. It was solid, wind-blown hard snow. Don and his good friend, Bob Withers, would go down the hill, hitting the snow just as hard as they could, and it would just about throw them out of the cab, as they hit and stopped so abruptly. They threw snow 30 feet into the air. Dale and I were at the top of the hill, taking movies of the whole ordeal. Leo Allard, the street superintendent, had his big 1936 five-ton Federal truck with a plow on it. He parked in the middle of the street so Don could hook a cable from his wrecker winch on the rear of his truck to the rear of Leo's truck. This enabled Don to get himself out of the snow, and then he could back up to the top of the hill and hit it again. After many trips, going down hill wide open, he was able to get a hole punched through to the fish hatchery at the foot of the hill. The spectators enjoyed the whole operation, and had much admiration for the work they did. Ed and Loretta Swanson lived in the city-owned brick pump house at the foot of Palmer Street. Loretta's mother, Mrs. Guy Stutzman, stayed overnight with them as she couldn't get out to her home in the country. Dale remembers seeing Ed, using a snow shovel, cutting at least nine steps in the hardened snow so his mother-in-law could get from Palmer Street to the corner of Grant Street, which Don had just opened up.

In those days, Don was the man you got to help when you needed cars pulled out of ditches, trees pulled down that had fallen in precarious places, cars pulled out of the lake, and other big jobs that no one could handle. You name it, and Don was the one you called on. He wasn't afraid to tackle anything, even if the problem was twice as big as his equipment was supposed to handle.

He would do it anyway.

He was also a diver and if anything was in the lake, he would then get it out with the "Beast."

The Beast is now 55 years old and Don says it has a license on it and it is still working. Among the strange things the truck has been used for is pulling a dead horse out of the basement of the Belvedere Golf Club barn, for Frank Supernaw. He also hooked onto a big double axle road grader which Simon Perron was driving for the county and it was so heavy it broke the Beast in two.

Leo Allard was a one-man show with the city Federal snow plow truck. If you left your car in the street in the middle of the night and he was plowing in front of your house, he would hold the air horn down until you came out to move your car. He was a no-nonsense, particular person with his truck. Nobody, but nobody, was to get behind the wheel of "his" truck. When he went on vacation, he took a piece of chalk and marked the tire and the cement floor the truck was parked on to make sure no one had touched it. Sheridan Root and a couple other workers from the street department played a joke on him. They jacked up the back axle, and turned the wheel half a turn, and when he came back, he wanted to know who moved his truck. Well, nobody had moved it, only played a joke on him.

The snowbanks that winter were so high that on Barnard Road, the rear view mirrors on the school buses got pushed back from the hard snow. The bus bodies had to be worked on in the school body shop that spring to fix the metal skirting on the bottom of the bus, which had been bent under from going through the hard snow. The roads were so narrow they had to literally push through them. The snow was so deep at the top of the hill by the home that Dr. and Mrs. Plagge now live in that two big county Oshkosh trucks, pinned together as one unit, became stuck. Dale can remember Dick and Bob Potter and several neighbors hand shoveling snow to take off the top four feet, so that the double header V plow would have a chance of opening the road. Several spectators stood on top of the snow banks, looking down on top of these huge trucks trying to back up to get another run at punching a hole through the packed snow.

Perhaps we haven't seen anything yet this winter. Hopefully, it won't keep on like it is. But, if it turns out to be like the one we remember, it will be a doozy.

National exposure

Charter school band will perform at national convention

By Laurie Lounsbury

Northern exposure is more than a real estate term to define the direction a home faces.

Northern exposure is what started a chain of events that earned the Northwest Academy Jazz All Stars band an invitation to perform at a national convention.

Led by band director Gary Stutzman, the group of 15 students will perform in front of 2,000 people from all over the country when they converge in Denver, Colo. for the National Association of Charter Schools annual convention.

It all started right here in northern Michigan.

"This whole thing happened rather spontaneously," Stutzman said. "The students earned recognition just by being out and performing for the public."

Stutzman, whose enthusiasm for his band students is rivaled only by his zest for Bill Steven's Swiss steak, has made sure his talented band students get exposure playing for the public. Over the holidays, they performed up and down Bridge Street, in stores and on the sidewalks during the Charlevoix

From torture to tranquility

African man finds warm welcome in Charlevoix

By Jamie MacMillan

In his hectic and, at times, turbulent life, Kakusu Jean D'Arc figured he had seen it all.

That is until a few weeks ago, when Mother Nature opened a large can of wintry weather around the Charlevoix area. Not that the native African hadn't seen snow. In fact, Jean had witnessed snowfalls in France and Australia, but he said he had never seen anything like the constant barrage of flakes and accumulation of snow the area has seen since the Christmas holiday.

Instead of shunning the weather, Jean is embracing it. He tried downhill skiing for the first time at Boyne Mountain and has started pick-up soccer games in the snow during recess at the elementary school, where he is working as a counselor.

"There have been some very big snowfalls; that is a new experience for me," he said. "I'm happy to see the snow. It's beautiful, pretty and clean."

Not everything Jean has witnessed in his life, however, has been pretty and clean.

It's hard to know where to begin when chronicling Jean's life.

He comes from a somewhat regal background. His father, Alfonse Motumbo, was a provincial leader in the South Kivu region of the Congo. However, Alfonse and Jean's mother, Rose Motumbo, were kidnapped, tortured and ultimately executed for speaking for independence and against the country's dictator/president, Kabila Roland.

Jean was only four years old when his parents were taken and he became, through evil circumstances, an orphan.

Jean has few recollections about his parents — what he does know he gleaned from history books and newspaper articles. He does know, however, that his father was a fighter for the underprivileged who preached nonviolent tactics.

"His voice and spirit are behind me," he said. "I want to finish his mission. He was someone who just wanted to help and fight for people who didn't have anything."

Growing up an orphan, Jean found refuge on the soccer fields

Refugee from Congo finds soccer future in America

and quickly developed into one of his country's top offensive players. He played for his country in the Junior Olympics in Seoul, Korea in 1988. At 17, he was a striker for his country's silver medal team in the World Junior Championships. When he made the country's Senior National team, he became the club's top scorer and once tallied five goals in a match against Zimbabwe. That club won the gold medal in world wide tournament for French-speaking nations.

Along the way, he kept his father's torch alive, speaking out against totalitarianism and in favor of democracy. His opinions landed him in jail on three different occasions, but his notoriety on the soccer field, he said, kept him out of serious trouble.

He eventually fled the Congo for Kenya in 1993, where he found living quarters in a cramped, poverty-stricken refugee camp.

That's where he was when a former Charlevoix resident found him. Elizabeth Campbell, who was studying abroad with an outreach program at St. Lawrence University, worked at the refugee camp and made a quick friend of Jean.

At her urging, Jean began looking toward America. While it took awhile to secure the proper permission and papers for his relocation, it was an easy decision for Jean as to where to live upon arriving in the United States.

"I have come to pay my tribute," he said referring to all the humanitarian work Elizabeth did at his refugee camp.

During his stay in town, he is living with Elizabeth's parents, John and Mary Lee Campbell. He is experiencing something he has never felt before — a family atmosphere.

"It's warm to wake up and have someone there to give you a hug and ask you how you are doing," he said.

While in town, Jean is working as a counselor of sorts at the Charlevoix Elementary School. He also spends time at the middle and high schools where he preaches the virtues of clean living and guest teaches in history and government classes, explaining to students the conditions and hardships of his homeland.

He tells them that his country lacks government, instead being ruled by an iron fist by those who control the army.

"People need to know more," he said. "Back home, people live in hostility. They don't have freedom, they have daily insecurity."

He doesn't act like a man who has been hardened by all the tragedy, massacres and jail cells he has witnessed. Instead, he carries himself always with a smile and a warm message.

"When you share love with people, you get a lot in return," he said.

Students appear to not only receive his message, but have found a big brother of sorts in their new African friend. At basketball games, younger children flock to him, saying a quick hello or introducing him to their parents. And at the downtown coffee shop, a chance encounter with high school students quickly melts into a fun discussion about music and dance — in French no less.

"They have taken me as a friend and given me spirit. They tell me 'We are glad you came to America,'" he said.

Jean suddenly has many different options for his future, all revolving around soccer. He has received scholarship offers to play at Michigan State, Ohio Weslyan and Binghamton, the state university of New York. He has also received contract offers to play for the Colorado Rapids, a professional team.

Whatever route he takes, he said he will always consider Charlevoix as a home of sorts and plans many return visits when his present stay in town is complete.

"It's a very nice community because the people are so open," he said. "It might be a small town, but for me it's big because the people have big hearts and care about each other. That spirit makes it big."

Kakusu Jean D'Arc (left) kicks a soccer ball around with students at the elementary school. Jean is a refugee from the Congo who found his way to Charlevoix with help from Charlevoix's Elizabeth Campbell, who was working in Africa with an outreach program from St. Lawrence University.

If you don't like the weather, wait five minutes... or five days

Five days of bitterly cold weather created this sight of misty vapors rising off of Lake Michigan, obscuring the blue sky beyond the lighthouse. Temperatures dipped to 20-below zero at night, and crept up only to the single digits during the day. By the weekend, things seemed downright balmy when the thermometer rose to nearly 40 degrees. Now the problem is slushy, melted snow that is currently freezing, making roads dangerous. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Weather closes school again Monday

First it was too cold, then it was too warm. When temperatures rose, mountainous snow banks melted, creating thick slush on many roads.

By Monday, weather predictions called for dropping temperatures and freezing rain. Roads iced up, closing schools across northern Michigan, including Charlevoix. The decision to close schools, according to superintendent John Sturock, was "a no brainer."

"When we went out driving that morning, we hit the brakes and slid about 1,000 feet," Sturock said.

Many area schools were also closed Tuesday, Jan. 19 due to slippery roads caused by freezing rain and snow. Charlevoix County wasn't affected as much by the freezing rain as Emmet and Antrim counties, so Charlevoix students returned to school.

City crews worked last week to remove heaps of snow from the sides of roads and at intersections, where motorists' visibility was impaired. They started in the downtown area and were working their way south when the thaw arrived.

Snowbanks shrank by about a foot from the thaw, but not before two cars were involved in minor accidents due to poor visibility.

In the last two weeks, there were 12 car accidents, primarily caused by weather conditions.

"That's more than usual for this time of year," reported city police chief Dennis Halverson.

Charter school band heads for Colorado

Holiday Open House. Last Thursday, they played at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce annual meeting.

"They don't sound like a bunch of eighth grade students, they sound like real professionals," Stutzman said with fatherly pride.

Last fall, he took his jazz students to the Mackinac Crossings, where they played at Center Stage. In the audience was a person affiliated with charter schools who was so impressed with the band that he invited the group to play at the state charter school convention in Ypsilanti. Obligingly, Stutzman gathered up his band students and carted them to Ypsilanti. That performance led to a request for an audition videotape. The person organizing the national convention of charter schools wanted to see and hear the Northwest Academy Jazz All Stars.

For months, Stutzman and his small but talented jazz group sat on pins and needles, waiting to see if they would be officially invited to play at the national convention.

They got the word last week that they would be a feature attraction at the convention.

"We had no idea we could go this far," Stutzman said.

In typical Stutzman fashion, the band students will get plenty of performing exposure while in Colorado.

The group will leave Grand Rapids Wednesday, March 10 on a train bound for Colorado. Their first stop will be Breckenridge, where they will perform for the Summit County Schools. While there, they hope to squeeze in a little skiing. From Breckenridge, they will go to Woodland Park and play for the schools there. From Sunday, March 14 to Tuesday, March 16, they will perform in Denver at the national convention.

In the meantime, the school will be hosting a series of fund-raising events to help pay for the trip. A dinner dance is planned for Feb. 27, when the school band and the Up North Big Band will perform.

"They're a great bunch of kids and we're really proud of them," Stutzman said.

OPINIONS

Question: How many guys does it take to hang a door?

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Rumor has it that the house across the street from me was ordered in 1917 from a Sears Roebuck Catalog. These preassembled homes were shipped all over the United States and put together like a jigsaw puzzle by local contractors. The only items not included in the order were the glass window panes.

In contrast to the foregoing accomplishment, I recently had a new rear door installed in my house, and in spite of current advances, including car phones and beepers, we haven't made all that much progress with installations. On the contrary, one might say we have regressed!

In September, I visited the showroom of a reputable building center with the hope of getting a new back door installed before the snow arrived. A sales lady showed me samples and we decided it would be best if a salesman called at my home to measure the frame. A couple of weeks went by and I telephoned to ask for the salesman but he was out on the road. Could someone else help me? Yes, it would be taken care of, just leave my number. A few days later another salesman called to say he couldn't come until the following week. We selected a perfectly lovely door. Of course he had to check with the company to see if it was available. The following week he returned my call and said, "Yes, the order could be filled. All I needed to do was talk to the bookkeeper regarding a deposit." By this time it was Nov. 26, but the weather was still glorious and I was looking forward to my house guests arriving for Thanksgiving, so please, let's wait until after they leave. In the middle of December I called to check on my door, and was told it would arrive the following week. An appointment was made to install the door before Christmas, but the date was canceled because the installer was not available because of the forthcoming holidays. He was due at 9 a.m. Dec. 28, but instead arrived at noon on the 29th along with a supervisor, but at this point, I didn't care! It was good to see the door leaning against the threshold even if there was a raging blizzard outdoors.

The door continued to lean on the threshold because the company had sent the wrong hinges. They had also sent the wrong doorknob. There was no lock on the doorknob. The company obligingly sent another man with the correct hinges and another doorknob - an hour 'round trip. We noticed that there were no plugs to fill the holes where the nails were to hold the window in place. And we also noticed that the old weather stripping wasn't doing its job. Another phone call to the company for weather stripping. One of the salesmen offered to bring the plugs and weather stripping on his way home, which he did. When the installer returned the next day he left a note saying that this was the wrong weather stripping. He would get the right material and return after the New Year. By this time the snow was knee-high on the walk leading up to the back door, so he had to park his truck in the front. In spite of the fact that no one can go in or out the back door, I am happy to report that as the temperature continues to dip to below zero my newly insulated back door is doing its job keeping out the cold.

Now all I have to do in the spring is to find a painter who will apply an alkyd-based primer and an exterior grade acrylic finish in the color of my choice.

In retrospect to install this back door, I figure that so far I have dealt with eight different people employed by this very reputable building center, and although everyone could not have been friendlier or more obliging, I wonder, is this a way for a company to make a profit? With a different person in charge of each department, how does the right hand know what the left hand is doing? I wish someone would tell them how Sears Roebuck programmed an entire six bedroom house long distance!

Letters to the editor

Fire chief thanks many for help during freezing fire

Editor:

The Charlevoix Township Fire Department would like to extend its thanks and appreciation to those who assisted us in fighting the recent fire near Nine Mile Point. In bone chilling temperatures, firemen from Charlevoix Township, assisted by the City of Charlevoix Fire Department, fought unrelenting flames and smoke for several hours. We appreciate the assistance provided by the Charlevoix City Fire Department and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department (traffic control). We are thankful there were no injuries, although the property loss to the owners is obviously tragic.

We would like to extend a special thank you to Taco Bell and Judy's Restaurant of Charlevoix, who provided hot beverages and food throughout the day, to all those involved in this incident. It takes a lot of energy to fight a fire, especially in those temperatures, and their assistance was invaluable.

In addition, we would like to thank LexaLite Corporation for allowing us to refill our tanker trucks at its manufacturing plant. We would like to extend special appreciation to their employees who assisted firemen with refilling. Each time we arrived to refill, they had employees who came out to brave the cold and assist us in whatever we needed. The sense of community support here is truly gratifying.

Curt Thompson, Chief
Charlevoix Township

Mystery person is thanked for goodies

Editor:

Whoever sent the beautiful Christmas plastic basket of goodies to Alice & Anna Mathews, and left it on my car roof, thank you very much. I'm glad there are such nice people around, it makes the world a much better place, and happier too.

Alice & Anna Mathews

P.S. It was good eating!

Community was big help during Harvest Food and Supply Drive

Editor:

To the Community:

The community support shown during our recent Harvest Food and Supply Drive was truly outstanding and heart-warming. Area schools, churches, service organizations, social clubs, agencies and individuals donated literally thousands of items (food, household supplies, toys, books, holiday gifts, etc.) to the Safe Home.

These gifts will allow our agency to provide shelter and safety to hundreds of abused women and their children from Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Otsego and Antrim counties.

We are fortunate and proud to be part of such a giving and caring community. On behalf of the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan, Inc., many thanks to you all.

Sincerely,

Blaze consumes award-winning log home

Just one month ago, a log home on Nine Mile Point received national recognition when it was honored in the 1998 House Beautiful Home Building Design Competition as the most outstanding log home design. Today, there is nothing left of it, after a roaring fire consumed the home last Wednesday. Firefighters fought the blaze in sub-zero temperatures, but it was a losing battle.

Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said they received the call for the fire at 9 a.m. Wednesday, at least an hour after the blaze started. The call came from a motorist who was driving down U.S. 31 and saw smoke on the horizon. The motorist apparently turned into Nine Mile Point to investigate the smoke and discovered the burning home. By the time the fire department arrived, the log home was fully engulfed in flames.

"It was totally involved, like you would see on TV," Thompson said. "The fire was everywhere. I've only seen a fire like that once before."

Because the home was made entirely of wood, without any drywall or plaster walls inside, the fire was able to spread quickly.

The owners live in Indiana, and the home is a vacation home for them. They hadn't been at their Nine Mile Point home since New Year's Day.

The cause of the fire is still unknown, and is being investigated by the State Fire Marshall. Thompson said it was unlikely that the fire was started by a faulty furnace or hot water heater.

The township fire department was assisted by the City of Charlevoix Fire Department and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, along with area businesses that provided assistance, food and coffee for the firefighters. The firefighters were at the scene from 9 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Thanks to a grant from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, the Charlevoix Area Community Pool was able to get a basketball backboard and net especially designed for pool use. According to pool director Al Gooch, the basketball net has been extremely well-received, particularly among the teens who come for open swim. A special teen swim period is from 8-9 p.m. Mondays. Other open swim times are from 3-4 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, 6-8 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1-4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Machine can check for signs of osteoporosis

Appointments are now being taken for a simple, non invasive screening test to determine the density of a patient's bones.

Charlevoix Area Hospital recently installed a bone densitometer, a device that measures the density of bones. Called a DEXA scan (Dual-energy X-ray Absorptiometry), this new diagnostic tool is essential in early detection of osteoporosis and other diseases of the bones.

Osteoporosis is a disease that lowers bone density, causing brittle bones, reduced bone strength and physical deformity ("dowager's hump"), affecting more than 24 million Americans. Reduced bone strength can lead to fractures resulting in loss of mobility and independence. Annually, this disease is responsible for more than 1.3 million fractures, of which 250,000 are hip fractures. After age 35, both men and women lose bone at a greater rate than it forms, causing bone loss. After menopause, women start to lose bone at a much more rapid rate than men of the same age, mainly due to a decrease in the production of the hormone, estrogen. Early detection is the best way to prevent osteoporosis.

Increased awareness of osteoporosis has lead to more advanced methods of diagnosing and monitoring the disease even before any symptoms are present.

To assist in diagnosing low-bone density, physicians may prescribe a DEXA scan. This examination estimates the amount of bone mineral content in specific areas of the body, including the spine, hip and wrist. A physician will use the bone density information to decide if treatment is necessary. A DEXA scan takes approximately 15 minutes, DEXA scans are covered under most insurance plans. Check with your health care provider for information on your particular insurance plan.

For more information on the DEXA scans at Charlevoix Area Hospital, call 547-8501.

Little gems

"Staying married: There is no struggle in life so tough, and nothing else in life so worth the struggle."

"It took me years to realize that grandparents do no harm by 'spoiling.' In fact, I'm now convinced that it's as proper for grandparents to spoil grandchildren as it is improper for parents to do likewise."

"Did my wife and I, when our children were young, 'dictate' to them? The dictionary says that means 'to instruct with authority.' We are, therefore, guilty as charged."

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Stephen Guthrie

As I write this, the snow is falling as it does on a movie set, with large flakes dropping straight down, frosting the ends of evergreens and piling up on top of the bird feeder. I put pen aside and went outdoors to stand in it in the last light, grateful that for the first time in what seems like weeks it is not coming down sideways at 25 mph and drifting shut the drive. The drift at the top of the hill on Wickersham Road frightens away all drivers but those who make their homes down here on Nowland Lake, so there is no traffic noise. For a brief moment there was no sound from snowmobiles, barking dogs, or the always welcome county snow plow. It was an enchanted moment not only because it was cold and clear and white and green, but because for this brief respite in time it was so quiet that I could actually hear the snow fall.

Consider all the noises in our day. Traffic, television, diesel truck engines, pagers and cell phones. Snowmobiles, wave runners, boom box music, crying kids. We live in a world that is loud. When this house of mine was a farm house and this land was worked with horses, the people who lived here probably heard the snow fall all the time.

There is another sort of noise that bombards us, and it is that of leading lives which are overly busy with misplaced priorities. As many of us begin to recognize that we can't keep up this pace, the audio terms have crept into our vernacular: we speak of turning down the volume of our lives, of filtering out the static, of eliminating the noise. Most of us live noisy lives in which our daily drill is to accomplish an imposing list of things which are urgent, only a small percentage of which are important.

Regardless of all that we know about what our priorities should be — for example, family and building a right relationship with God — there is a quick and error-proof test to determine what priorities we really hold. In fact, our priorities are reflected in how we spend our time and where we spend our money. The money test is an easy one: study your checkbook. The deposits represent the number of hours of your life you traded for cash. The checks you wrote represent what is important to you to acquire in exchange for the hours of your life.

The test for time is more difficult, in part because we don't keep good records of how we spend it or what we received for it. It comes to us in snapshots that reflect the choice we made at that moment about how to spend that moment. That is the moment which God gave us. His fundamental gift upon which all other gifts are conditioned. Time, said Longfellow, is the life of the soul; it is all we really have to spend. Money may be the medium of exchange in the worldly realm, but in God's economy it is time that is the official currency.

The question in this noisy world becomes this: Will we spend the gifted moments in the pursuit of pleasure and the relentless accumulation of wealth, or will we give that moment as our gift back to a loving Father by spending it on the things He has told us are important. Only when we seek first the kingdom of God do we stand a chance of turning down the noise in our lives.

Union contract for sheriff's deputies is three years in the making

By Jamie MacMillan

The National Basketball Association has nothing on Charlevoix County and its local sheriff's department.

While basketball players and owners were locked in an epic labor battle which almost wiped away an entire season, Charlevoix County and the local deputy's union are amid a labor impasse which is well into its third year.

At least the deputies have remained on the job, but they have been working without a signed contract since the previous agreement expired on June 30, 1996.

Negotiations have done little to settle the dispute, so both parties have opted for binding arbitration. Each side presented their case to an arbitrator in September, 1998 and filed subsequent evidentiary briefs last month.

The downstate arbitrator told both sides that she would begin addressing the issue later this month, but gave no time line for when a decision could be expected. It is feasible that a ruling will arrive after the contract is scheduled to expire on June 30, 1999.

"Then we'll have to start bargaining all over again," Pete Patterson, attorney for Charlevoix County, said from his Grand Rapids office.

Both sides have accused the other of stall tactics to delay the outcome and charges of greed and union busting tactics have clouded talks.

The two sides disagreed most on possible wage increases and Blue Cross benefits for retired employees.

Originally, the union asked for a 4 percent wage increase for every year of the three-year contract. The county, meanwhile, has proposed a 3 percent annual increase.

The Blue Cross issue, however, has been the most contentious dividing point, according to Ken Nash of the Police Officers Labor Council, who is representing the local union.

Blue Cross retirement benefits have been extended to all county employees hired prior to Dec. 31, 1992. The benefits, however, don't include any union workers since that issue would need to be dealt with in contract negotiations.

The county's stance on the issue is that in the previous contract, the deputy's union received a 4 percent wage increase in lieu of health insurance. Meanwhile, the rest of the county work force received only a 3 percent wage increase, Patterson said.

> "They've already bargained for and received that additional benefit. At this point, we don't think this is fair or correct."
> — Pete Patterson, lawyer representing Charlevoix County

"They've already bargained for and received that additional benefit," Patterson said. "At this point we don't think this is fair or correct."

The union's definition of fair is in sharp contrast. They claim that they never bargained for any Blue Cross benefits before because they had been under the impression that no county employees were given that benefit. After the last contract was signed, however, they discovered that not only did county employees receive Blue Cross retirement benefits, but the part-time county commissioners were eligible as well.

"We don't think it's fair since they're feathering their own nest," Nash said. "The things we are asking for, they have given to their other employees before."

Employees at the county building were given Blue Cross retirement benefits, but accepted a two-year wage freeze in return, Patterson said.

The union sent to the arbitrator a final proposal of a 3.5 percent wage increase for each of the contract's three years in addition to Blue Cross retirement benefits for their 16 members. The county has countered with a 3 percent wage hike in each year with no Blue Cross.

The sides are also squabbling over pension pay. The union wants a pension package which increases the multiplier from 1.7 to 2.5 percent of an officer's average final compensation.

According to Nash, the increased multiplier could give officers with 25 years' experience an additional $4,000-6,000 a year in pension after retirement.

The county wants to keep the status quo, and a cost analysis of the issue claims it would cost the county an additional $22,000 a year to increase the pension multiplier. That figure could increase since the study was done based on 1996 salary figures, county clerk Jane Brannon said.

The union is also trying to gain two additional holiday days — Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve — as well as a shoe allowance for officer uniforms.

Whenever the issue is settled, it won't be long before it becomes a rerun. While the county has spent $47,500 in 1998 in legal fees fighting this issue, it'll be back on the defensive this summer since this contract will expire June 30, 1999.

When negotiations on that deal begin, a divisive issue will likely be seniority and how it affects pay and shift scheduling, Nash said.

The county board of commissioners next meets at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Charlevoix bank chairman names new vice president

Two new directors also appointed to the board

Richard Hodgson, Chairman of Charlevoix State Bank, announced that Timothy LaBlance has been promoted to the job of vice president of Charlevoix State Bank.

LaBlance has been in banking since 1988, handling charge card services, ATM services, check card and being responsible for all aspects of consumer lending. LaBlance is also involved in commercial and mortgage loans.

A graduate of Alma University, LaBlance holds a degree in Business Administration and graduated from the Perry School of Banking in Mt. Pleasant.

LaBlance lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Carrie, and has three children, Nathan, Keegan and Jacie.

Hodgson also announced the appointment of two new directors to the board of Charlevoix State Bank, which became effective this month: Richard Hodgson II and John Kurtz are the new directors.

Hodgson II graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in Nuclear Engineering in 1985. From 1986 through 1996 he was a consultant to several nuclear power plants throughout the United States.

This May, Hodgson II will complete his master's degree in Business Administration in Finance at Michigan State University. Hodgson II has worked in several capacities for Charlevoix State Bank. In 1997 and 1998 he helped with the development of the Beaver Island office of the bank. He is a member of the American Nuclear Society.

Kurtz currently serves as president of Charlevoix State Bank and has worked for the bank since September of 1997. Kurtz has been in banking for 27 years and working in Charlevoix since 1981. He is a member of several service organizations and lives in Charlevoix with his wife, Elaine and daughter, Amy.

Charlevoix State Bank president John Kurtz (left) congratulates Tim LaBlance on his promotion to the position of vice president of the bank. Richard Hodgson, chairman of the bank, made the announcement last week. Also announced were new appointments to the board of directors; John Kurtz and Richard Hodgson II are the new board members.

Fifteen years on the job and he's never missed a day

Randy Weisler, an employee at Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., didn't need any incentive to come to work every day. He's just that type of guy. It didn't much matter to him that the company offered two vacation days for every annual quarter of perfect work attendance.

He now boasts an astounding 15 years of perfect attendance, never having used up any of his awarded vacation days.

"Randy just flat out never misses work," said Jim Hater, president of Charlevoix Manufacturing. "That's the greatest thing in the world, to have someone who's that dependable."

Hater presented Weisler with a plaque to honor his 15-year perfect attendance record last Friday.

Weisler started working at the company in September of 1981. He is a grinder operator on the second shift. With his long record of perfect attendance, he has amassed a considerable number of vacation days, but has no plans to use them in the near future.

"I'm just saving them up," Weisler said. "Maybe I'll take a few here and there."

When asked how he's managed to attain such a great attendance record, Weisler was soft-spoken and humble.

"I don't know, I guess I take after my parents," he said. "My dad is that way too."

Receiving a perfect attendance award

Jim Hater (right), president of Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., presents Randy Weisler with an award for having a perfect work attendance record for 15 straight years.

The specialty of family practice combines the latest in medical technologies with a long tradition of caring and service. Family physicians are educated and trained to care for the whole person, treating the majority of medical problems.

Newcomb practices in Charlevoix with two other Board Certified Family Physicians, Dr. F. James Stewart M.D., and Dr. Dennis M. Joy M.D. Their office may be reached at 547-6554 for appointments. New patients are always welcome.

Rayder basketball team continues to dominate the north

By Jamie MacMillan

Last week's battle between league favorites Elk Rapids and Charlevoix was the showdown that wasn't.

The Rayders seized control of the game early and never let go en route to a surprisingly easy 69-54 win on their home floor.

In the season's first half-dozen games, the Rayders have made a habit of building big leads by intermission and cruising to victory in the second half.

Six players scored and a swarming pressure defense forced the Elks into bad shots and turnovers as the Rayders built a 19-9 advantage after the first quarter.

After an Elks' basket by Marcel Thibert started the second quarter, Jim Kanine drilled a three-point shot from the left wing, was fouled and swished the ensuing free throw. That sequence was the start of an 18-5 run that eased the Rayders to a commanding 37-20 lead going into halftime.

Last year, the Elks topped the Rayders on three different occasions and returned every starter from a club which won 16 games before bowing out in the district finals to Boyne City.

The story was different during the club's first meeting of this season. By the time the Elks got things in gear last Tuesday with a hectic 12-2 run to close the third quarter they had fallen behind by over 20 points and they could never trim the deficit to single digits.

"It's to our advantage to get the game going pretty fast," Kanine said. "I was a little shocked that we came out and did what we did to them."

For the Rayders, Adam Wood led all scorers with 19 points and swished five treys. Kanine and Matt McClellan each scored 12 and Kanine dished out 12 assists and Justin Thorp snared 14 rebounds.

Ryan Reiter led the Elks with 17 points.

With the win, the Rayders — a team that has only won 17 games in the last three seasons — have suddenly evolved from the hunter to the hunted as the conference title chase begins to heat up. It's a challenge that coaches and players are welcoming with open arms.

"Our core of seniors are pretty focused that this is their last chance in a Charlevoix uniform to have an impact," coach Keith Haske said. "They've really taken that to heart."

In the team's first contest with the bullseye on their back, the Rayders used a 20-13 fourth quarter advantage to hold off a gritty and defensive-minded Kalkaska squad, 56-46.

With the win, the Rayders have already matched their win total from all of last season, and upped their season record to 7-0, 4-0 in Lake Michigan play.

Kanine, the senior point guard, said the club is ready for all challengers, but that the club, while red hot now, still has a lot of work to do.

"To me we haven't proved anything yet," he said, "We could go out and lose 14 in a row. We still have business to take care of."

Added his backcourt mate McClellan, "We're still looking to even some scores."

In the undercards against the Elks, the Rayders won both the freshmen and junior varsity contests.

The freshmen club squandered a six-point fourth quarter lead, but rebounded to win 75-62 in a game that went into overtime. Keith Daly led the Rayders with 19 points. Jim Shepherd added 17 and Rob Boss chipped in 16 for Charlevoix, 4-2.

The junior varsity team also improved to 4-2 with a 71-55 decision. The score was knotted 17-17 after the first quarter, but Charlevoix had built a 34-25 lead by the half. The Elks were beginning to slice into the margin, but Zach Dennis banked in a 35-foot trey at the third quarter buzzer to maintain a nine point lead going into the final stanza.

In the final quarter, the Rayders outscored the Elks 19-12.

Patrick Gowell led the team with 14 points. Dennis added 13 and Jeremiah Tuescher and Ben Coen each chipped in with 10.

Wrestling results

Jerry Zeitler won three matches, all on pins, to capture a first place medal for Charlevoix in Saturday's Pine River Wrestling Invitational.

Wrestling in the 140-pound division, Zeitler bested opponents from Cadillac, Mayville, Pine River and the squad to earn the Rayders' only first place medal of the event.

Four other Rayders earned medals.

James Pop, 171, earned a second place with pins against Cadillac and Houghton Lake.

Josh Chamberlain, 112, Ryan Novotny, 135, and Chris Loper, 189, each won third places.

The Rayders ended the day with a 1-4 team record, besting only the Pine River "B" team, 42-30 with Novotny, Ken Burch, 145, and Ben Macks, 152, earning wins.

In a 36-40 loss to Houghton Lake, Loper, Pop and William Potter, 160, had wins; in a 30-53 loss to Mayville, Chamberlain, Zeitler, Loper and Potter earned wins; in a 12-68 loss to the Pine River "A" team, Novotny and Zeitler earned wins; and in a 30-54 loss to Cadillac, Novotny and Zeitler grappled to victories.

Rayder ski team improves with every passing meet

The Charlevoix ski team spent almost as much time on the slopes last week as they did studying for finals this week, with three ski meets in five days. With each meet, the team did progressively better.

"Friday's meet was a big improvement over our earlier meets," said coach Sue Miller. "We got off to a slow start due to poor snow conditions early in the season. The kids' weren't able to get enough free skiing and training in before we started racing."

Friday's meet was hosted at Crystal Mountain, where the Rayders skied against Glen Lake, Grayling, Manistee and Caledonia.

Glen Lake swept the meet, taking first place as a team in both the girls' and the boys' slalom and giant slalom events.

The boys' team tied for second place in the giant slalom event, with Steve Pirie taking fifth place, followed by Roscoe Serrels in eighth place. Also for Charlevoix were Todd Freidinger, 13th, Kyle Louiselle, 16th, Joel Trubilowicz, 26th and Jim Dilworth, 28th. In the slalom event, Roscoe Serrels took sixth place, followed by Steve Pirie in ninth place, Todd Freidinger, 10th, Joel Trubilowicz, 22nd and Kyle Louiselle, 25.

The girls' team finished third in slalom and giant slalom. Lexi Wilson led the girls' team in slalom, taking sixth place, followed by Kelly Kusina, Marie Serrels and Kirsten Brendtro in 11th, 12th and 13th place respectively, and Karlee Barnard in 16th place.

In giant slalom, Kelly Kusina took seventh place, followed by Lexi Wilson, 11th, Karlee Barnard, 13th, Kirsten Brendtro, 14 and Marie Serrels, 17th.

At Boyne Mountain Thursday, Jan. 14, Charlevoix skied against Boyne City, Elk Rapids and East Jordan. The girls' team finished second in both slalom and giant slalom, while the boys' team finished second in giant slalom and third in slalom. Results were:

Girls, slalom — Tiffany Fisher, third, Lexi Wilson, fifth, Marie Serrels, seventh, Karlee Barnard, eighth, Kelly Kusina, 10th and Kirsten Brendtro, 11th.

Boys, giant slalom — Steve Pirie, third, Roscoe Serrels, eighth, Todd Freidinger, 10th, Kyle Louiselle, 11th and Joel Trubilowicz, 17th.

Girls, giant slalom — Tiffany Fisher, third, Kelly Kusina, fourth, Lexi Wilson, eighth, Kirsten Brendtro, 10th, Karlee Barnard, 11th and Marie Serrels, 13th.

Regional soccer coaches' clinic is coming to Charlevoix

Jan. 29 and 30 are the dates for the National Soccer Coaches Association of America's Regional Coaching Clinic at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The NSCAA is the largest soccer coaches' group in the country, with members coming from all levels, youth to professional.

The nature and purpose of the association is to educate, provide services, promote and stimulate interest in the game of soccer. Blake Glass, NSCAA State Director of Coaching, will be the instructor. Glass coached the men's soccer team at Western Michigan University for 15 years. Prior to that, Glass coached at his alma mater, Spring Arbor College. Glass was a four-year starter at Spring Arbor at the sweeper position. He was captain and MVP of the 1977 team that was undefeated and ranked no. 4 in the country. Glass worked for the professional team "Detroit Express" in the North American Soccer League. He has coached in the Michigan Olympic Development program, led a Kalamazoo area team to the Michigan Premier League U-15 State Championship, coached AYSO and been a soccer camp director and coach for 20 years. Glass holds a National Diploma from the NSCAA.

Glass will be assisted by Charlevoix Girls Varsity Soccer/Harbor Springs Boys Varsity Soccer Coach Hagen Manker, who also holds a National Diploma from the NSCAA. Cost of the clinic will be $40 per person. Class times will be 6:30-10 p.m. Friday, Jan. 29, and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 30. Contact Hagen Manker at 547-5507 to sign up or for more information.

American Red Cross needs blood donors

The Charlevoix Community American Red Cross Blood Drive will be from 1-6:45 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 21 at the American Legion Hall.

Due to the extreme weather conditions that have prevailed across the country and our state, several blood drives have been canceled. The Detroit area has been hardest hit and they have had to cancel many blood drives too.

Therefore, the Red Cross is on an emergency appeal through the end of the month. They are asking people who can make it to blood drives to try and get out to donate, if the weather and road conditions are safe to travel.

If blood donors wish to make an appointment for the Charlevoix drive, they can call the Red Cross at 347-5984, or 1-800-585-2240. They hope to collect at least 110 units of blood in Charlevoix on the 21.

Red Cross is calling their request for blood donations a "Critical Appeal."

A "critical appeal" is the formal notice that the Great Lakes Region's inventories have dropped to a point where many are at a one-half day supply and the Great Lakes Region cannot supply all hospital requests for blood. Across Michigan, blood donations have dropped by 14% during the past few weeks. Holiday vacations and activities have made blood donation difficult for many donors. Today, the Red Cross knows of no surgeries that have been postponed due to blood supplies.

For several weeks, they have had enough type-O and type-B to last for only about one day of regular blood usage (vs. a 3-day goal), and may not be able to meet the demand for blood in the event of a serious emergency. Now, almost all blood supply levels are "dangerously low," and must be replenished. Blood is needed to help treat people suffering every day from serious illness or injury who require blood transfusions.

How much blood does the Red Cross need?

Patients in Michigan need about 2,000 units of blood every day — that's about one product every 43 seconds, and the Red Cross is trying to meet that need. One unit of blood can benefit as many as four people. Thousands of babies, children, men and women, including those being treated for accidents, routine surgeries, and serious diseases, such as cancer and heart disease, rely on the generosity of blood donors daily.

What types of blood does the Red Cross need most of all?

Right now, the American Red Cross particularly encourages people with "O" blood type to donate blood, because "O" is the most common blood type and is always in demand. Additionally, in emergency situations, blood type "O-negative" can be safely transfused to recipients with any other blood type. Nearly all blood-type supplies are low. They must attract new donors every day. Please join the Red Cross, and donate your blood to save lives today.

TEAM SHIES AT SCARED COW

HORSES TOBOGGAN DOWN "DIP OF DEATH"

Nothing Smashed - No One Hurt - Feat Only Little Short of a Miracle

Homer Brady had one of Hooker's teams up on the south hill yesterday afternoon at about half past one and left it unhitched in front of his brother's place on Upright Avenue, between State and Bridge streets, while he went into the barn back of the house to get a cow which he intended to lead behind the rig to the slaughter house near Wakefield's place on the state road. While driving the animal across the yard, she got one of her hoofs caught in an old gasoline stove that lay there on the ground and becoming frightened, started to bellow and plunged, kicking up her heels, in the direction of the team.

The horses, hitched to a three seated sleigh, suddenly took fright at the commotion and bolted, turning the corner into State street. Down the hill they went, across Antrim, Mason and Clinton and on towards Park avenue. Between Clinton and Park, stood a horse and cutter, also unhitched. As the flying team passed him, Dobbin gave them the "once over" and then he too bolted.

When they reached Park avenue, the maddened horses were travelling too fast to check themselves. Through the yard between the Bedford and Hammett place and up the steep hill and then — well, the bank drops away here almost sheer for fifty feet to the old lighthouse pier below. Did they stop? Not they. Down they went, the sleigh almost perpendicularly on end behind them until they landed in a heap at the bottom. And then one of the runaways tried to climb the sill of the pier and get into the channel, but quick work on the part of a few who were near enough to be on the job saved further catastrophe and they were quieted and led out of their predicament.

Although the sleigh contained quite an assortment of butcher's tools, nothing dropped out but a knife, which was picked up later along the road. Casualties none and nothing broken but a single rein. Who says we never have any excitement in the winter time?

WORST STORM IN YEARS HITS TOWN

CITY BURIED UNDER TONS OF SNOW

Out of Touch With Outside World For Nearly a Week - Barometer Makes Record Drop

Charlevoix has been for the past week in the grip of the worst storm experienced here in years — so say the oldest inhabitants, and we are perfectly willing to believe them.

Up until Tuesday night, not a wheel turned at this end of the P.M., all trains having been canceled and on Monday traffic was at an absolute standstill, even on the southern division between Grand Rapids, Detroit and Chicago. Report came that most of the road's snow ploughs were tied up somewhere on the line between here and Traverse City and could not move either way. Tuesday noon the northbound left Grand Rapids for the first time since Friday, and a snow plough clearing the way for her arrived here Tuesday night at about 11:15. The south bound train bearing a fair load of mail and several passengers who had been stranded north of here since last Saturday went south late Tuesday afternoon.

Rural carriers put out Saturday and Monday only to turn back at the end of town, and, in truth, there was but little for them to carry. Bridge street is groaning under a burden of snow seldom seen there. The Western Union wires were out of commission for a time Monday and it certainly looked as if Charlevoix were to be cut off from communica-

Equalization Ratios as shown are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value.

The Multipliers as shown are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Mulitplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Note: THESE MULTIPLIERS REPLACE THOSE OF 1998 AND ARE NOT AN ADDITION TO OR SUBTRACTION FROM THEM.

Friday, the barometer went to a point which has not been reached in this vicinity before in fifty years - 27.7. This we have on the statement of old sailors, who may be expected to know what they are talking about. At the same time comes word from St. Augustine, Florida, that they are now enjoying the unusual sport of snow-balling in the city streets and are daily looking for a wave of zero weather.

As a result of the tie-up, fuel supplies are getting dangerously low and the administrator has now cut the individual purchase of coal to 500 pounds. A wild rumor was current for a time that all business houses on the street would close their doors three days out of the week and one that the schools would also be closed, both of which are entirely unfounded. They were traced down and discovered to be jokes which circulated too often and finally assumed the shape of truth.

Good grades and gridiron skill required for all-state team

Charlevoix's Tom Cunningham named to all-state, all-academic team

Tom Cunningham takes a seat in the bleachers overlooking the basketball court, where he continues to demonstrate his athletic ability now that football season is over. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Ben and Leslie Cunningham knew when their son Tom was in the fifth grade that their youngest child was not an ordinary student.

He had already earned oohs and aahs from his family when, at a younger age, he took to reading to his older sister and brothers. As a fifth grader, Tom spent his birthday at college.

At the time his mother was taking classes at Northwestern Michigan and Tom, as a birthday gift, was given a free day from school. Instead of trekking into more childlike adventures on his free day, Tom packed up with his mother and attended classes with her.

"He went to my classes and then I took him out to lunch," Leslie recalled. "He could have done anything, but he tagged along to college. It was kind of neat."

A lot of neat things are happening these days to Tom, now a senior at Charlevoix High School. Not only is he a key player on the school's high flying basketball team, but earlier this month he was named a member of the all-state, all-academic team for football.

It seems like an odd time to announce a gridiron honor in the heart of winter, but it takes awhile to determine who is worthy of being on such a distinguished team. Of the thousands of student-athletes who strapped on helmets and shoulder pads this past fall, only 32 were honored on this list put forth by the state's football coaches association.

"I'm surprised," Cunningham said. "It never crossed my mind that this was a possibility."

It became a possibility because Cunningham, an end and linebacker on this year's football squad, carries an impressive 3.952 grade point average, is fourth in his class and scored a 31 on his American College Test (ACT).

Balancing books and sports has always been a tough act, and Cunningham said the key is never getting to wrapped up in either. When you do, he said, it's easy to get worn down.

"Sports give you a good work ethic," he said. "With practice you begin to get on a routine, and you need to have the discipline to add homework to the end of that routine."

Currently, amid a course load that includes calculus, physics, English and AP government, Cunningham's favorite classes have been those involving the building and trades curriculum. Now he is immersed in Construction III, a class where students eventually build their own house. For him, it's the hands-on approach of the class that he likes.

"It's easy to get sick of the classroom, and classes like these give you a chance to get out there and see how things apply."

Cunningham credits a good memory with his academic success, but was also quick to note the influences his parents had on him.

His mother's return to college showed him what anyone can do if one's mind is focused on it. Working at his father's company, Lyons Marine Construction, during his summer breaks, brought him up close to his father's workmanlike attitude.

For the future, Cunningham is looking toward entering the business world and attending college at Western Michigan, Michigan State or Kalamazoo College.

"We're really proud of who he is more than what he's done," Leslie said. "It's really gratifying to see what kind of scholar he has turned out to be."

Proposed city budget includes big projects for upcoming year

By Laurie Lounsbury

More than one-quarter of the City of Charlevoix's total budget for the fiscal year 1999-2000 will go toward capital expenditures.

City staff has been preparing the budget for the fiscal year that begins April 1, 1999 and ends March 31, 2000. A public hearing on the budget will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 15 at city hall.

The city's projected budget is $10.6 million, with $2.97 million planned for capital expenditures.

Topping the list of capital projects is the total renovation of city hall, which is projected to cost $850,000. The city expects to receive bids on the project by March of this year. After that, city staff will be relocated to the former post office building next door.

Electrical improvements and conversions within the city will cost $500,400.

Building a new airport terminal is estimated to cost $376,061. The new airport terminal construction is expected to begin in the spring of this year.

The Downtown Development Authority plans to spend $286,000 on improvements to East Park and Veterans' Park.

The 1999-2000 budget is only slightly larger than it was this year, with less than a 1 percent increase in the budget. The millage will be reduced from 13.086 mills to 12.976 mills. The operating millage remains the same as last year, at 8.5 mills, and the infrastructure millage remains the same at 3.836 mills. Debt service is down to .11 mills.

Taking a look at where the city spends tax dollars, a chart in the budget shows that 25.5 percent of revenue is spent on recreation and culture. The next biggest category is police and fire protection, where 23 percent of available money is spent. Infrastructure improvements use 18 percent of the budget, while general government and legislative functions use about 13 percent of the budget.

Included in the general budget is a list of the city's goals, with city hall renovations topping that list. Depot Beach improvements are also on the list. The city is planning to submit another grant application for improvements to Depot Beach by April 1. Also high on the city's priority list is the purchase of more property to create a new industrial park. The city is currently in negoti-

School board mulls options to revive facility plan

By Jamie MacMillan

Charlevoix voters may get a chance to vote on a school bond proposal for new facilities as early as this fall.

While no tangible steps were taken toward a facility project during a school board work session Monday evening, the board did discuss a very real time line of finalizing a proposal by June to be followed by a September election.

Exactly what type of project will be on that proposal or where such a facility would be built, however, remains as clear as mud.

The board itself is divided into two factions — one that would support a new middle school and another that would build a new high school and move the middle school students to the current high school on May Street.

Despite that division, there was a general agreement that the board would unanimously support whatever direction the community chooses.

"I don't want to do this until we're all committed that we'll live with what comes out of this," said board president Allen Telgenhof, who favors a new middle school backer.

To that end, the greater portion of Monday's work session was spent devising ways to better gauge the community's feelings.

The board is currently trying to set up a pair of community forums through the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, which would be in a similar vein to the Venetian Forum held last winter.

The hope is to stage both forums sometime in February, so the board could use whatever input is gained during its regular meeting in the month of March. Board member Barney Way and school superintendent John Sturock planned to meet with chamber officials this week to discuss meeting dates.

"My disagreement is that the community has already told us what to do," said board member Larry Levengood, who supports a new middle school. "But, I don't have a problem going through the process again to reconfirm that."

A true snowbird

Julie Christiansen spotted this robin in a tree near the elementary school. We don't know if he's an early arrival or never left town. According to some knowledgeable nature observers, quite a few birds were tricked by the warm weather that continued into December, and never flew south for the winter. When the snow arrived, the birds — like the commercial airlines — didn't want to fly south, or anywhere else, in the snowstorms. (Photo courtesy of Julie Christiansen) ations for property. The location of the property is undisclosed at this time.

Acquiring the Wharfside building, which currently houses Kilwin's and North Seas Gallery, is also on the city's list of priorities. The building would potentially be torn down to create more park area. An appraisal is being done on the property now. After receiving the appraisal, the city will look into funding sources to acquire the property. A possible source is the ISTEA (Intermodal Surface Transportation Enhancement Act) program, which provides up to 80 percent of funding for designated projects. The grant application for ISTEA funds is Feb. 1, 1999.

In the neighboring location, the city is looking at improvements to the marina, public restroom and chamber of commerce building. Possible funding for that project would come from the Waterways Commission. The city is applying for an engineering grant to study the possibilities for a new building in that location. The grant would pay for 50 percent of the cost, and the city would pay for the remaining 50 percent. The budget includes $30,000 for the building study.

Parents lend helping hands in elementary classrooms

By Jamie MacMillan

It's 9 a.m. and the daily hum of activity at the Charlevoix Elementary School is just beginning. A group of seven students sit at a round table, reading along to a narrative of children's short stories, when the adult leader pauses the tape to explain a new vocabulary word, 'ramada.'

She explains that ramada is an old ethnic word meaning brush shelter and the group momentarily discusses if the hotel chain Ramada found its title from this word.

This instructional scene is typical at schools everywhere, but what makes this scene at the Charlevoix K-5 unique is that the adult is not a teacher, but a parent, one of many who are classroom volunteers who help ease the burden of overcrowded classes as well as offer their own perspective into the education process.

"It's nice to be there to see how it works," parent Kim Molter said.

Molter, who has lent her help in both first and third grade classes, said working in the classroom was a way to get a better handle on Charlevoix's approach to education. She and her family moved to town from Fort Meyers a couple of years ago.

"I wanted to be more involved in my kids' schooling and see who they're working and becoming friends with."

With parents, classes can split into groups of six to 10 students, with each spending an hour at a particular station. Depending on what subject matter — math, reading or science — each station has some sort of academic task to accomplish.

The parent-monitored stations are geared toward more fun aspects of learning, such as story narratives and educational board games and crosswords. The stations are rotated throughout the week and each day is devoted to a different subject matter.

"Each hits on some material, nobody misses out on anything," third grade teacher Cathy Silberhorn said.

With parents lending help, teachers, like Silberhorn, are given more time to work one-on-one with smaller groups of students. It is especially helpful in the school's lower grades, where overcrowding has student-to-teacher ratios higher than the district's goal of one teacher for every 20 students.

"Without those guys, we would struggle," Silberhorn said. "We rely heavily on those parents."

Parent Kim Molter reads along with a group of students listening to children's stories. Molter is one of many parental volunteers in the classroom, helping to ease the load on teachers at the elementary school. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

. Richard Swenor, elementary school principal, enjoys the parental involvement because not only does it create smaller learning groups, but it also lends itself to a more "hands-on" approach to learning. Swenor said research shows that with "hands-on" activities, students retain more of what they learn.

"The more of our senses that we can get involved into the lesson plan, the more apt we are to remember the information," he said.

Swenor said involving parents with classroom activities has many advantages, from ensuring that educational lessons are brought back into the home to strengthening the partnership between teachers, administrators and parents.

"Both our goals is to better the education of our kids," he said.

While teachers report that it has not been hard to find classroom helpers, one volunteer-reliant school activity is beginning to wane.

Swenor said the school's STAR reading program, where adults come in to read one-on-one with students, is low on volunteers.

The program, Swenor said, is continuing, but not at full strength. Swenor said anyone interested in helping can contact the school at 547-3215.

Reckless snowmobile riders jeopardize trail system

By Laurie Lounsbury

It took years for a group of conscientious people to create a snowmobile trail linking Charlevoix to East Jordan and other northern Michigan towns.

The trail is now in jeopardy, due to a few thoughtless snowmobile riders who are not sticking to the trail, but instead are breaking trails of their own.

"Our trail system has taken many years and man-hours to develop," said John Ferguson, board member of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club. "Unfortunately, a small segment of snowmobilers feel that they can ride wherever they wish, and are doing so. If this negligence continues, we are in jeopardy of losing these trails forever."

Ferguson explained that four years ago, area snowmobile clubs formed the Charlevoix County Snowmobile council and worked with property owners to get leases and permits so they could build a snowmobile trail across privately-owned land. Three years ago, the trail was completed and certified by the Department of Natural Resources. The Charlevoix County Snowmobile Council gets funding from the Department of Natural Resources to groom and maintain the trail.

The problem now is that some riders are taking off on their own and riding across alfalfa and spring wheat fields, potentially damaging the crops. Property owners have also complained of riders coming too close to their homes.

If riders continue to veer off the marked trail, the property owners may revoke the permits for the trail.

"We've got a good trail and we'd like to keep it that way," Ferguson said. "Private property owners have graciously granted trail permits to cross their property with the promise that snowmobilers would respect their land and stay on the trails."

The Charlevoix leg of the snowmobile trail starts south of the Flight Deck Bar and winds through the countryside to the East Jordan Snowmobile clubhouse. From there, riders can continue on to Mancelona, Alba and West Elmira.

Between Charlevoix and East Jordan, the trail traverses property that's almost entirely privately owned. Beyond East Jordan, the trail goes through state-owned land. The private land is far more likely to be damaged than the state-owned land, since crops lay underneath the snow and private homes are situated near the trails.

"There's no excuse for it (leaving the trail)," Ferguson said. "The trail is well-marked and well-groomed. We groomed it Saturday and it's flat as a pancake. We have a good base now that should last for the rest of the year."

Although it's not legal or proper, Ferguson said he could somewhat understand snowmobilers' desire to leave the marked trail if it was bumpy and poorly groomed. But that is not the case this year. According to Ferguson, the club has been grooming the trail at least four or five times a week, and, in some weeks, they have groomed daily. The trail, he said, is in better condition than it's ever been, yet some snowmobilers are riding across private property more than they did since its creation.

"We're urging snowmobilers to stay on the marked trail and respect private property owners," Ferguson said. "We don't want to lose this trail."

OPINIONS

Stick on those toe warmers and slide into "church"

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

Hallelujah, here we go again!

It's time again for the parishioners of the Church of Downhill Racing to drop to bended knee, pull a groin muscle and probably get frozen in that position until April.

Oops, that's not what I meant to say.

I meant to say, put on those ski parkas and open up those check books, 'cause the collection plates for the Church of Downhill Racing are being circulated on ski hills and in ski shops faster than you can wreck the bottom of a ski with a hot steam iron.

Go on, step up to that snowy white altar and join the rest of the congregation— pick any location you like — there are many parish locations for the Church of Downhill Racing.

There is the Big Boyne Mountain parish, the Highlands parish, the Nub's Nob parish, and other mission parishes located throughout the state. They are all nondenominational and accept any new members regardless of race, creed, or the expiration date on your credit card (unless it has already lapsed).

Put your kids in Sunday School — and Saturday school, night school, and after school school — watch out for that collection plate, it's coming around again — but for your donation, your child will be taught to see the light! To see the cross block! To see the gates before they have to hike back uphill!

Give generously to those devoted ministers of the Church of Downhill Racing, the ski coaches. Give, give, from the bottom of your heart, and maybe your kid will make it to the big heavenly reward in the Church of Downhill Racing, The State Finals! The Junior Olympics! The Emergency Room!

The Church of Downhill Racing is not for the faint of heart — or the cold of feet.

It requires true devotion, stamina, and really good arctic clothing.

There's plenty of praying going on at the Church of Downhill Skiing. Parents line up along the front row pew, which is located just past the finish line and marked by a streamer of colorful plastic flags whipping in the wind, to do their praying.

"Oh please, don't let my Johnny fall on this run..."

"Oh please, I pray, don't let Susie get disqualified again..."

"Please let them beat the Harbor Springs girls, just once, please... "

The spontaneous bell choir plays discordantly and intermittently every time one of the Youth Group crosses the finish line — changa, changa, changa, go the cow bells, accompanied by the traditional choir response — "Go, go, go, push, push!"

And the lay leader drones on from his warm little spot in the timing shack:

"Tim Timidly, with a time of 31:18, Stevie Speedy, with a time of 28:12... Joe Smokin, with a time of 27:88..."

The congregation hangs on every word, listening for the time results of their own little cherub. Then they have the traditional 'greet your neighbor' moment: "How did Alice do?" "Oh, what a shame, she fell on her first run."

"Sammy's in second place? Why, that's wonderful."

Sure, the naysayers, the unenlightened, cry "Blasphemy! You can't have a church without a building — you can't nurture family values at the Church of Downhill Racing!"

It's a matter of opinion.

Some churches have their members speak in tongues, some handle snakes and some listen to a man wearing a giant pointy snow cone hat chant phrases in Latin.

To each their own.

At some churches, parishioners bob up and down from their pew seats to a kneeler. At the Church of Downhill Racing, parishioners kneel only when a muscle spasm in their back caused by standing at a weird angle on an icy slope makes their legs buckle.

This might be the only church where kids and teenagers willingly attend services day and night, all winter long, with their parents in tow.

Getting parents to tithe to the Church of Downhill Racing is no problem. Parents easily spend at least 10 percent of their income at the great white altar. When those spiritual advisors, (found in any ski shop), spread the good word, the parents dig deep into Patagonia pockets and spread the green.

My kid needs shin guards?

Well, OK.

Oh, now my kid needs a new helmet?

No, of course I don't want to see her brains spilled on the ski slope.

My kid needs ANOTHER pair of skis? Why can't she wear the same ones for slalom and giant slalom? Do you have an installment payment plan? What do you mean, she outgrew her ski boots? It's not possible! She ripped her snow pants on the chair lift again? She broke her pole when she fell on it? She lost her goggles? Then she lost her contact lenses? Holy basher band, how can this be?!

Just slice open that carotid artery that runs from your bank account to the ATM machine and let the cash gush out in throbbing, regular intervals.

Why do we parishioners of the Church of Downhill Racing remain such true devotees? Why do we risk frostbite, chapped lips, and our 401K retirement fund to pay homage to the icy white hump on the horizon?

Once in a while, the racing gods smile benevolently upon us. In a split second, our kids charge across the finish line — arms out, knees bent, skis, poles and front teeth still intact — with a faster time than they've ever had before. Then they ski up to their parents (the ones who made it all possible), cheeks rosy with cold and exhilaration, and hug us. When that fleeting moment occurs, we all become converts to the Church of Downhill Racing.

Christmas Project chairman extends thanks to all

Editor:

With the hustle and bustle of the Christmas holidays now over, the trees, tinsel, and toys pitched out, packed away, and piled in a heap, it is time for that "long winter's nap" Clement Moore spoke of. But first, some thank you's had best be given out to those who helped make the Christmas of 1998 a little brighter for many people.

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project has many volunteers and "angels" to thank. As usual, it is a daunting task to manage to remember all of the names, so if we have left someone off this list, be assured it is not intentional.

Helping the project in many ways this year were the following:

— Clothing: Helen Henkel, Dan and Mary Farrell of Spring Lake; and socks and mittens from St. Mary's Altar Society, women of the Barnard Grange, and Eastern Stars Chapter #72;

— Books: the many angels from the Bridge Street Book Store Angel Tree, but also Kit and Dianne Foster, who provided 15 books themselves, and gift-wrapped all of the books from the tree;

— Food: Karl's Bakery, which provided rolls and pastries for workers; Charlevoix High School Ski Club, which gave fresh fruit for the Christmas Baskets; Harold Max; Churchill Transportation of Detroit via Patty Loper; Charlevoix Children's House; Pizza Hut; Pat McKeown; Bill Butsic of Swiss Miss Chocolate; Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors; Michelle Green and Jim Firness (venison); Harbor Industries; and, of course, the middle school students who gave the equivalent of 82,000 cans of food!

Also, we were gifted with money from Welcome Wagon (Mrs. Richard Tunison); Charlevoix Masonic Lodge; Frank Shepherd of Mt. Clemens; the Rainbow Shoppe; the Zonta Club (which also provided Christmas for three families); and the middle school students with their $19,000 contribution. In addition to all of this, Safe Harbor Baptist Church provided Christmas for

Packing supplies for the Peruvian people

Villagers living just above subsistence agriculture standards in Peru will receive much needed first aid when Charlevoix native Nancy Dammann returns with health supplies donated by Charlevoix Area hospital.

Dammann received a large package of first aid supplies and drugs from the hospital before she recently headed back to remote areas of the Peruvian Amazon.

Dammann has traveled to the South American region on two previous trips. She plans to stay this time for one year, at the communities' request, to help with basic health care needs at a community health center in the village of Dos De Mayo. The village is a four-day boat trip upriver from the nearest city of Iquitos, Peru.

On this particular trip, Dammann will be concentrating on environmental research and community development to help villagers develop sustainable alternatives to commercial fishing.

A sale of her photos from previous travels to Peru was recently held at McLean & Eakin Booksellers in Petoskey, with proceeds of the sale going to buy books for a newly constructed high school.

New parent support group formed

A new parent support group is being offered for parents with children who are infants through second grade students.

Seven sessions for the parent support group have been scheduled in two different locations, with morning or evening groups offered — one in Boyne City and one in Charlevoix. The groups will meet Wednesday, Feb. 17, 24, March 3, 10, 17, 24 and 31.

The Boyne City support group will meet in the mornings at the Boyne City Elementary School, 930 Brockway, Boyne City, with the following schedule:

— Morning group: 8:30-8:45 a.m., continental breakfast served (no charge), 8:45-10 a.m., parent and child components (materials provided), 10-10:30 a.m., all together, children share what they learned with parents.

— Evening group will meet at the Charlevoix Elementary School, 13513 Division St., Charlevoix, with the following schedule: 5:30-6 p.m., dinner will be served (no charge), 6-7:30 p.m., parent and child components (materials provided), 7:30-8 p.m., all together, children share what they learn with parents.

Child care will be provided for infants.

The parent program being used to facilitate the program is S.T.E.P. (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting). There is no cost. The program is funded by a grant from Strong Families, Safe Children and staffed by Char-Em ISD Early Education Consortium and Chip Counseling Center.

Beware of phone scam

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to advise the citizens of the county of a nationwide telephone scam.

The person doing the scam poses as a line tester and tells you to dial 9, then 0, followed by the pound key, and then to hang up.

Doing this gives that person full access to your telephone line, which allows them to make phone calls that will be charged to your number.

If you get such a call, hang up immediately and report it to your phone company and to the sheriff's department at 547-4461.

It would be totally impossible to name the volunteers who worked on this project, but we can list Mary Seaman's Honor Society and seminar class, who worked on double-bagging the sacks and who carried groceries to cars; and the students who wrapped mittens and socks under Marge Romig's direction.

It is a wonderful feeling to realize that so many people in this small town touched so many others' lives in order to make Christmas happier for them. Of course, in return, our own Christmases were happier also.

Thanks to all of you who participated and Happy New Year, Charlevoix!

Zonta announces winner of young women's scholarship

Leah Dulaney (center) receives the Zonta Young Women in Public Affairs Award, with school counselor Toni Felter (left) and Leah's mother, Mrs. Dulaney.

Charlevoix Area Zonta is offering their eighth annual Young Women in Public Affairs Award of $500, to be awarded to a young woman currently enrolled in a secondary school living in Charlevoix County.

Winner of the 1997 award was Leah Dulaney of Charlevoix, who is currently enrolled at DePaul University in Chicago.

Dulaney was selected because she exemplifies the intent of the award by participating in community activities such as serving the local senior center dinners, reading at the elementary school to first and second grade students, assisting with the Sunshine Club, an after-school day care program, bagging and transporting food at the local food pantry, singing in the community choir, raking leaves for senior citizens and making mission trips to Chicago.

A member of the National Honor Society, Dulaney worked on fund-raising activities for two years to build the National Honor Society Scholarship Fund.

As a young woman of the 20th century, Dulaney attended investment seminars, speaker nights at North Central Michigan College, used the Internet to compare news stories from various sources, was editor of the Crimson Timez, the Charlevoix High School newspaper, and was secretary-treasurer of the student council.

Her international awareness was intensified by her trip to Spain with the high school Spanish Club.

The Zonta International Young Women in Public Affairs Award Competition, established in 1990, is open to young women currently enrolled in secondary school. The award is designed to encourage women to pursue decision-making positions in their communities in order to impact the policies that affect the lives of women in the community and throughout the world.

Applicants are asked to reflect on their lives, their commitment to their communities in which they live, and the role models that have inspired them to become involved in the community or a specific project or career. The program looks to the young women of today who will be the leaders of tomorrow.

· Applications are available at the counselors' offices at high schools in Charlevoix County.

Applications may also be obtained by calling 547-4822 (days) or 547-2474 (evenings) and asking for Joan.

Applications must be submitted to the Charlevoix Area Zonta by Feb. 1, 1999. The winner will be announced at the Feb. 24 meeting of Charlevoix Area Zonta.

The recipient of the local award will have her application forwarded to the district Zonta, which also awards $500 to the district winner.

Zonta International, headquartered in Chicago, Ill., is a worldwide service organization of professional people and executives in business working together to advance the status of women. The Zonta International Young Women in Public Affairs Award is one of many programs for women and girls sponsored by Zonta International.

Wedding

Lisa Marie Burzynski and Daniel Leo Spang were married July 4, 1998 in an afternoon, outdoor wedding mass at the Cross In The Woods Shrine in Indian River. The groom's uncle Rev. Michael F. Nartker performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Lenard and Shasta Burzynski of Sault Ste. Marie, and James and Peggy Spang of Charlevoix.

The bride wore a white satin and georgette floor-length fitted gown with a detachable train. The gown featured a fitted satin bodice lined with piping, a hand-beaded sweetheart neckline and capped sleeves. The three-layer georgette skirt was attached to the bodice at the fitted V-waist. The satin, cathedral-length train was embroidered with ribbon streamers and 24 handmade rosettes. The dress was designed and made by the bride. The bride wore her paternal grandmother's floor length veil attached with a tiara. She carried a bouquet of fire-and-ice roses with spring rye. The bride was escorted down the cobblestone aisle by her father, Lenard Burzynski.

Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Julianna Burzynski, and matron of honor was Kami Avery, both of Sault Ste. Marie. The bridesmaids were the groom's sisters, Amy Yesney of Kewaunee, Wis., Ann Spang and Meg Spang, both of Charlevoix. They wore floor-length, navy georgette gowns. The sleeveless jewel bodice was attached to the flowing skirt by an empire waist. The flower girls, Kaylee Avery of the Sault, Moriah Burleson and Rebecca Burleson of Marquette, all wore white satin and georgette gowns similar to the bride's gown.

Groomsmen were Jason Pajtas of Denver, Colo., Bill Johnston of Ypsilanti, Ron Yesney of Kewaunee, Wis., Charles Meier of Charlevoix and Matt Robinson of Minneapolis, Minn. Ring bearer was Kody Avery of the Sault and the train bearer was Brandon Burleson of Marquette.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Lisa Cryderman, accompanied by vocalists Brenda Krasiejko and Sam Fields.

A dinner and dance reception was held at the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus Hall following the candle lighting ceremony. A one-week honeymoon trip was spent on Galveston Island, Texas, followed by a two-week road trip out west. The couple now resides in Charlevoix.

The groom is a 1997 graduate of Northern Michigan University, employed by Michigan Scientific Corp. as a manufacturing technologist. The bride is a 1998 graduate of Northern Michigan University and is working at Charlevoix State Bank.

Historical dinner hosted

The Charlevoix Historical Society is hosting a special historical get-together at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 2 at the Depot Museum.

Remembrance of Times Past will be the theme for the potluck dinner. All members plus any guests are cordially invited. A panel of long-time residents chock full of stories — Charlie Bleha, Betty Cole, Myrtle Fulton, Max Novak and Oscar Stroud — will host the proceedings, remembering what it was like in Charlevoix as far back as the teens and '20s. They should give is quite a few insightful points of view and plenty of laughs.

Full audience participation along the way and afterward will be heartily encouraged (there will be a microphone available). Were Charlevoix's old days better days? Find out through this program.

Whip up your prize-winning recipe to share, bring your own dishes and silver and join the historical society for an excellent evening. In case of bad weather, the meeting and dinner will be rescheduled for 6 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Anyone who is hesitant to drive on a winter evening may arrange for a ride by calling Mike Bergeon at 547-2742.

Tree planted in Florida in memory of Bill Lusk

In the heart of the Ocala National Forest that he loved, 45 campers and winter residents gathered together to plant a red holly tree and hold a memorial service for Charlevoix native G.W. "Bill" Lusk Saturday, Jan. 23. Since his retirement from Harbor Industries, Bill and his wife, Shirley, made an annual pilgrimage to "Loop A, Site 7," during the colder months. When Bill passed away earlier in the fall, his camping friends and neighbors from all across the country and parts of Canada wanted to recognize the special place he held in their lives.

National Park Service rangers in attendance at the service referred to him as "Mr. Alexander Springs." Bill's goodwill work extended to an early morning tradition of rising and raking the beach at the springs to make it as presentable as possible for all who came to enjoy its warm waters. Memories covered some unique times and tales from Charlevoix, along with a rendition of "Old King Cole" that Bill was fondly remembered for. Presiding at the outdoor gathering was Pastor Bruce Hamilton, formerly of the Community Church of God and now senior minister at the Haines Creek Church of God in Leesburg, Fla.

The holly tree planted in Lusk's memory is located just inside the main gate to Alexander Springs on the right side of the road.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum
First Congregational Church, UCC

As we move into this new year and already start to "think spring" (at least that's what I do; it helps get me through the winter), this delightful story has something to say to us:

A gardener was walking through his fields one spring day when he tripped over a one gallon glass jug in his pumpkin patch. He eyed the jug for a moment, and then decided to try an experiment. He poked a small pumpkin through the neck of the jug, being careful not to break the vine and left it to rest there on the ground. When the time for harvest came, the gardener again found the glass jug, and to his surprise and delight, the pumpkin had completely filled it. However, when it had reached the limits of the container it had stopped growing. When the gardener broke the jug he saw that the pumpkin had taken the jug's exact size and shape.

This little parable can be applied to how we see the new year and what we do with it. Our expectations are, in fact, what give shape and focus to our future. As our expectations are low, so our life will be very limited. As our expectations are high, so our life will take on many exciting possibilities. Oliver Wendell Holmes said sadly: "Most folks die with all their music still in them." In this new year, let us first have great expectations of ourselves. Then, let's have great expectations of others. And finally and most important, let's have great expectations of God.

Surely, one of the forces that drives our great expectations of God, much like it drove the biblical people, is the realization that God expects great things of us. Yes, God has very high hopes for each of us, so high in fact that he sent us Jesus. As scripture reminds us, "God so loved the world that he sent His only Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." (John 3:16) As we expect great things of God, so we'll receive great things from God. That's something to celebrate every day of the year!

New Charlevoix land conservancy is making an impact

With just a few months of operations under its belt, the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy is already gaining momentum and making an impact on local environmental and land preservation efforts. Now the new organization will have some financial support to help it grow.

Two new funds have been established within the Charlevoix County Community Foundation for the specific purpose of nurturing the upstart organization. The first, a special projects fund, will accept and manage donations for the land conservancy until the newly formed group completes the necessary legal requirements for its own nonprofit tax status. Once that tax-exempt status is obtained, the fund will be turned over to the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy. The second fund, a permanent endowment with the community foundation, will help meet the conservancy's long-term needs. Donations to the endowment will be carefully invested and managed over time, and only a portion of the earned income will be used for programs and operations so the fund can continue to grow and generate financial support well into the future.

Jo Anne Beemon, director of the new land conservancy, expressed her gratitude for the support.

"It's so important to have this kind of help at such a critical time in our development," she said. "Without the community foundation's technical assistance and the special projects fund, we'd have a much harder time getting up and running, while the endowment fund will give us a solid financial base to continue our work."

The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy was initiated to encourage greater local involvement in land stewardship and to protect the area's significant natural, agricultural, and scenic areas. As a part of that effort, the conservancy will work closely with schools and youth groups to cultivate a better understanding of, and appreciation for, the county's special ecological assets. Like the conservancy, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation stresses the involvement of young people in addressing local issues, and directs a portion of its grant-making to local environmental initiatives.

Those wishing to make a contribution to either the special fund for early support of the conservancy, or its permanent endowment, may do so by contacting the community foundation at 536-2440, or by writing them at: P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan, 49727. Information is also available by contacting the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy at 237-9335.

Consumers Energy gives funds locally

Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point Restoration Project and the Consumers Energy Foundation have awarded grants of $7,850 to help eight area organizations.

The Big Rock Point community partnership team approved the following grants:

— Bay Area Substance Abuse Education Services (B.A.S.E.S.), $4,000 to support the Charlevoix Teen Center. The grant supports the center's goal of raising $150,000 to buy the building it is renting. Buying the building at 208 W. Lincoln in Charlevoix will be a key step in making the center self-sufficient. The Charlevoix Teen Center provides a place for area youth to gather that is free of drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

— The Charlevoix Township Volunteer Fire Department, $1,500. The grant supports the purchase of portable radios.

— Camp Daggett, $1,000, to support camp improvements.

— The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy, $350. The donation supports the group's mission of advancing community land stewardship and protecting significant natural, agricultural and scenic areas in Charlevoix County.

— Michigan Special Olympics, $150, to support athletic training and competition opportunities for people with developmental disabilities.

The Consumers Energy Foundation awarded three Volunteer Investment Program grants to recognize the volunteer efforts of Big Rock Point employees. The following organizations were awarded grants:

— The Charlevoix Youth Basketball program, $400. Big Rock Point maintenance and construction supervisor Larry Potter and decommissioning worker Larry Skippergosh serve as volunteer coaches. The grant supports the purchase of equipment for the league.

— The Top of Michigan Trails Council, $250, to recognize the volunteer efforts of retired Big Rock Point employee Jerry Corley. Corley is a council board member and serves as chairman of the Charlevoix County Trail committee. The grant supports non motorized trail expansion in northern Michigan.

— The Charlevoix Friends of the Pool, $200, to recognize the volunteer efforts of reactor engineer Kevin Shields. Shields served as a receptionist and in an administrative role at the pool. The grant supports pool operations.

The Consumers Energy Foundation sponsors the Volunteer Investment Program to recognize employees and retirees who donate personal time to nonprofit groups. Employees and retirees who volunteer more than 45 hours to qualifying organizations are eligible to apply for grants to benefit the group.

Local employee community partnership teams review grant applications for eligibility and determine grant amounts. Grant amounts are based on the level of leadership and time commitment of the employee or retiree, the organization's response to community needs and other criteria.

The Consumers Energy Foundation is the philanthropic arm of Consumers Energy. It provides funding to areas including education, the environment, Michigan growth and enhancement, culture and the arts, social services and emerging issues. In 1999, the foundation will make approximately $1.7 million in charitable investments throughout Michigan.

Help: Be a Big Brother or Big Si[illegible]ter

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northwestern Michigan has hired a new caseworker for the program in Emmet and Charlevoix Counties. Kara Rosel, who graduated with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Sociology from Western Michigan University, will begin her duties with the agency the first week in January.

Rosel is a Petoskey native. She was on the Dean's List at Western Michigan University from 1996 through 1998, received the Clifford and Ella Chapman Distinguished Senior Scholarship, was a Sociology Honors Society Member, and received the Leonard C. Kercher Award. She has volunteered for the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey, and for Planned Parenthood of South Central Michigan.

The casework position was made possible through grants from the Frey Foundation of Grand Rapids, and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. The Frey Foundation has granted the organization $35,000 over the next two years, and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has awarded a grant of $8,000 over the next three years. The Frey Foundation, based in Grand Rapids, is one of Michigan's largest family foundations.

"What these two grants are allowing us to do is provide time for development of the program in the two counties," said Executive Director, Kay Vandervort. The organization expects to double the number of children being served over the next two years. Additionally, the mentoring options will be diversified to include site-based mentoring as well as the traditional Big Brothers-Big Sisters program.

For long term stability of the program, said Vandervort, it will be critical to recruit and train a committed group of volunteers to serve in a board role. "If the program is to continue beyond the grant period," Vandervort said, "it will because individuals in the communities we serve make it happen." Local board volunteers assist with fundraising and volunteer recruitment for the Emmet and Charlevoix County program. They assist in identifying needs of service and in representing the program to the community.

Big Brothers Big Sisters is a one-to-one mentoring program that accepts children between the ages of 6 and 12 who are from single parent families. Once enrolled in the program, children may remain matched until they graduate from high school. "They're great children," said Vandervort, "who just need someone who will be their friend to spend a little time with."

The volunteers are age 18 and older, have reliable transportation, and are available to make at least a six month commitment to the child. Volunteers come from all walks of life and are matched with children based on mutual interests and preference.

While the majority of Big Brother-Big Sister relationsh[illegible] are a one adult to one child m[illegible] there are additional mentorin[illegible]tions. A couple may be matc[illegible] with one child. "The advantage[illegible]e child is the opportunity to [illegible] healthy adult relationship," [illegible] Vandervort, "and to gain the [illegible]fit of two volunteers for one c[illegible] For volunteers it means that [illegible] can trade off their volunteer [illegible] between spouses, or have the [illegible]ibility of spending the time to[illegible] with the child.

The agency will al[illegible]tch families with a child, or [illegible] a parent and child with one c[illegible]n the program.

Research done by [illegible]ic/Private Ventures, a nonpr[illegible] research foundation in Phil[illegible]hia, indicates that children m[illegible]d in Big Brothers-Big Sisters [illegible]ess likely to initiate drug and al[illegible]ol use, less likely to skip school, [illegible] likely to lie to a parent, and less likely to act out violently. Local [illegible]search also indicates that children [illegible]prove self esteem, improve sc[illegible]l performance, and improve [illegible]r communication skills.

For information on [illegible] to volunteer as a Big Brother [illegible] Big Sister, to serve on the board, [illegible] to enter a child in the program, call 348-7510 or 1-800-968-2447.

Huskies use 20-6 fourth quarter surge to edge by Charlevoix

Showdown of area unbeaten teams goes to Benzie Central as Rayders squander a fourth quarter lead

By Jamie MacMillan

It was a week of firsts for the Charlevoix Rayders basketball team last week.

Their week began with a 69-58 win over Petoskey for the school's first season sweep of the rival Northmen since the 1989-90 season. The week ended, however, with a 73-69 loss to Benzie Central, which was the team's first loss of the current season.

The 1-1 week put the team's record at 8-1, but the Rayders remain on top of the Lake Michigan Conference with a 4-0 record.

The loss to the high-powered Huskies, who were ranked no. 4 in class C coming into the game, was heartbreaking. The Rayders were able to forge leads of nine points, 42-33, at the half and 10 points, 63-53, entering the game's final frame.

Bolstered by a raucous home crowd that refused to allow their team to lose, the Huskies dominated the fourth quarter, outscoring the Rayders 20-6 to steal the win.

"It was a great game and we played really well for the first three quarters," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "We seemed to hit a lapse in the fourth quarter and let it slip away."

Turnovers on three consecutive possessions by Charlevoix, midway through the fourth period, began a spurt for the Huskies that saw them wipe away a double digit deficit and take a one point lead, 70-69.

The Rayders twice looked to take back the lead, but Matt McClellan was blocked on his way to the hoop and a 15-footer from Jim Kanine rattled off the rim.

Benzie's Jake Milarch secured the rebound after Kanine's miss, was fouled and canned two freebies to give his club a 72-69 lead with 11 seconds left.

A desperation trey to tie the game by McClellan was off and the Huskies added a free throw for the final difference.

Sean Stockman led the Rayders, playing his best game of the season, and scoring 19 points on a variety of inside moves. McClellan added 16 points, Kanine dished out eight assists and Matt Dennis grabbed six rebounds.

The Rayders and Huskies could lock horns again if both make this year's regional finals. In a rematch, the Rayders need to do a better job of containing Benzie's inside-outside duo of point guard Milarch and forward Mike Zych.

The duo combined for 40 points and Zych was the best player on the court in the last quarter, scoring three interior baskets and stepping outside to cash a three-pointer.

"It's a little disappointing," Haske said. "Maybe we wore down because we weren't as sharp defensively in the fourth as we had been all year."

The Rayders had reason, though, to wear down. The Benzie contest was the fourth straight "big game" the club played. Against foes whose combined records are 25-5, the Rayders went 3-1 with wins over Elk Rapids, Kalkaska and Petoskey.

The win over the Northmen came during a contest that was dominated by offense in the first half and defense in the second half.

Leading by seven at intermission, the Rayders upped their lead to 52-42 after three quarters and 61-45 midway through the final stanza to cruise to their second win this season over Petoskey.

"We talked a lot about bragging rights," Haske said. "It's something our seniors had pointed to and will always remember."

In junior varsity action, the club fell to Petoskey, 69-46, but rebounded to edge Benzie Central, 74-71. In the win, Scott Parrish led Charlevoix with 20 points and six rebounds while Jeremiah Teuscher scored 15 and also snared six rebounds. The JV Rayders are 6-3.

The teams return to action this week with two conference games. They played at home last night, Tuesday, against East Jordan, but results were incomplete at press time. They will play next at Harbor Springs on Friday, Jan. 29.

A junior varsity game tips the night off at 6 p.m.

Rayder racers ski to league wins over Elks and Gladiators

Tiffany Fisher skis to a pair of wins as teams combine for 15 top-ten finishes

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix ski teams raced in only one meet last week, but did so successfully in sweeping a conference meet against Elk Rapids and Traverse City-St. Francis.

Bolstered by a pair of first place finishes by junior Tiffany Fisher in the slalom and giant slalom, the girls' team edged by Elk Rapids 36-44. Traverse City-St. Francis was a distant third with 90 points.

After Fisher, Kelly Kusina placed sixth in slalom, seventh in GS; Kirsten Brendtro, fifth slalom, fifth GS; and Marie Serrels, third slalom, eighth GS.

Behind the skilled tandem of Steve Pirie and Todd Freidinger, the boys' club scored 42 points and enjoyed a larger margin of victory. St. Francis was second with 60 points and Elk Rapids third with 63.

Pirie and Freidinger placed second and third respectively in both the slalom and GS events.

Landon Bassett won both events for Elk Rapids.

Rounding out the Charlevoix results was Roscoe Serrels, eighth slalom, fifth GS; Kyle Louiselle, 12th slalom, seventh GS; Joel Trubilowicz, 15th slalom, 14th GS; Jim Dilworth, 14th slalom; and Shawn MacMillan, eighth GS.

"The team skied well," coach Sue Miller said. "There was no time for inspection, so the Charlevoix racers won the race without being allowed to practice on the course."

The meet at Cadillac last Friday was canceled due to icy weather.

The skiers will race next at 2:30 p.m. at Nub's Nob in a conference meet against Harbor Springs, Kalkaska and Traverse City-St. Francis.

The team will also ski at Boyne Mountain against Boyne City at 6 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 30 and at Crystal Mountain in the Manistee Invitational at 10 a.m. Monday, Feb. 1.

Middle school players also enjoy victories

Amid some sticky defense, Kyle Kramer squares up along the baseline and drops in two of his 10 points in last week's seventh grade win. Bryce Daly also scored 10 points in the team's 30-point win over the Chiefs. Charlevoix's eighth grade team also beat Cheboygan, 39-22, last week. Todd Carey led the way with 14 points and Nate Teuscher scored 11 for the Rayders. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Land of the loons is being protected

The haunting cry of the common loon is a symbol of the north, a sound that affects all who hear it.

Now, thanks to the support of local residents and the work of the Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy (GTRLC), the call of loons can be heard for generations to come on Lake Bellaire. This week, the conservancy announced the permanent protection of 16 acres and 1,290 feet of wetland frontage surrounding one of only seven pairs of active loons throughout the entire Chain of Lakes.

"Loons are an extremely sensitive bird, and are very affected by disturbance," said Ty Ratliff, Antrim County Land Protection Specialist. "Considering the rapid loss of habitat in northern Michigan, it was imperative that we tried to protect land that has already been chosen as suitable for these threatened birds."

The land was purchased from Jane and Doug Moulds, who used to own a house just down the road. When they decided to sell the property, they were approached by several realtors who wanted to split the land into lots, but the Moulds wanted to see the land protected for wildlife. The sensitive wetlands and cedar swamp also provide habitat for many wildlife species including otter and deer and abundant wildflowers.

A timely encounter put the Moulds in touch with Ratliff, who then started a fund-raising campaign to protect the property.

"The support given for this land has been from an excellent mix of residents, large donors, local lake associations, and the local media," added Ratliff. "Not only was this project protecting a wild and relatively rare species, but all donations given to the project have fallen under our Chain of Lakes Challenge Campaign. This means that donations were doubled with the matching funds going toward a Chain of Lakes land protection endowment fund."

Ratliff gives much credit to Debbi Stevens and her husband, Gary Andrus, as the driving force behind the acquisition effort. Debbi made the initial call to start the process, and has optimistically "pushed" the entire project through. Because of the couple's role in protecting the land, they were asked to name the new preserve and have chosen to call it "Golden Days Loon Preserve."

Ratliff also emphasized that the regional conservancy still has a debt of approximately $7,000 to complete the final purchase of the land.

"We are still seeking donors who are willing to give to this project. Not only do we need to recoup costs we've accrued, but we also want to raise funds to purchase additional acreage adjacent to the loon habitat property," she said.

Staff members have already been in contact with adjoining landowners about the possibility of adding to the Golden Days Loon Preserve. Funds will also be used to identify and acquire loon habitat throughout the entire Chain of Lakes.

For more information, please contact Ty at (616) 929-7911. The Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy is a nonprofit land protection organization. Since 1991, they have protected over 6,000 acres of land, including more than 18 miles of shoreline. Between now and Dec. 31, all contributions given toward the loon project or the Chain of Lakes region will be doubled through the Chain of Lakes Challenge Campaign.

"The man who fails to advertise just because conditions are a little uncertain is on par with the farmer who refuses to feed his cows because the price of butter has gone down."

Former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

SCRAPBOOK

First flight to Beaver Island was an emergency run

By Geoffrey D. Reynolds

The headline read, "Aeroplane as First Aid-Flying Ship Carries Doctor to Beavers," and with it air transportation had come to Beaver Island. Something that seems so common today was ushered in by a desperate need for medical assistance and a doctor's desire to help.

Dr. Robert Bruce Armstrong settled in Charlevoix in the fall of 1894 after receiving his medical degree from the University of Michigan. Originally from Ormal, New York, the young Armstrong made house calls to the residents of the greater Charlevoix area. Examinations and minor surgery were commonly performed at a kitchen table after an arduous journey by foot, buggy, or sleigh. One particular "house call," however, involved air travel to visit a young patient, Jesse Cole.

Jesse Cole was a resident of Beaver Island and came from a long list of Cole's that had worked and lived on the island for many years. On Saturday, Feb. 3, 1923 while loading logs with a "jammer," he received a skull fracture from the upended machinery and needed help soon to save his life. Three days later, after being prompted by a frantic call for help from his sister, a plane was dispatched from Selfridge Air Base in Mt. Clemens to Charlevoix. There the pilot and his mechanic were to pick up a doctor and head for Beaver Island. After that plane made a forced landing in Gaylord, another was dispatched from the base with the same destination. Two hours and 40 minutes later the Osprey II and its pilot, Russell L. Meredith, and mechanic, O.R. Schnabel, landed on the ice of Pine Lake (Lake Charlevoix) near the Belvedere Club dock. After a short wait for Dr. Armstrong, the pilot and doctor left on a 15 minute flight to the island, leaving behind the mechanic to make room for the possibly returning patient. After eyeing a good landing spot on Lake Geneserath, the rescue party landed and was transported about one mile to the injured boy by sleigh..

After treating the boy's injury, the good doctor and pilot settled in for three days to observe his recovery. Soon it became apparent that a bitter cold trip on the airplane was not an option for Jesse Cole and it was decided to leave him on the island with proper instructions for his care with the boy's family. Any change for the worse was to be reported by telegraph. And then they were off, back to Charlevoix to drop off Armstrong and pick up the mechanic for the long flight back to southeast Michigan. Fortunately for Beaver Island residents, air travel became available to the island from Charlevoix a few years later and medical care became a standard for its residents.

To learn more about the history of local physicians and medical care contact Harsha House Museum Director Betsy Reynolds for an appointment at 547-0373.

School may send postcards to gauge community desires

Prior to elections in the summer of 1996, the school board commissioned a survey through a professional organization headed by Kathy Feaster. That survey revealed that the only project the majority of the community would support would be a new middle school. Despite 54 percent of the respondents supporting a new middle school, Feaster told the board that it lacked a large enough support base to pass any bond proposal.

Current board member Scott Boss, who backs a new high school, said a new political climate exists and that more effort to gauge the community sentiment needs to be made.

"There was a lot of smoke and baggage back then," added board member Dennis Halverson. "Now we can start with a fresh slate."

Another survey could cost between $7,000-$8,000. Sturock suggested a simpler and less expensive route.

The new superintendent proposed sending post cards to those who voted in the last election. On those cards, two simple questions would be asked: Do you support a new high school or a middle school and what location would you support for a new school?

The cards would also include a pre-addressed envelope so residents can respond with ease. Sturock said the project would cost less than $1,000.

The board was favorable to the idea, which Sturock said was effective at his former school district in Williamston.

While he has only been with the district for five months, Sturock said it's obvious that the district faces three facility problems, one at each school.

He said the elementary school suffers from overcrowding, the middle school is old and decrepit and the high school is becoming outdated.

Surprisingly, Sturock labeled the space crunch at the K-5 as the district's most pressing problem.

"We have kids in the hallway," he said. "I don't know what else we can do short of putting up more portables."

Sturock said that either a new high school or a new middle school would solve the K-5 overcrowding. If the district builds a new building, then it is expected that grades would be reconfigured to include a K-4 elementary school and a 5-8 middle school.

"If we don't arrive at the right solution, we will be failing our kids," Sturock said. "We've got to put our best foot forward. We can't afford a loss."

Wall Street extends to the middle school

By Jamie MacMillan

The image of a Wall Street stock broker is easy to picture. He wears three-piece suits and neckties so expensive it would dwarf the clothing allowance for most of us. This person, whose hair is fashionably slicked back, is a fountain of information and stock terms, and the regular person off the street would need a translator just to keep up.

That image may be close to accurate, but it is slowly being shattered at, of all places, the Charlevoix Middle School.

Josh Block, the computer teacher at the middle school, recently transformed his second story lab into a Wall Street trading floor. His class of eighth grade students, using a mock budget of $10,000 apiece, set out to find the market's biggest stocks and hidden gems.

"We have eighth graders in their Nikes and T-shirts making the same decisions as the brokers," Block said. "Some of them made money, but others lost their shirts."

The stock game, as Block called

Picture perfect weather

Nobody could complain about the weather last weekend, when sunny skies and mild temperatures made it ideal to do just about anything outdoors. These women certainly weren't complaining about the conditions at Boyne Mountain last Saturday. One year later: expelled student is admitted back to Charlevoix schools

By Jamie MacMillan

Last week, the Charlevoix Board of Education approved, without dissent, a resolution allowing an expelled student back into the halls of the Charlevoix Schools.

The board met during the early morning hours last Friday, Jan. 29, so that the student, Joseph Angermuller, could begin classes as a freshman at high school that same day.

Angermuller was expelled stemming from an incident at a middle school dance last January, where the student was found in possession of a knife as well as a brass knuckle-like device. Possession of the blade, which was over three inches in length, placed the student in violation of the state's Weapons Free School law, which requires a mandatory expulsion of at least 180 school days from any public school in the state.

A reluctant board expelled Angermuller, who was placed on suspension after the dance last Feb. 25. The school has its own policy which gives the board discretion to suspend rather than expel, but board president Allen Telgenhof said at the time that the board's hands were tied due to the state statute.

According to the law, the family was allowed to petition for rein-

it, is a semi-annual project that eighth graders in Block's semester-long computer class do during the last few weeks of the class. It's not a new project, but one that Block began when he started teaching at the school in 1995 as a way to teach kids how to read spread sheets.

"I wanted to teach them how to manipulate and analyze the data, but with something that had more relevance than 'five kids like pizza' or 'three girls like dogs.'"

Before buying and selling stocks, students first must pass tests and quizzes on the vocabulary of Wall Street and fraction mathematics. Then they must do a fair share of research before choosing stocks.

"We really want to get the kids thinking and making educated decisions," Block said.

Students are placed on a $10,000 budget and Block's only other parameters are that they purchase at least 20 shares of six different stocks. This past semester, students "purchased" their shares prior to the holiday break and roller-coasted with them until the end of the school term last week.

The project was enhanced this year, since students were able to use the Internet for the first time to do all their research, buying and selling.

In prior years, students weren't able to research prospective stocks that much. To track stocks, Block would cut out days-old stock quotes from the newspaper. He said that at times the project became a "hassle," and he questioned how much meaning the project had with students.

"First hour, for example, would meet before the U.S. markets were even open," he said. "The Internet has allowed us to take the unit into a greater depth and further analysis."

Classmates Lorna Kilborn and Marshall Bakker review their stock portfolios. Block said the project was meant to teach students how to read spread sheets. Now, it has evolved into one of the school's first Internet-based projects. (Photos by Jamie MacMillan)

It has also sparked an added enthusiasm in the students as they get into the project. They now check their stocks twice a day and the Internet's quotes are only 15 minutes delayed from actual time. Some students who have access at home charted their stocks over the holiday break.

"The stock pages in the paper didn't have that much information," student Marshall Bakker said. "On the Internet, everything was more up-to-date and we could go back and see what a stock has done for an entire year."

For the most part, students logged on to the Yahoo search engine home page, branching off from there to find information and track the success of stocks.

Block's lab of 23 computers gained complete access to the World Wide Web at the beginning of the school year. He said in the past he was reluctant to do any Internet projects because only a handful of the machines had the capability. Now that the lab is fully equipped it was easy, he said, to make this an Internet project.

For many students, this was the first school project which relied heavily on Internet access.

"I wasn't that enthused at first," student Natashia Kleiber said of using the Internet. "In the end it was fun and it led me to get the Internet at home."

Playing the stock market, however, is a lot like playing the ponies. There is a ton of risk involved, nothing is a sure thing and some hard life lessons can be learned when your own money is tied up in gambling-like ventures.

What did the students learn from their first foray into Wall Street?

Bakker said that if he were doing this for real, he would let his stocks grow for a longer period of time, but also wouldn't spread his resources out into five or six different stocks.

"I might go into it only if I had a lot of money, because it is pretty risky," Kleiber said. "With all the technology coming along making this easier, it's a good thing to learn."

statement after the first 180 school days and their case was heard by a special school committee which would make a recommendation to the large board.

The committee consisted of high school principal Gary Grundman, teacher Kristy Graham, parent Charlene Spencley and board members Ardeth Wieland and Michael MacMillan.

After a 30 minute hearing last Tuesday evening, the committee unanimously recommended the student's reinstatement.

"You could tell that he understood his responsibility," Grundman said. "He has a realistic view of what it takes to be successful."

Despite the student's dismissal from the district, the school still received its student foundation allowance from the state for Angermuller. Grundman said the school used that money to help home school Angermuller, especially this past fall, so he wouldn't be too far behind his freshmen classmates, Grundman said.

Graham was hired prior to the school year to be a part-time communications teacher, but she doubled as a tutor for Angermuller. Grundman said her experiences with the young student helped solidify the committee's recommendation.

"It was clear that the young man was ready to return," Grundman said. "This is one of those stories that has a happy ending."

The board next meets at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 8.

City continues to pursue purchase of Wharfside building

By Laurie Lounsbury

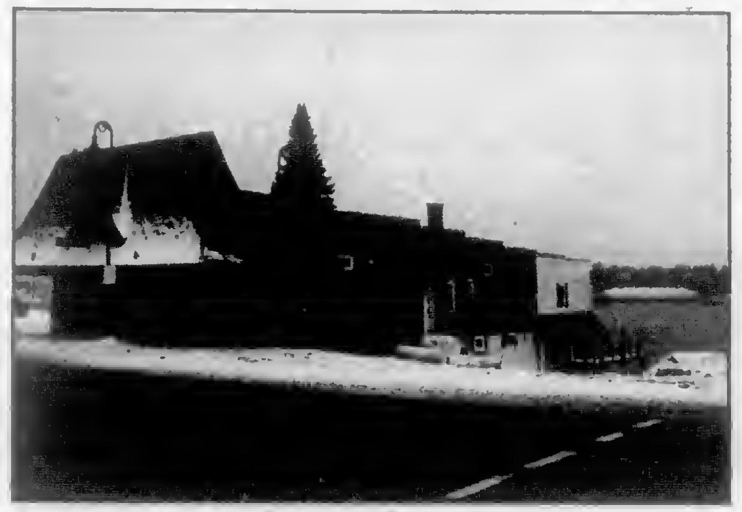
Members of the Charlevoix City Council and Downtown Development Authority (DDA) have given their approval for the city to try to acquire the former Wharfside building.

In special meetings, both the DDA and city council voted to apply for a grant that would allow the city to buy, then demolish, the building next to the band shell in East Park.

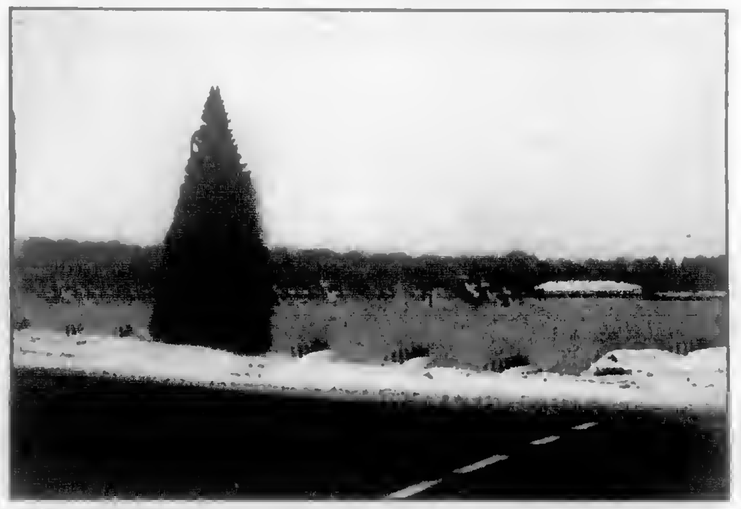
The plan would be to tear down the building that currently houses Kilwin's and North Seas Gallery and turn it into green space, creating a larger view corridor along Bridge Street.

"As long as Kilwin's and North Seas Gallery can relocate in town, I think it would be great," said Hugh Mason, chairman of the DDA.

The two businesses would not be booted out of their space if the grant is approved. Terms of the grant allow tenants to stay in the building until their lease has expired.



Before: This is the current view of Round Lake with the Wharfside building in place, seen from the corner of Mason and Bridge streets. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)



After: With the wizardry of computer enhancement, we were able to get an idea of what the same view would be without the Wharfside in the way. (Computer enhancement by Roger Gilbert and John Schaller)

What is unknown is how much the city will have to pay for the building, if the grant is approved.

The city recently had the building appraised, but the appraised value of the property has not been released. According to the Michigan Freedom of Information Act, the city does not have to reveal the appraised value of the property until they have entered into a contract agreement to purchase the property.

The city is seeking grant money from the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), which has money available for enhancement activities that include scenic acquisitions. Apparently MDOT will pay a large portion of the cost of projects that improve the landscape and streetscapes along highways.

In other business, the city continues to prepare the annual budget for the fiscal year 1999-2000. A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 15.

Councilman questions benefit of rescue dive team

By Laurie Lounsbury

Although the city has budgeted money for the Charlevoix rescue dive team, diver John Fiedorek attended Monday's budget work session and city council meeting to ensure funding for the group.

In the budget work session held before the council meeting, councilman Bob Timms questioned the sense of spending $1,000 in taxpayer money for a rescue dive team.

"With the time it takes to get into a wet suit and gear, it becomes a recovery situation, not a rescue situation," Timms said. "You wouldn't save anybody anyway. It's an unnecessary expense for the taxpayer to pay."

Fiedorek acknowledged that, in his four years on the dive team, he hasn't been called to try to rescue a person who went through the ice and might still be alive.

"I've never been called to a rescue through the ice, but I'd hate to think we weren't in a position to do so if the situation occurred," Fiedorek said.

Fiedorek talked about the golden hour, when a person submerged in very cold water can still be revived up to an hour after being underwater. He also said that the divers on the team pay for their own equipment, and the city pays only for special training.

City treasurer Rick Brandi later confirmed that the city has spent $1,070 on training for the dive team so far this year, an amount supported by city manager Mike Wiesner.

"It seems like a pretty cheap insurance policy if we ever need them," Wiesner said.

Timms then approached the expenditure from another angle.

"The money would be more beneficial to kids for swimming lessons at the pool," Timms said.

Performing arts team sweeps districts, now headed for regional competition

The Charlevoix Rayder Performing Arts team achieved an overall rating of "Excellent" along with two "Superior" ratings for set design and music in the state district competition held last weekend in Big Rapids. With the ratings, the team will advance to the regional competition with their rendition of "Oklahoma."

The team's performance was significant because they were competing against perennial powerhouses Holland High School and Holland West Ottawa.

The regional competition will take place in two weeks. A good performance at the regional level will send the Rayders to the state finals.

"Oklahoma" will be performed for the public in Charlevoix Feb. 28 and 29 after the team has completed their rounds of competition.

OPINIONS

Bad cookies are road hazards on the information highway

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

After living like a dinosaur still roaming the earth long after my brethren had become oil pockets in the sediment, I decided it was time to jump on that electronic novelty, the Internet.

I wanted to be in the loop.

I wanted to send and receive e-mail.

I wanted to immerse myself in up-to-the-minute news, information, culture, arts and affordable vacation spots.

Oh, boy, oh boy, I just couldn't wait.

My husband handled the nuts and bolts (or wires and software) of getting us connected to Freeway, our local Internet service provider.

After that, I rolled his office chair (with him in it) out of my way and plunged onto the Internet.

With the click of the mouse, glorious, colorful images swam in front of my eyes.

"Do you want Easy Internet Access?" a dancing headline asked me.

"Yes, yes, I want easy Internet access!" I told it by clicking obediently on a little icon.

"Do you want an e-mail box?" it asked me.

"Oh yes, I do, I do!" I told it, saying 'I do' with the same speed and fervor that I said 'I do' to my husband.

Within seconds, I had an e-mail box and my own address.

Everything was fine and dandy for two days, until my new best friend, my server, suddenly turned on me.

"You have used up your free trial time on GTE," it told me. "To register, enter your credit card number now."

Wait a minute! I was supposed to get a free e-mail box with Freeway! What's this?

Apparently, in my haste to surf the Internet, I accidentally signed up for a trial sample of GTE's web service.

The company cleverly disguised their service as something I was entitled to for free.

Easy Internet Access is the name of their product.

They DUPED me.

For three days, the GTE server registration card popped up on my computer screen and wouldn't leave, in spite of my furious mouse-clicking. If it had been a real mouse, the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals would have had me arrested for Gross Criminal Rodent Assault.

When I got back on the Internet through proper channels, I was soon lost in a quagmire of caca.

"Sign up for a Visa card with a low introductory rate of 5.9 percent," the screen said.

No thanks.

"Buy books here through Amazon.com," the screen told me.

Go AWAY! I don't want a book! I want to sneak a peek at the Drudge report! Where is it?

"Buy CDs at all-time low rates," it told me. Apparently the Columbia House Music Club has also discovered the Internet.

"Give us your credit card number now! We will deliver news, shoppers' bargains and nudie pictures of Monica Lewinsky to your fingertips!" Yeah, like I'm going to fall for that. What do I look like, some hay seed who just fell off the GTE free trial server? No way they were getting my credit card number.

Due to my carping about all the commercials on the Internet, my husband installed an invisible guard device to make them go away.

The next thing I knew, a menacing-looking dog collar with no dog attached started barking at me.

The studded, dogless collar kept on barking and wouldn't let me proceed until I read its message.

The message said someone wanted to send me a cookie.

Yippee! I love cookies.

Send me the cookies! Peanut butter or chocolate chunk. I don't care. I love cookies.

The dogless collar warned me not to accept cookies from a stranger.

Why not? Cookies are a bad thing?

The collar told me that accepting cookies could allow strangers into my home computer, where they could potentially rifle through my virtual underwear drawer, or something like that. (Sounds like a virtual mother to me).

So who was the Internet genius who named these bad things 'cookies?'

If they're a bad thing, then give them a bad name, like psoriasis flakes.

That would make better sense.

Then the message would say, "Someone is trying to send you psoriasis flakes. Do you want to accept their psoriasis flakes?"

Heck no! Uck! Bleah! I NEVER want to accept their psoriasis flakes!

The Internet makes me feel like I am trying to find a town in the wild west before roads were created. I am riding an electronic horse bareback through all sorts of perils without a trusty trail guide, and the promotion vultures are spitting iguana droppings at me.

"The technology is still relatively new," my husband told me. "But if you keep trying, eventually you'll be able to navigate your way through it. Then you can get all sorts of useful information, like current airline rates."

Big deal.

It took me two hours to find the airline ticket web site and figure out how it worked. The web site told me it found me a great air fare for my proposed travel plans.

In three minutes, I called my local travel agent and they beat the web site air fare by $200. They also didn't try to give me a cookie.

I am totally underwhelmed by the Internet so far. It's too much like the wild west. I think I'll wait until they've put in some paved roads and a couple of saloons before I become a regular traveler there.

(Note: Since writing this column, I've become a tad more proficient navigating the Internet. At least now I can consistently locate my e-mail box. You may reach me at: Laurie303@Juno.com. I'm pretty good at retrieving messages, but haven't mastered sending them yet, so if you e-mail me, don't hold your breath waiting for a response.)

Critical appeal by Red Cross brought in many donors

Dear Editor:

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile in Charlevoix was held at the American Legion on January 21.

I need to thank the 100-plus donors who responded to the "Critical Appeal" by the Red Cross for blood donations. Since one unit of blood can benefit as many as four people, I am imagining the hundreds of sick and injured that were helped.

Thanks to Commander Charles Butcher and members of the American Legion for once again generously allowing the use of their fine facility for the Bloodmobile/Ice Cream Social event.

Many businesses and organizations contributed to the success of the blood drive. I would like to thank them all.

My sincere appreciation to Vacation Properties Network, Charlevoix Area Canvas, Ed Whitley and crew, The Bridge Street Book Shop, the businesses who displayed posters, and to the big turnout of Lions Club members (thanks to Scott Kelly and Traver Wood).

A huge thank you to the volunteers who made phone calls, baked, distributed posters, worked their shift (and some overtime!) and donated blood —. all with smiles on their faces and kind words for everyone. WOW! What an extraordinary effort with terrific results.

The next community blood drive is June 3. If a cold, flu, travel or other conflict kept someone away from the January drive, please call the Red Cross in Petoskey at 347-5984 for information of an upcoming drive in the area. You can donate blood every 56 days. The need is still urgent.

Let's go way over goal next time! Please plan to donate on June 3 and enjoy a hot fudge sundae with homemade cookies!

Rain forests can't keep up with technology

Dear Editor:

I would like to express an opinion about human technology and its impact on the rain forest.

Lately, we have had many technology advances. Many technologies have advanced greatly. Some affect the rain forest, like advanced logging, mining, road building, and large scale clearing. Some do not affect the rain forest in a positive way.

WHITECAPS is a welcome addition to Petoskey dining scene

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

Family-run restaurants are usually successful and I predict without hesitation that this will be true of the new establishment, WHITECAPS, located in Petoskey. Opened the day before Thanksgiving, it seats 125 guests downstairs and 55 guests upstairs. In addition, there are two small outdoor dining areas, weather permitting.

This 10-year dream of owner Robin Morris, and her brother, Chef Greg Peterson, has already made a name for itself, thanks to the loyal support of their family staff, consisting of mother, daughter, sister-in-law and kids.

The brand new brick building, with large windows overlooking both dancing whitecaps and glorious sunsets over Little Traverse Bay, has a view enjoyed by appreciative patrons, as well as by the fortunate staff. Chef Peterson and his crew work in the large, stainless steel, open kitchen, which boasts a wood-burning oven for roasting fowl. Peterson graduated from the Culinary Institute of Art 10 years ago, and he has introduced a popular self-grill, where patrons may choose any mouth-watering cut from four different types of steaks or four different types of fresh fish. This, along with a baked potato, Texas toast, and salad is moderately priced at $19.95. Along with standard fare such as Cobb salad, homemade dressings and crusty rolls, Peterson offers unusual items like a thin slice of a very rich lobster cheesecake for an appetizer. I was bold enough to try it and will order it again.

Since I have designed table tops for restaurants in New York, Chicago, and elsewhere, I can deeply appreciate the effort that Robin Morris spent in creating her unusual and attractive table setting. The primary-colored plates, some in the shape of a friendly fish, were especially created for WHITECAPS by a California artist, Julie Sanders. The solid, hefty silverware is a pleasure to hold in one's hand, and the bright, laminated vinyl tablecloths are in cheerful contrast to the monochromatic view outside at this time of year. Clay pots hold a variety of Rosemary herbs and act as centerpieces. Best of all are the comfortable cushioned chairs with rounded backs that it took Robin five months to locate.

When one enters the restaurant one does not need to walk through the cocktail lounge, which is a distinct advantage. Instead, to the left, there is a partitioned cocktail lounge, and to the right an attractive hostess station, but don't expect the hostess to accept reservations! Robin laughingly recounts her experience on opening day when five people in a row glibly insisted they had made reservations. "I talked to a man on the phone," "I made reservations two months ago," "I called in advance and talked to the owner," she was foolishly told. Admittedly, not being able to make a reservation at a restaurant in our neck of the woods is a problem for diners, especially in the summer. For this, the public is to blame, since too often they don't honor their reservations, which means an unrecoupable loss to the restaurant.

Another problem I can foresee is the parking situation. There is a small, city-owned lot across the street, but one wonders if this will suffice? My suggestion is to avoid the weekends at WHITECAPS, which is already jammed with repeat business.

Robin Morris was born and raised in Traverse City, and moved to Petoskey three years ago with her neurosurgeon husband. Familiar with the area and teamed with her brother, she knows what it takes to run a successful restaurant. WHITECAPS fills a gap and should be a welcome addition on the local restaurant scene.

Florida reunion planned for Charlevoix residents

Apparently the Charlevoix snowbirds who are currently in residence in Florida are a bit lonely for their Charlevoix pals.

Headed by Susan VanWieren and Bill Klingbeil, a group of Charlevoix folks in Sarasota are planning a March reunion for any Charlevoix people in Florida.

The reunion date and place is March 23 in Sarasota, where Charlevoixians will gather for a luncheon. Anyone in Florida with Charlevoix roots is invited.

To learn more about the reunion, contact Susan VanWieren by phone, mail or e-mail at: (941) 918-0436; 1617 Bayhouse Ct., #221, Sarasota, FL, 34231-6728; or e-mail at captsusan@aol.com.

Milk production is 18,000 pounds per cow per year. Shown here at right are Tom and Cindy Themm with their certificate honoring 25-years in the MSU program.

Little gems

"If what I've said sounds old-fashioned, that's because it is. It's time we realized that thirty-plus years of 'nouveau parenting' hasn't worked. It's high time we brought 'old-fashioned' back into fashion in the family."

Youth orchestra being formed

Young string musicians in northern Michigan will have an opportunity to play and perform as a group with the formation of the Northern Michigan Youth Orchestra.

The orchestra is being organized by Krista Knight, who has taught strings and vocal music in Emmet and Charlevoix counties for the past 18 years. All elementary, middle, high school and college students are invited to participate.

"Our goal is to provide all the string players of northern lower Michigan an opportunity to play and perform as a full orchestra, to increase student motivation and strengthen ensemble-playing skills," said Knight. "We also plan to have fun, entertain people and make this an enjoyable experience for everyone."

Music for the Northern Michigan Youth Orchestra will include classical, popular and fiddle styles. In addition to operating the Krista Knight Violin Studio, Knight is a member of the Galliard String Quartet classical ensemble and the folk string band Dr. Goodhart's Home Remedy. She has performed with the Bayview Orchestra, the Northwood Symphony, the Traverse Symphony and is a graduate of the Lawrence University Conservatory of Music in Appleton, Wis.

The orchestra's spring season will consist of six sessions held every other Saturday morning starting Saturday, Feb. 6 at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix. Advanced students will rehearse from 10:45 to 11:30 a.m. Sessions will alternate between two locations; the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix and Concord Academy in Petoskey, except for the March 6 session which will be held at the Jordan Valley Express as part of the annual Fiddlers' Jamboree.

A mid-May concert will be presented to showcase the group's progress.

The fee is $30 for the spring season. For more information or to register call Krista Knight at 536-7875.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Greetings to one and all from the back porch of our new home in Florida. It seems as hard to believe for me to be out here writing this as it does for some of you to be reading this. It is a little after eight in the evening and I'm gazing at a starry sky on a very comfortable evening. I can hear some of you saying, "He's just trying to rub it in." On the contrary, I value what you are going through and we went through it too as a part of the odyssey we undertook to get here.

The movers arrived at our Charlevoix home in a snowstorm. You would not believe how nerve-racking it was to watch the semi-truck driver maneuver his 80-foot rig into our driveway. We thought we had prepared well. It was like watching human tornadoes as the packers picked up where we left off.

Linda had taken a fall at my mother's apartment and injured her knee. That meant she couldn't drive on the trip down. Our son and daughter shared the driving chores in our three-car caravan until we got to Indiana. On an icy morning at a stoplight in Anderson, brother and sister ran into each other. Our three-car caravan suddenly became one car. We retreated to my daughter's apartment only to have a blizzard break out and force five people to stay in a one-bedroom place for three more days.

I had to call the church in Florida from the accident site and tell them I wouldn't make it in time for my first Sunday. That weekend was one of the most helpless and lonely moments of my entire life. Charlevoix was behind us and Leesburg was in front of us but there was nobody with us to comfort us.

There were real estate complications. House closings can be like a game of dominoes. One has to fall into place before they all can. We were about fifth in line in a series of house closings with a moving truck on the way complicating things.

We had to rent a car. In a repeat performance of our coming to Charlevoix years before, our furniture had to be off-loaded in the church fellowship hall. All that's behind us now. Our Leesburg church family came through in more ways than words will ever say. They comforted us and reassured us. When the house here closed, they came and cleaned everything before we hauled things over. We are here safe and sound, thanks be to God.

I am passing on the saga to tell you that just because some places don't have to contend with the snow and ice that you are wrestling with, that doesn't mean there aren't other things that can complicate the mix. What I have gained is a new appreciation for what the apostle Paul told the Thessalonian church a long time ago. He wrote, "Rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing, in everything, give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Even though there were moments that we really wondered what was going on and why it was happening to us, we knew God was there. And if we knew it in the adventure we went through, you can know it in some of the things that are facing you. Be assured, you are thought of and you are loved.

Up North Big Band will perform with Valentine's Day concert

Better than a card and every bit as good as a big box of chocolates, Charlevoix's very own Up North Big Band will return to the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix at 4 p.m. Valentine's Day, Sunday, Feb. 14 for a concert guaranteed to delight young and old alike.

Born in Karl's Bakery, the swinging sounds of the Up North Big Band have the sweetness of jelly doughnuts and the wholesome American goodness of apple fritters. The band's repertoire includes selections from the great County Basie, Glen Miller, Buddy Rich and more. Swing is back, and while grandma and grandpa two-step their way down memory lane to a Saturday night with the rug rolled up, the radio on and a sweetheart in their arms, teens will be amazed that guys old enough to be their parents can make sounds better than the new swing bands on CDs. "Moonglow," "String of Pearls," "In the Mood" and "Jumpin' at the Woodside" are sure to dust off the cabin fever blues, get toes tapping, fingers popping and hearts beating a little faster. The free-will offering will be used for music scholarships for area youth.

Elk Rapids church hosts euchre games

The Sacred Heart Hall in Elk Rapids will be hosting euchre games at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 6, Saturday, Feb. 20, Saturday, March 13 and Saturday, March 27.

The rules of the games will be that a game continues until each player at a table has dealt twice. Winners move up one table. Players will sit next to their last partner on the next game, which makes their last partner the new opponent. Players may come alone because they won't stay with the same partner all night.

Tie games deal one more hand. No one is too old, no one is too young as long as you can play euchre.

Anyone is welcome, even if they don't know how to play. If novices come early, they can be taught to play.

There will be nightly door prizes. Cost is a donation of $5 per person, and a concession stand will be available.

All proceeds will benefit the Sacred Heart Senior Youth Group trip to Rome in 2000. For more information, call Diane Dowker at 264-9707 or Rose King at 264-5267.

The Sacred Heart Hall is located at 143 Charles St., Elk Rapids.

Earlier, with the traditional societies, the slash and burn technique was used. This could only clear small plots, because slashing had to be done one tree at a time. When it was no longer of use to its holder, the plot was abandoned. The rain forest could grow back in a matter of years. It is very different today.

We can clear large amounts of land very quickly, and when we give up our farm, the rain forest has a difficult time regrowing. It could take hundreds of years to grow back. I believe that we should be careful about such a precious thing, and make wise decisions as to the use of it. The rain forest needs to be preserved for all the species that have made their home there, and for the later generations to figure out, conserve, and protect.

Student doesn't want to go to school in summer

Dear Editor:

I'm writing regarding Laurie Lounsbury's column on snow days and school during the summer months. First of all, the local businesses would be hurting badly for their summer help if school were in session during the summer or longer. I'd bet you could go into any business in Northern Michigan and you would find at least two high school students working there. During the summer, high school and college students are relied upon so much.

And who ever said that the last two weeks of August are boring? Certainly not I! That's the most exciting time because we're trying to make the most out of what's left of our summer!

Going to school in the summer isn't going to help anything. Sure it saves on snow days, but what about December? It still snows in December! When you live in northern Michigan you have to realize that we have snow at least four months out of the year! You can't just not have school in the winter because of snow! I mean, come on, it's Michigan what do you expect? There are also many days when it is possible to hold classes.

If we have school in the summer rather than the winter, then that would mean that we would be sitting in those hot and humid classrooms for close to eight hours a day! That's torture! As it is right now in May, June, and September it's too hot already to sit there. The windows don't even help considering that half the school's classroom windows are facing the sun.

Since when does winter have anything to do with childhood obesity? There's still obese children in Florida, they certainly don't have snow in Florida! Being obese has nothing to do with not playing enough during the winter months. We may want to go outside more in the summer but who wouldn't!? It's summer!! If we have January, February , and March off and it's snowing all the time and our parents are at work, how are we supposed to get to the slopes? This may be shocking, but not all of us live right next to a ski hill or have a car to get there with. Not even an ice rink or snowmobile! As far as exercise in the winter, not all of us can afford a membership to a gym. At least in school we have P.E. class. We're constantly playing basketball, volleyball, soccer, or running. There's always the walking from one end of the school to the other and up some stairs and down others to get from one class to another.

In my opinion it's a terrible idea to have school in the summer! It's the most ridiculous idea I've ever heard!!

CROP walkers outdid themselves in spite of terrible weather

Dear Editor:

The Charlevoix County CROP Walkers, volunteers and sponsors are much deserving of praise for the excellent results of their efforts this fall. As county residents well remember, the terrible storm that swept across northern Michigan occurred on Saturday, Sept. 26. This was also the date of the CROP Walk whose purpose is to raise funds for three food pantries in the county and for programs to help hungry people around the world.

As storm clouds gathered across Charlevoix County, the committee members in Boyne City and Charlevoix decided that for the protection of the CROP Walkers, the event must be canceled. In East Jordan, 40 walkers ventured out. With much destruction in their own communities, about 80 other Charlevoix County residents went out in small groups on Sunday afternoon. They did not forget the problems of neighbors near and far, even though they were not the victims of disaster. Perhaps the storm made the walkers all the more aware of how other victims of disasters and war needed the resources obtained through their pledges.

The walkers walked. The sponsors generously gave their pledges and the Charlevoix County CROP Walk raised $16,617 in spite of the weather! The average amount per walker was $139.63, the second highest per walker average of the 145 Michigan Communities that do CROP Walks!

This is not all the area did. About a month later, when Hurricane Mitch hit Central America, the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix urged their members to respond directly to Church World Service/CROP. To date, more than $1,300 has been received for the hurricane victims. In turn, Church World Service has already provided aid to the victims valued at more than $1,227,000, sent medical teams and is in the process of working with the United Methodist Committee on Relief to form volunteer construction work teams to assist in rebuilding efforts.

A special note of appreciation is due to Lucy Witthoeft, who again was the top walker with $1,200 collected. Besides dealing with the effects of the storm, Lucy's son was also hospitalized at the time. Thank you's are due to Kay Smith, Marge Teske and Diana Walls who have faithfully coordinated the walk for the past several years. Charlevoix County is well deserving of special recognition and praise for their efforts in 1998 in helping the hungry locally and around the globe.

Sincerely,

Exchange student makes sweet music at charter school

By Jamie MacMillan

Hiroshi Yoshida practices his violin skills at Northwest Academy, where he is enrolled as a foreign exchange student. The young student said he enjoys learning to play different instruments with the school band. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

While it is easy to slip into the carefree world of American teen culture, Hiroshi Yoshida is trying his best to remember that his stay in the United States is an educational trip.

"I wanted to study English and learn to speak it better," the Japanese foreign exchange student said. "I was interested in American life."

Hiroshi is enrolled at Charlevoix's Northwest Academy and the 10th grader is the charter school's first foreign exchange student..

"He's been a lot of fun for the students," school administrator Steve Bennett said. "He fits right in and we have kind of a nifty culture mix."

Hiroshi originally hails from the town of Toyama, a city of one million people directly west of Tokyo. Hiroshi's family lives on the outskirts of that city, about 30 miles east of the Japan Sea.

He arrived in Charlevoix in August after spending three weeks in Oregon for an intensive review of the English language with other Japanese exchange students. In Charlevoix, he's staying with Donald and Jackie Hice.

Hiroshi came to Charlevoix through the Foundation for Academic Cultural Exchange (FACE), a nonprofit exchange organization based in Marietta, Ga. The group's main purpose is to promote cultural understanding between the people of the United States and other countries.

Hiroshi arrived in Charlevoix and with the Hice family after a fortuitous meeting between Jackie and the local FACE coordinator Carla VanderSloot. The pair bumped into each other at a Petoskey bookstore on a day when Jackie was wearing a "flags from around the world" jacket.

Despite being strangers, VanderSloot was quick to approach Hice and told her she looked like someone who would enjoy hosting a foreign exchange student.

Ironically, the Hices had that same thought in the backs of their minds, but the chance encounter with VanderSloot accelerated their thoughts.

The FACE program grants some leeway in terms of matching students up with a host family. Hiroshi and the Hices were matched because of Hiroshi's interest in playing the violin. The Hices' son Kent is also a budding violin player, and Jackie said she figured it would give their family a good start with something in common and that the boys could bond through practice.

"My parents wanted me to play an instrument," Hiroshi said of his violin training, which started when he was three. "They are very happy when I play to many people."

If that's the case, then they are sure to be happy with their son, who has been learning about the local culture and also learning how to play as many new instruments as possible.

Back home he took private lessons, since the Japanese secondary education curriculum doesn't include classes like band. Joining the band at Northwest Academy, not only has he lent his violin expertise, but he has found a way to play the flute, fiddle, and percussion instruments with director Gary Stutzman's band.

Hiroshi said he has been influenced by American rock music and has also begun to learn how to play the electric guitar.

"He's a very gregarious performer — when he's on stage he digs into it," Stutzman said of Hiroshi. "He's a phenomenal musician, plus he's a good kid."

Hiroshi stole the show at the school's recent Christmas performance. He will be a featured fiddler along with Stutzman during next month's Fiddlers' Jamboree in East Jordan on Saturday, March 6.

Comparing local cultures, Hiroshi said many differences exist between life back home and life in the United States, especially Charlevoix.

Japan is one of the world's largest islands, so living around water and amid heavy snow, for that matter, was nothing new to him.

His country, however, is urban, with many skyscrapers. His first question when he toured Charlevoix was, "Where are all the apartment high rises?"

Hiroshi was quick to also notice that while it was easy for him back home to buy American music and watch American entertainment, it is next to impossible to find any Japanese cultural influences in America.

Hiroshi spends much of his time at school — finding differences between classrooms in Japan and America were easy to pinpoint.

He said in Japan that classes are more lecture-oriented and students rarely speak. In America, more stress is placed on class participation and other non-lecture projects such as book reports and research projects.

Classes are organized differently as well. In mathematics, for example, Japanese students master portions of disciplines, like geometry and calculus, a little at a time, hitting advanced portions with each grade level. In America, however, the tendency is to take algebra one year, then geometry the next, and so on.

Class sizes are also different. Back home, his classes had 40 students and his school's enrollment neared 2,000. At Northwest Academy he is one of about 100 students in the entire school. The smaller school, though, creates an atmosphere that he readily endorses.

"At a bigger school, you're never noticed," he said. "Here I know many people, they know me and we have time to talk and become friends."

Warning: warm weather makes ice on lake unpredictable

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to warn the citizens and visitors of Charlevoix County that the warmer temperatures, and especially the fluctuation in temperatures, can cause ice to weaken on the lakes.

Ice can form in several different conditions, and some are more perilous than others. Clear ice is the strongest, formed by a long hard freeze, and can vary in color from green, blue and black, depending on the water color beneath the ice. Snow ice is milky-looking and is formed from refrozen melted snow. Snow ice is low in density and is very weak. Layered ice is just that — many layers of frozen and refrozen snow, giving it a striped appearance. The notion that ice thickness is the only factor determining ice strength should be discarded once and for all, according to the sheriff. Because ice seldom freezes at the same rate in the same body of water, it is not uniformly thick from one location to another. Ice can be one foot thick in one location, and only one inch thick just 10 feet away.

If you do break through the ice, there are some things you can do to avoid serious injury or death. First, try not to panic and thrash about. The air in your clothes will help you float. Yell for help. Turn toward the direction that you came from. The ice is likely to be stronger there. Place your arms on the edge of the solid ice. Keys, a pocket knife, ice pick, or a belt buckle will help you grip the ice. Once you've got a grip on the ice, kick your legs hard and pull yourself up on the ice. If the ice breaks, move forward and try again. When you're out, do not stand up, but roll away from the break and stand only when you've reached solid ice.

Bethany Lutheran helps firefighters with donation for thermal imaging camera

Right: City of Charlevoix firefighters drove a fire truck into the parking lot of Bethany Lutheran Church last week, not to put out a fire but to accept a check from the congregation for $800. The money will help the department buy a thermal imaging camera, which will allow firefighters to pinpoint the exact location of the fire and see through dense smoke and darkness to locate victims. Seeing the need for this remarkable piece of equipment, Bethany Lutheran collected $400 in donations and secured a matching donation of $400 from Lutheran Brotherhood Tip of the Mitt Branch no. 8959. Accepting the donation are Tom Meggison (left) and Joseph Schwartzfisher (right) co-chairmen of the Thermal Imaging Camera fund-raising committee. Ione Baum, fraternal communicator (second from right), donated the check along with Michael L. Teuscher (second from left), pastor at Bethany Lutheran. (Photo courtesy of Bethany Lutheran Church)

The view under the ice

Members of the Michigan State Police and Charlevoix Fire Department dive teams practiced their ice rescue techniques in Charlevoix last week. They were joined by the University of Michigan Department of Naval and Marine Engineering. The divers used the M-Rover, an underwater, remote-controlled TV camera that can be used to search for drowning victims and evidence beneath the surface.

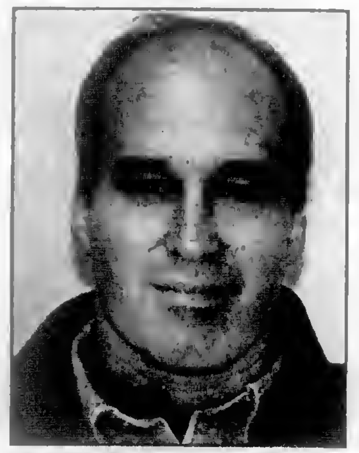
Jack Hodge named as new Irish Boat Shop manager



Jack Hodge

Irish Boat Shop recently promoted Jack Hodge to the position of general manager at the Charlevoix operation. Hodge joined Irish Boat Shop in 1990 as assistant general manager. He has prospered in that position and has continually seized opportunities to undertake additional responsibilities.

In addition to managing the Charlevoix facilities, Hodge handles all aspects of dockage, storage, customer relations, advertising, many employee relations, issues, and oversees the recruiting and hiring of personnel. His management skills and background in business have been a true asset for Irish Boat Shop.

With this realignment of responsibilities, Cliff Biddick, long time general manager and current vice president of Irish Boat Shop, will have more time to dedicate to special projects, such as designing and engineering their marine facilities and unique customer jobs. Biddick can work on the really tough projects and generally do more of the "hands-on" work that is his first love.

Steve Pirie muscles his way around a gate in the giant slalom event at last week's race against Harbor Springs to finish in first place. On the front page is Todd Freidinger, who placed third in GS.

Rayders claw out a pair of wins

By Jamie MacMillan

After a two-week stretch of "measuring stick" games, the Rayder basketball team learned last week that their sterling early season play amounts to a hill of beans to its opponents.

The Rayders held off a pair of surprisingly competitive foes in East Jordan, 54-46, and Harbor Springs, 77-62. In doing so, the Rayders climbed to an overall record of 10-1 and remain unblemished and at the top of the Lake Michigan Conference standings with a 6-0 record, just ahead of Elk Rapids, 6-1.

"Nothing is easy in this world," coach Keith Haske said of last week's games. "We were a little flat coming from the game with Benzie, but we're pleased that we still were able to get the wins."

Last Tuesday, the Rayders found themselves in a serious tussle with county rival East Jordan. Despite sporting a 2-7 record, the Red Devils were primed for their match-up with the well regarded Rayders. After struggling early on in the contest, East Jordan slowed the pace down, churned out points with savvy inside play and nearly stole the game down the stretch.

Matt McClellan scored 13 points on a variety of moves during a first half stretch that gave the Rayders a seemingly comfortable 26-12 lead.

East Jordan fought back with a 14-0 run to tie the score at 26-26 at intermission. Matt Shaw, the Red Devils' 6-5 center, scored half of the points during the tying run.

Shaw continued to score for the Red Devils and East Jordan carved out a 39-38 advantage heading into the game's final frame.

The Rayders, however, began to clamp the interior with strong double teams and Shaw managed only one basket in the fourth quarter after scoring 17 points in the game's first 24 minutes.

The win was secured only when Jim Kanine swiped an in-bounds pass with less than a minute in the contest and with the Rayders clinging to a two point margin, 48-46. After the steal, he hit a pair of free throws to extend the lead to four points and the Rayders added to the margin with more free throws after desperation shots from East Jordan missed its mark.

McClellan paced the Rayders with 21 points and Justin Thorp chipped in 10 points.

In the match-up with Harbor Springs, Charlevoix found the pace of the game faster and more to its liking.

The Rams are a team built on perimeter quickness and they played a frenetic, run-and-gun style which helped them build a small lead, 18-17, after the first quarter.

From there, though, Kanine stepped up time after time and beat the press with passes down the middle of the court to one of the Rayders' many interior threats. For the game, Kanine dished out 14 assists, more than half of which came on passes to beat the Rams' full court pressure defense.

By wrestling control of the game during its middle quarters, the Rayders entered the last quarter ahead, 62-50. They would need that margin as the offense stagnated and gave Harbor seven straight possessions to carve the margin below single digits.

Luckily, the Rayder defense was up to the chore and held back each attempt to reduce the margin and eventually Charlevoix was able to build on the lead in the final minutes.

Todd Schaperkotter led the Rayders, scoring a career-high 14 points and grabbing 16 rebounds, another varsity career high. Thorp continued his strong play, scoring 24 points.

In last week's undercards, the JV Rayders improved to 8-3 using a pair of convincing second half surges to overcome two opponents.

The team used a 26-12 fourth quarter advantage to pull away from East Jordan, 67-41. Ben Coen paced the team with 18 points, Scott Parrish added 16 and Jeremiah Tuescher chipped in nine.

Against Harbor Springs, the Rayders broke open what had been a tightly fought, up and down the court contest with a 29-16 third quarter run. The Rayders led 36-30 at the intermission en route to a 85-59 win.

Tuescher had the big night in the scoring column with 22 points. Parrish added 14, Coen, 11, and Zach Dennis, 10.

The Rayders will play Traverse City-St. Francis at home Feb. 5.

Netters lose two in a row

The trend to start fast only to fade down the stretch plagued the Lady Rayder volleyball team in two recent home matches.

In losses to Harbor Springs and Ellsworth, the Rayders climbed to early leads in the first game, only to succumb to both foes, who had superior serving.

Against the Rams, the hometown netters bolted to a 12-3 lead in game one only to fall, 15-17. While the club rebounded to even the match with a 15-3 win in game two, the Rams took the third and deciding game, 15-5.

The Rams connected on 94 percent of their serves, which was the biggest statistical difference between the clubs.

An 8-2 lead in the first game of the Ellsworth match also went for naught due to the nifty serving of Lancer senior Nikky Earle.

The Rayders, 6-9-4, play next at 6 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4.

Harbor Springs snatches victory from Rayder skiers

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix ski teams found themselves in the perpetual bridesmaids' position with three second place finishes in their meets last week.

On Thursday, in a conference quad meet, both the girls' and boys' teams finished runner-up to strong Harbor Springs teams at Nub's Nob.

The boys' club, with a strong performance in the slalom event, nearly edged into the top spot, but the Rams had stronger giant slalom runs, which proved to be the difference in the meet.

The Rams had 39 points to Charlevoix's 45 points. Traverse City-St. Francis, 101, and Kalkaska, 143 rounded out the field.

Steve Pirie skied to a first place in the GS. Todd Freidinger, Roscoe Serrels and Pirie placed 2-3-4 in the slalom event behind Harbor's Todd Matelski.

Also for the boys were Freidinger, third GS; Kyle Louiselle, 10th GS; Serrels, 11th GS; Shawn MacMillan, 11th slalom, 13th GS; Jim Dilworth, 14th slalom; and Joel Trubilowicz, 18th GS.

The girls' meet was dominated by Harbor Springs, who placed skiers in the top four spots in both events for a perfect team score of 20. The Rayders were second with 69 points followed by Traverse City-St. Francis, 101, and Kalkaska, 134.

For Charlevoix, Lexi Wilson and Kelly Kusina led the way, skiing to a pair of top-10 finishes. Wilson skied into fifth place in the slalom and eighth in the GS while Kusina finished sixth in the GS and ninth in slalom.

Also for Charlevoix were Kirsten Brendtro, 12th GS, eighth slalom; Alisha Johnson, 10th GS, 11th slalom; and Marie Serrels, 13th GS, 12th slalom.

The girls' team also finished in second place at a Saturday evening meet at Boyne Mountain with five other teams.

Boyne City earned top prize with 39 points, followed by Charlevoix, 71, Grayling, 96, Detroit Country Day, 115, Bellaire, 131, and Inland Lakes, 204.

Results for Charlevoix were as follows: Lexi Wilson, fourth slalom, sixth GS; Kelly Kusina, fourth GS, ninth slalom; Alisha Johnson, 12th GS; Marie Serrels, sixth slalom, 17th GS; and Kirsten Brendtro, 13th slalom, 22nd GS.

The boys' team couldn't build from its solid outing on Thursday, finishing in fifth place with 135 points. Boyne City won the boys' meet with 59 points.

Freidinger paced the team with a second place in the slalom and a fourth in the GS. No other Rayder placed in the top 10.

Final results for Charlevoix were Louiselle, 18th slalom; MacMillan, 21st slalom, 13th GS; Dilworth, 27th slalom; Trubilowicz, 28th slalom, 21st GS; and Pirie, 31st slalom, 29th GS.

The Rayders skied at a 9-team invitational meet Monday, Feb. 1 at Crystal Mountain. The two teams took second place in the event. Individual results weren't available at press time.

Women's health topic of heart conference

"Menopause and Heart Disease" will be the topics of the second annual Women's Heart Conference Saturday, Feb. 13 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

Most women are fairly relaxed when it comes to heart disease. They might worry that the men in their lives could get it, but not themselves. The trouble is, everyone who thinks that way is wrong. More than 500,000 women die each year from heart disease compared to 44,000 who die from breast cancer.

Scientists believe that the hormone estrogen offers women some protection against heart disease. This appears to be the case until menopause. After menopause, however, women's risk of heart attacks begins to rise steadily.

The half-day conference "Menopause and Heart Disease," will address the ways women can reduce their risk of heart disease, especially as it is related to menopause.

Family physicians Dr. Pamela Knysz, M.D. of Boyne Area Medical Center, and Dr. Anna Young, M.D. of the East Jordan Family Health Center, will be the keynote speakers. Other presentations will include hormones and herbs, fitness, and the Spirit Side, a fresh look at managing stress with useful techniques that will help participants cope with pressure-filled days. Knysz and Young will be available to answer questions throughout the day.

Also available at the conference will be low-cost bone density screenings for $10 each, and free cholesterol and blood pressure screenings.

A heart healthy luncheon will be served at the end of the half-day conference.

The conference is sponsored by the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Charlevoix Area Hospital, the American Heart Association, and the Fitness Council of Northern Michigan.

Register by calling the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency at 547-6523 or register the day of the conference from 8-8:30 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 13 at the Community Reformed Church at the corner of Meech Street and Petoskey Avenue. A fee of $10 will be charged for each participant for the conference. The fee includes lunch.

Multiple offender arrested by sheriff's department

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department arrested Anthony Edward Stainbrook, 34, of Charlevoix, for a number of charges. The charges include felony fleeing and eluding, third degree, operating under the influence of liquor, second offense, driving with license suspended, sixth offense, no insurance, multiple title and registration violations and an outstanding bench warrant from a domestic assault conviction.

Stainbrook was arrested Saturday, Jan. 23 by Sgt. Don Sproul. At about 12:30 p.m., Sproul saw a pickup truck stopped at a local party store. The license plate on the pickup had an expired and was improper. Sproul stopped his patrol car at the corner of State and Garfield streets as the suspect was pulling out of the parking lot. Sproul approached the vehicle on foot and ordered the driver to stop. The driver refused to stop and fled the scene. Sproul returned to his patrol car and followed the pickup through a residential area, a school zone and onto U.S. 31. Stainbrook then drove into a dead end alley and around several houses before stopping in an unplowed yard. He was apprehended at that point.

Stainbrook has been charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's office with fleeing and eluding a police officer, third degree, which is a five-year felony charge; operating under the influence of liquor, second offense, driving with license suspended, sixth offense. Stainbrook is expected to be charged as a habitual felon, which carries a maximum sentence of up to life in prison.

Stainbrook is lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail on a $5,000 bond. After his arrest, he told deputies he eluded the police officer because he knew there was an outstanding warrant for his arrest.

A 19-year-old passenger with Stainbrook, Jason Daniel Washegesic, was arrested and cited for minor in possession of alcohol, fourth offense. He has been released on bond to appear in the 90th district court.

Beaver Island-dot-Neat

By Laurie Lounsbury

What happens when high technology collides with rural, remote lifestyles?

In some cases, superior technology squashes the rural lifestyle like a bug on the windshield.

But on Beaver Island, the collision gave birth to an award-winning Internet web site.

The father and son team of Bill and Jeff Cashman, long time island residents, created a web site, BeaverIsland.net, to showcase the island and all its attributes. It includes the physical beauty, island history and its unique blend of charming and quirky residents.

The result is a high-tech web site

Jane Sooy was a woman of generosity and rare insight

Jane Sooy always had time to listen and a smile to give to everyone she encountered.

Jane Sooy, beloved friend and benefactress of many people in the community, died on Thursday, Feb. 4. These are some of the heartfelt tributes from friends who knew and loved her:

"A very great lady died on Thursday. To a great many people she was more than a friend, she was the best friend they ever had. There are many outstanding people in the world and all of them deserve our gratitude and love, but very few have Jane Sooy's gift for pure, unconditional love and support and inspiration. She was one of those rare people who turned the devastation of personal tragedy into the positive joy of living. She helped everyone she met to see the beauty in themselves and in each other. She was a generous woman who shared her personal wealth with the community, but beyond that, she shared her time and energy with people who needed her support. She didn't just give money, she gave herself. She could be whatever kind of friend you needed — someone to share a joke with or share the secrets of your heart. For half of her life, she was paralyzed and she learned to walk with difficulty, but her soul could fly and she could take you with her."

Former county employee sues for wrongful termination

By Laurie Lounsbury

Beth Inman, who worked in the Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection, is suing both the county and building official Kenneth Doty.

The reason?

Alleged wrongful termination based on the Whistle-blower's Protection Act.

County commissioner chairman Phil Johnson didn't comment on the suit, saying that the county hadn't been officially served yet.

While working as a secretary in the building inspection department, Inman said she found discrepancies that led her to believe permit violations were being committed by James Eisley, an electrical inspector for the county.

Electrical inspector James Eisley did not return phone calls from the Courier.

Inman's attorney, Grant Parsons of Traverse City, said his client took her alleged findings of wrong-doing to her supervisor, Ken Doty.

Then she reported her findings to the State of Michi-shared her joy in life, her love of nature, art and music. She was always there to hold your hand in times of trouble, to share a story or a joke with, or a cup of tea in front of a warm fire. Jane could always bring together a group of people to share the joy of her humanity.

"A very special person, Jane Sooy will live in all of the hearts of the people she touched. She will be missed but not forgotten."
— Sue Bolt

"My hat's off to the lady, stronger than the trees, who let the wind restore the oxygen in my blood to let me see my lungs full and allow me to feel sad and become strong. She took the time to talk to me, to dance with me, to laugh with me, and bring joy back into my life. My friend Jane Sooy."

"She was the most spiritual, realized, positive person I ever met. She was a lot of fun too!"
— Dan Adler

"When I think of a summer evening I will remember Jane's kindness, generosity, and love of people."
— Lori Bolt

"We gathered around Jane, old friends and new, celebrating and learning, laughing and crying. We shared love and ideas, we talked of life and books and politics but mostly of life, which Jane welcomed with all its complexities, adversities, sorrows and joys. Jane set the pace. She leaned hard on her canes yet walked with a lightness and zest we admired profoundly. Jane gave love and joy generously. Thank you, Jane."
— Sara Gay Dammann

"Jane was one of a kind, graceful, thoughtful, friendly yet sure of herself and what she could do to make others happy. She was a great hostess as well as a great guest. Well-read and a good listener, she was well aware of the daily happenings both in our small area and the world, and was not afraid to discuss them. She was a person I loved to be with among any group of people. I'm among the many who will always miss Jane."
— Tom Dammann

"Instead of becoming bogged down with her own trials in life, Jane was always spiraling out to others, leaving each of us with her own magic brand of sparkling life dust.

"Jane was compassionate but not a pushover. She wrote delectable poetry and read it to us at solstice.

When I think of Jane I always hear the effervescent laughter coming from her indomitable self. Even though she has left a lot of light behind, her earthly presence will be dearly missed."
— Jill Whelan

"I like to believe that she can dance now."
— Ginger Bishoff

"She was a very spirited person."
— Edith Gilbert

"I have known Jane Sooy for 45 years. She helped me survive my first prom, dating, courtship, marriage, childbirth, parenting, career, and now retirement and grandparenting. She was my personal counselor and mentor. I asked her once what the secret of life was and she said, 'Patsy, change isn't all bad. What you lose when you move from one stage of life, you gain freedom and discovery in the next.' I will never forget the way she answered the phone with a question. 'Hello?' and then, 'Oh Pasty, I'm so glad you called.' Jane Sooy will always be remembered as a great benefactor of Charlevoix, but I will always remember her as my friend who loved me. That is a gift that never dies."

Former county emloyee seeks $500,000 in damages

gan's Bureau of Construction Codes.

Shortly after disclosing her findings to Doty, she was terminated from her job in November of 1998, after about one-and-one-half years of employment with the county.

According to Inman's complaint, the reason given to Inman for being terminated was that the county building department was restructuring its staff.

"Beth was fired ostensibly due to restructuring, and the restructuring was they went out and hired a new secretary to replace her," said Parsons. Inman is suing for $500,000 in lost wages and pension benefits.

The complaint, which was filed Jan. 26 in Charlevoix's 33rd Circuit Court, said Inman "suffered significant retribution in the workplace as a direct result of having reported the State law violations."

"She (Inman) made her findings known totally within the building department, and she never went outside the department until she learned nothing was going to be done within the department," Parsons said. "She was summarily fired for protecting the public."

The Whistleblower Protection Act (MCLA 15.361) protects workers who act in the public interest by reporting apparent serious violations of State law. Inman's report, submitted to the State Bureau of Construction Codes, allegedly contained "numerous, detailed allegations of wrong-doing concerning the handling of permits in the Charlevoix County Building Department," as stated in the complaint.

"I was acting in good faith, that's the whole point of this," Inman said. "I trusted them to do the same."

When asked about the law suit that names Doty in both a professional and individual capacity, Doty did not make a comment.

"I'm going to have to decline from commenting," Doty said. County clerk Jane Brannon was unavailable for comment.

Scott Fisher, State Director of the Office of Local Government and Consumer Services, did say that his department is looking into the allegations.

"She (Inman) has filed a complaint with us and we are looking into it," Fisher said. "If the allegations prove out, there certainly were some violations made, but we're not going to make any comment until we investigate."

While the complaint has been filed in circuit court, the county and Doty have not yet been officially served with the complaint. After they are served, they have 28 days to respond to the complaint.

Commissioner chairman Phil Johnson received a letter from the State Department of Consumer and Industry Services dated Feb. 2, which outlines the allegations. The letter said the county has until Feb. 23 to respond to the allegations. A similar letter was sent to electrical inspector James Eisley, who also has until Feb. 23 to respond to allegations.

with a familiar, folksy flavor.

Apparently the mix has definite appeal. The site was recently named Northern Michigan's Web Site of the Year.

The award came as a surprise to Bill Cashman.

"It's really quite an honor to get, without having applied for it," Cashman said.

Cashman entered the web site in a weekly competition through the Northwest Michigan Journal last summer. The Beaver Island web site was chosen as Site of the Week, which was honor enough for Cashman. He never even entered the Site of the Year contest. A web site judge, however, had other ideas. He was so impressed with the Beaver Island web site that he entered it in the annual contest, unbeknownst to Cashman.

"He particularly liked the pages about Ray Denny's art," Cashman said.

Denny's recycled art takes up just one of the 160 pages on Cashman's web site, which also includes 540 color photos.

The idea to create a web site began when the younger Cashman acquired a digital camera and started capturing island scenes. The original plan was to build a web site as a commercial avenue for business pursuits. With four years of experience as editors of the Beaver Beacon, a local newsletter, the two men quickly changed their focus to develop a more news, information and photography-oriented web site.

The Cashmans discovered there was no shortage of interesting morsels of news on the island.

"When you go looking for matters of interest, you can always find them," Bill said.

Jeff Cashman has done most of the photography, while Bill has utilized his writing skill to spin warm-hearted stories about the island and its residents.

The hundreds of hours spent researching, taking photos and writing stories have all been done at the Cashmans' expense.

"We've been biting the bullet financially," the elder Cashman said.

To offset the cost, the two men are thinking about publishing a coffee-table book of the web site and selling it. It's not yet known if the coffee table book will include the local stories about island life. Readers may have to visit the web site to read about Louise Kane Cornstalk and her Native American dancers or a dog named Socrates and his battle with a scavenging raccoon. The site is chock full of newsy nuggets that could only be found on Beaver Island.

As director of the Beaver Island Historical Society, Bill has a natural, long time interest in island residents and their stories. Some of the stories are taken for granted among islanders, but not known by anyone else. They are a joy to read, and the pictures are the frosting on the cyber cake.

The new web site has kept Bill and his family island-hopping, both on Beaver Island and other, smaller islands in the archipelago.

"This motivated us to go out and see places again," Bill said.

The Cashmans' trip to Garden Island, accompanied by Agnes Bird, is one of Bill's favorite stories on the web site.

"It was such an adventure," he said of the trip. Bird, an 82-year-old Native American, was on a quest to return to her roots on Garden Island, a place she left when she was six years old. The trip was both a delight and a disappointment for everyone who accompanied Agnes on her quest.

Beaver Island.net isn't quite as wonderful as visiting Beaver Island in person — but it's a close second, and definitely a lot easier to reach. Make the trip.

Legislators want to make Labor Day a four-day weekend

Senator Walter North (R-St. Ignace) and Representative Scott Shackleton (R-Sault Ste. Marie) announced that they have introduced legislation to create a four-day weekend over Labor Day. In addition, Senate Bill 53 and House Bill 4099 would create a seven-member commission to study the effects of a post-Labor Day school start. The school start commission is required to report its findings to the legislature and governor no later than Dec. 31, 2000.

"Studies show that parents would rather travel in late August and early September than in June," North said. "As a state that is dependent on the tourism industry, we must make sure that we are in touch with the desires of these tourists."

"I am confident that the committee will come back with a recommendation in favor of post-Labor Day school starts," said Shackleton, chair of the House Great Lakes and Tourism committee. "This legislation is a win-win for Michigan's families and businesses alike."

Senate Bill 53 has been referred to the Senate Committee on Education and House Bill 4099 has been referred to the House Committee on Education.

OPINIONS

Razing the Wharfside may — or may not — be a good thing

When is a good thing too much of a good thing? It's hard to imagine that we could have too much of the gorgeous view of Round Lake.

But when getting that view requires tearing down commercial retail buildings, where do we stop?

When the city bought the Parkside building a few years ago with the intent of tearing it down to create more park space (and more view), the plan received mixed reviews.

No one will argue that the view left behind is terrific.

Many will argue that they'd rather be eating whitefish at the Parkside than sitting on the grassy knoll, but that wasn't an option.

We're faced with the same question with the potential razing of the former Wharfside building. While it's possible that North Seas Gallery and Kilwin's could relocate to other retail spaces along Bridge Street without any adverse consequences to their businesses, what about the Pine Lake Boat Shop?

That business occupies the lower level of the building, a few convenient steps from the docks on Round Lake.

According to Jim Nowka, owner of the boat shop, moving to a different Bridge Street location isn't a viable option for him. His customers routinely stroll in right off their boats wearing swim shorts and flip-flops, looking for a weather update, local news or a piece of hardware for their boat.

"People joke about us being the second chamber of commerce building, because we provide a lot of information for boaters," Nowka said.

Will boaters venture a few blocks away for the same service and information? It's doubtful. Can this type of business flourish if it has a regular storefront on Bridge Street? It's unlikely. .

It might also be moot, since Nowka has no plans to relocate in downtown Charlevoix if the Wharfside building is torn down.

"I have nowhere to go, so I'm basically screwed," Nowka said.

While the business in that location has floundered in the past with different owners, it now appears to be thriving, going into its third year under Nowka's ownership.

The Pine Lake Boat Shop is one of those unique businesses that fills a special need on Round Lake. Along with his retail business of boating gear and clothing, Nowka brokers boats. Boats for sale are often tied up at the dock just outside the store, where customers can walk along the piers and take a look at the floating armada for sale. The service provided there couldn't be as readily provided in any other location.

EDITORIAL

Boaters often ask Nowka to keep an eye on their boats if an emergency crops up and they have to leave for a few days. In some instances, Nowka delivers their boats to a different location if the owners are unable to do so themselves.

Would boaters seek out this assistance from a shop on Bridge Street or on a side street, several blocks away from the water?

Nowka is just one businessman on Round Lake, and perhaps the city and the boaters will get along just fine without him.

The bigger question is, what will happen to the retail industry in Charlevoix if we continue to remove buildings in favor of views? Adhering to the law of supply and demand, it's possible that the price of retail space will skyrocket with fewer buildings and spaces available. We could be left with only a few pricey boutique shops in our downtown area — the type of businesses that close their doors in the winter and cater only to tourists in the summer.

"Here's a town that's demolishing its downtown area," Nowka said. "I'm thoroughly amazed."

It's impossible to predict the future impact of the demolition of another building in downtown Charlevoix. The result could very well be that Charlevoix becomes even more famous as a coastal community with an unrivaled view of the harbor. Maybe tourists will flock to our town in even bigger droves to enjoy the view.

Or it could be that, with so few businesses left, people drive by slowly to enjoy the view and cruise on up the coast to better shopping and dining destinations.

The potential impact should be considered very carefully before city council starts swinging the wrecking ball.

Letters to the editor

Reader applauds decision to reinstate expelled student

Dear Editor:

I was delighted to read about the student being reinstated in school, and also that he received home schooling from the (school). How wonderful! and compassionate!

As parents, I know, we must be concerned about the protection of our own children, however, can we be 100 percent sure that our child would never be the culprit?

I have read, as I am sure that most of you have also, that some children of prominent people, politicians, ministers, etc., like those in our midst, have caused much headache to their parents, and many, by "the grace of God," have returned to their roots.

I remember, many years ago, hearing a TV broadcast by Bishop Fulton Sheen, in which he said that Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini had been expelled from school for fighting and causing trouble. However, he felt sure that their zest and creativity could have been channeled constructively and positively by one caring teacher. Food for thought!

Sincerely,
Joan Bousouet

Kids snake their way through career day at Raven Hill

By Jamie MacMillan

DAY OF CHALLENGES

Charlevoix seventh grade students spent a majority of their time Monday and Tuesday getting massages, playing skill games and holding massive jungle python snakes.

Their activities were not the result of some nouveau curriculum, but rather a career day at the Raven Hill Discovery Center on the outskirts of East Jordan.

The career day was put together by the Char-Em Intermediate School District (ISD). Most of the ISD middle schools will be spending an afternoon or two touring Raven Hill as well as learning about some unique careers.

The Charlevoix seventh graders, in different groups, spent four hours on Monday and Tuesday at Raven Hill and were treated to a day of fun, science and danger.

"This is the best part, this is what I want to do," said student and budding animal handler Troy Coen, while standing amid the squawking wild birds in the center's animal room.

After dividing into smaller groups, students rotated to six different presentations, spending 30 minutes with each presenter. Students learned about careers in massage therapy, forestry, medical illustration, mathematical engineering as well as received tours of the center's main museum and animal room.

Charlevoix Schools job coordinator Gail Cherry said the time at Raven Hill was not so much to direct students into a career, but to simply plant the seeds in students' minds that your future career is decided "by choice, not chance."

"We're creating an awareness that someday they'll have to get a job and that it might as well be something they're interested in," Cherry said.

For many students, it was their first trip to Raven Hill. Much time was spent trying to conquer all the science-related games and devices offered in the center's main museum.

Raven Hill is filled with displays which teach basic science lessons, but do so by requiring visitors to play with the devices to see for themselves.

"There are so many hands-on activities here, which is always encouraged," Cherry said. "It's good to get the students away from the typical school learning environment."

In the main museum, students saw how much electricity they can generate on their own by riding a stationary bike, built large magnetic towers, learned basic physics through a series of games and played musical instruments, among many other things.

While most students reported having fun at all six stops, most agreed with Coen that the animal center supervised by Raven Hill owner Tim Leach was the top draw.

Students handled ferrets, wild birds and iguanas in the animal room, but the biggest oohs and aahs were saved for the set of massive jungle snakes that Leach keeps in the room. Raven Hill houses about 10 snakes, mostly boa constrictors and pythons from the jungles of Asia, Africa and South America, ranging from five feet to 10 yards in length.

While some students (and reporters) were a bit tepid in their enthusiasm to the large, thick reptiles, most students were excited and readily handled the snakes.

The old adage that snakes are more afraid of us than we are of them was proven. One group of students let the largest Asian python spread out along their laps from one end to the other, only to have the nervous snake relieve himself on one student's lap as he crawled away toward his cage.

Mt. McSauba hosts ski and snowboard races this coming week

There isn't a full blown Sno Challenge winter festival this February, but there are still fun family activities at Mt. McSauba. All that will be missing are large trucks and snowmobiles. For some people, they won't be missed.

The local ski hill, Mt. McSauba, will be the place to go for the annual Ski and Snowboard Races Monday, Feb. 15.

There will be age group competition for kids ages 5 and under through adult, with a separate division for kids enrolled in the Northern Michigan Ski Academy.

When the ski races are over, snowboarders can compete in an Extreme Snowboard Scramble.

Registration will be from 5-6 p.m. with a fee of $2 per event. Races start at 6 p.m. sharp.

For more information, call Mt. McSauba at 547-3267.

Recruitment starting for preschool programs

Groups join forces to help preschoolers

Joint recruitment activities for the developmental preschool programs in the area will be held by Northwest Michigan Human Services Head Start, Char-Em Early Education Consortium Be Three/Be Four programs, East Jordan Prep Program and the Women's Resource Center.

Recruitment activities will take place during the months of March and April. Children ages 3, 4, and 5 are eligible to apply, including children with special needs.

The basic goal of these programs is to encourage well-rounded development. This is accomplished through teaching health, language, self-help, socialization, large and small muscle development, and cognitive (thinking) skills. Teachers, community professionals, family service staff and parents (whose perception is extremely important) work together to meet this goal through center and home-based activities.

Those interested in applying for these free preschool programs should call 347-9070, (East Jordan call 547-1602), before Feb. 28 to make an appointment. You will need to bring:

— Your child.

— His or her immunization record.

— Social Security numbers of all household members.

— Medical and dental insurance or your blue Medicaid card if you have one.

— Your child's birth certificate.

— Proof of income.

Class list will be determined according to family needs, based on Head Start-identified priority factors.

Because class lists will be determined in May for the fall programs, it is important that interested families make their appointments now.

"The Japanese Way of Tea" exhibit opens at Jordan River Arts Center

"Make a bowl of tea so that it is delicious, place charcoal so that the water will boil, arrange flowers just as they are in the field, keep cool in summer and warm in winter, arrive early when keeping appointments, carry an umbrella even when it doesn't rain, and be mindful of your fellow guests."

These are the seven rules laid down by Sen no Rikyu, the originator of Chado, the Art of Tea Ceremony.

The Jordan River Arts Council has received full funding of $2,000 for a unique exhibit with related educational experiences called "Chado: The Japanese Way of Tea." This event will be from 1-4 p.m. daily, Feb. 14 through March 11, at the Jordan River Arts Center, 301 Main St., East Jordan. This grant money is made available through the Arts-Mini Grant Program from the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs and the Cheboygan Area Arts Council.

This education exhibit should provide a unique opportunity, especially for persons of the Jordan Valley community to work together to broaden their cultural knowledge. All will have the opportunity to enrich their lives, coming together in the spirit of the family and community. Qualities such as friendship, respect, sincerity, simplicity, harmony, understanding, tranquility, reflection, nature, and beauty are components of the Japanese Way of Tea; and such qualities that give meaning to life in any culture. Many artifacts of the Japanese culture will be exhibited including woodblock prints, the kimono, scrolls, flower arrangements, and 1,000 cranes made by school children. The tea bowl is being featured, made by area ceramists, as well as some that are nationally known.

Opening the exhibit will be a presentation of the traditional tea ceremony at 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 14. Yoko Watanabe, Tea Master, University of Michigan Art Museum will perform the ceremony with Yasuo Watanabe serving as narrator. The set for the tea ceremony will be a life-sized replica of a tea house which is being constructed by Poineau Woodworkers, Inc. The audience is limited to approximately 60 people and reservations will be required.

Anyone wishing to participate in the ceremony will have the opportunity to make their own tea bowl. Two ceramic workshops are scheduled at Otis Pottery, 1694 M-66 N., East Jordan, Michigan, from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday Feb. 6. David and June Otis will lead the workshop, present a slide discussion of the tea bowl and demonstrate techniques of construction. Persons will be able to make as many tea bowls as they desire for the cost of $10 each. The workshop is family-oriented.

For more information or to register for the workshop, call Otis Pottery at 536-7856 or Maggie Matthews at 536-7987.

State rep gets toll-free number

State Representative Andy Neumann (D-Alpena) announced that a toll-free telephone number has been set up which will allow residents of the 106th District — which includes Alpena, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, and Presque Isle counties — to contact his Lansing office easier. The new number is 1-877-ANDY106 (or 1-877-263-9106).

"The people of Northern Michigan deserve to have their voices heard in Lansing. This toll-free number is just one of the ways by which I hope to have them be heard," said Neumann. "The 106th District is very large geographically, and while I plan to be in all four counties as much as I can given my responsibilities in Lansing, the toll-free number will keep me in touch."

People having problems with state government agencies or who want to make their views on pending legislation known are encouraged to call Neumann's office.

"Dependable, first-class constituent service will be a hallmark of my tenure as state representative. It is as important to make laws work as it is to make good laws." Neumann said.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to Charlevoix Area Hospital, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Marcia H. Alger

Marcia H. Alger, 98, of Charlevoix, died Feb. 6, 1999 at Bortz Health Care of Petoskey. A spring grave side service will be scheduled with burial in Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Marcia was born March 27, 1900, in River Falls, Wis., the daughter of Harry Phineas and Ethel (Heasley) Hurlburt. In 1922, she married Carlton W. Alger.

She worked for the federal government in Washington, D.C. at the U.S. Information Agency, where she was known as the "Voice of America." Marcia retired from the government on Jan. 20, 1966.

She moved to Charlevoix in 1973.

Survivors include her daughter, Shirley Williams, of Annandale, Va.; son, James (Fay) Alger of Charlevoix; 13 grandchildren; and 19 great-grandchildren. Marcia was preceded in death by her husband, and daughters, Carlyn Smith of Charlotte, N.C. and Betty Christjansen of Terre Haute, Ind.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Charlevoix United Methodist Church building fund. Envelopes for memorials are available at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Bonita Higman Henley

Bonita Higman Henley, 87, died Friday, Jan. 29, in Sun City, Ariz., where she lived since 1978.

She was born Jan. 12, 1912, in Charlevoix, the daughter of William and Katherine Hoskinson Higman. After graduation from Charlevoix High School in 1930, she was employed as a secretary and accountant in Grand Rapids, then in Petoskey until she moved to Tucson, Ariz. in 1951.

She married Cecil E. Henley in Tucson Dec. 31, 1959, and they lived in Van Nuys, Calif. until Mr. Henley's death in 1972.

Surviving are two sisters, LaRue Gill of Charlevoix and Anne Olmstead of La Crescenta, Calif., as well as nieces and nephews in both her own and her husband's family.

Burial was in Tucson, Ariz. A brief prayer service in her memory was conducted by Rev. Philip R. Schairbaum at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix on Sunday, Jan. 31.

A. Isabella "Bella" Mowrey

A. Isabella "Bella" Mowrey, 83, formerly of Orchard Lake, Mich. and Naples Fla., passed away quietly at her Charlevoix home on Wednesday, Jan. 27, 1999.

Mrs. Mowrey was married to Art Mowrey for 30 years until his death in 1970. Bella is survived by her two sons, Chet and his wife, Charlene, and Frank; devoted niece Ernestine; grandchildren Kirsten, Chet Jr., Jessica, Frank Jr. and Autumn.

Loving, wise and always uncomplaining, Bella was a Charlevoix institution for more than 50 years. Her absence makes us all poorer.

A memorial service will be held in Charlevoix at a later date. No flowers, please; instead, the family would appreciate contributions to the American Cancer Society.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

Wait, there's so much more!

I once heard a story of a young lad who was growing up in the country in the late 1800s. The boy was 12 years old and had never seen a circus. One day in school the teacher put up a poster to announce that a traveling circus was coming to the nearby town the next Saturday. He ran home that day with jubilant excitement to tell his parents of the coming event.

His father, though the family was poor, knew how important the circus would be to the lad and promised him he could go Saturday if he finished his chores ahead of time. Come Saturday morning, the boy had finished his chores and stood at the breakfast table dressed in his Sunday best. His father reached into the pocket of his overalls and pulled out a dollar bill — the most money the boy had possessed at one time in all his life. The father cautioned him to be careful and then sent him on his way to town.

The boy was so excited his feet hardly seemed to touch the ground all the way. As he neared the outskirts of the village he noticed people lining the streets. He made his way through the crowd until he could see what was happening. It was the approaching spectacle of a circus parade!

The parade was the best thing the boy had ever seen. "What fun," the boy exclaimed! In the parade were caged animals which snarled as they passed by. Bands beat their rhythm and sounded shiny horns; midgets performed acrobatics while dancers twirled and leaped. Everything was so wonderful. Finally the entourage passed by. The traditional circus clown with floppy shoes and baggy pants and a brightly painted face brought up the rear. As the clown joyfully danced by the boy reached into his pocket and took out that precious dollar bill. Handing the money to the clown the boy turned and went home.

Oh no, wait there's more, you're probably thinking. The sad thing is the little boy thought he had seen the circus but he had actually only seen the parade!

This story reminds me of many religious people. Though their intentions are good, they pay their dollar, see some great things, but are totally oblivious to the whole circus. Are you experiencing all that God has for you? The life of a disciple of Christ is marked by a marvelous and exciting adventure. Many people seem to be content to float in a sea of mediocrity settling for second best when God has so much more in store for them.

Jesus promised us an abundant life. Do you want it? Then aim higher. Don't set your sights too low. It starts by giving yourself totally to God. Be completely His. Then He will work in you and through you by His Holy Spirit.

There's so much more to life than simply existing on the planet. Until you've been in God's perfect will, you ain't seen nothin' yet!

County commissioners may create a Brownfield Authority to clean up land

By Jamie MacMillan

Hoping to inspire the local cities and townships, the Charlevoix County Planning Commission last week "enthusiastically" endorsed the creation of a Brownfield Development Authority.

A Brownfield Authority collects money — typically in the form of captured property taxes — to clean up vacant, unused and contaminated land so it can be used again for business and residential purposes.

While similar in nature, a Brownfield Authority and a Downtown Development Authority (DDA) differ in that tax money collected for a DDA can be captured from every parcel within the whole district, while a Brownfield Authority can only do so from the specifically designated parcels in the area. Brownfield lands can also qualify for specific grant money and business tax credits.

The endorsement will have final approval only if the county board of commissioners agree with its planners' recommendation.

Commissioner Don Smith, who serves as board liaison to the planning commission, said the board needs to gather more information and doesn't expect it to tackle the issue until March.

"The key thing is to distinguish it from a DDA," Smith said. "This can have tremendous benefits environmentally."

Even if the commissioners approve the idea, the vote will not complete the process. In order for any parcel to be tagged with brownfield status, a three step process must be completed: contamination documentation, Department of Environmental Quality approval and a public hearing.

A new governing board could be created to oversee any Brownfield dealings, from pinpointing the land to creating new developments. Rather than creating a new, seven- to 11-member board, the county commissioners could designate the planning commission as the Brownfield board.

Despite expressing concern about whether the commission could handle the extra workload, some comments were made in terms of how to go about locating land which could use help from a Brownfield Authority.

"It should be proactive on the obvious sites," planner Sandra Stanley said.

Added planner Jamie Hass, "Once word spreads, I don't think you'll have to go looking for work."

In addition to recommending action to county commissioners, planners said they hoped their move will inspire the townships and cities. Land cannot be considered for Brownfield status unless the local board also endorses the Brownfield Authority concept.

School board plows ahead with facility forum plans

By Jamie MacMillan

Despite assertions that it wants to hold one, perhaps two, community facility forums before its next regular session on March 8, the Charlevoix Board of Education still has not set a date for any such event.

John Sturock, superintendent of Charlevoix schools, met with Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce officials who, according to Sturock, "were very receptive and indicated they would like to sponsor" the forum.

If a forum is scheduled, it would be similar in nature to the Venetian Festival forums, also sponsored by the chamber, held last winter. The topic would be what direction any new facility plan should take.

"There are a lot of ways this can be solved," Sturock said. "We've got to find the one thing people will support so we can be successful."

Sturock presented to the board during its meeting Monday night an ambitious time line to solve the district's facility issue. Starting with community forums this month, the time line ends with a September election.

Sturock would like to use whatever information that comes out of any community forums and then create a steering committee of teachers, school officials and district residents who will meet during April and May. That committee will recommend action to the board who will consider it and finalize a plan in June.

During the spring, the district will also send out postcard mailings to further survey the community's thoughts.

Sturock admitted that plan was aggressive, and without a community forum currently scheduled, it might be already behind schedule.

"We could always back this up, but at this point I would rather try to push it," he said.

Board president Allen Telgenhof asked what kind of role the board should play in the community forums and questioned if it would be appropriate if board members gave any input during the proceedings.

Sturock said board members should attend, stay in the background, listen and be there if anyone has any questions.

In other news, a new face will be in charge of the girls' basketball program when the team hits the court next fall.

The board accepted the resignation of current coach Tim Volovsek. Volovsek, a science teacher at Charlevoix High School, had guided the program for the last two seasons, compiling a 12-32 record.

Volovsek is currently coaching the freshmen boys' basketball team and prior to practice on Monday afternoon he admitted that the job he is leaving was "no longer enjoyable." He did say, however, that a desire to spend time with his family was a primary reason to resign. Volovsek and his wife, Marie, are new homeowners with two young children.

"Being a varsity head coach takes so much time and effort even into the off-season, that it just added to everything," Volovsek said.

Athletic director Keith Haske said no immediate plans to replace Volovsek are in the works. The district will be hiring a slew of new teachers for next fall and Haske said he would like to see if any quality basketball coaches are unearthed during that search before hiring anyone.

Brownfield authority recommended by Grand Traverse County planner way to go as far as future action is concerned, explained Eric Heltzer, a Grand Traverse development representative who was on hand to show planners how Brownfields have benefited Grand Traverse County.

Heltzer said counties can handle multiple projects, but cities and townships, by law, can only do one project at a time.

"Townships have big problems, they don't have the means to do this," Heltzer said.

The planners' approval came after the commission spent consecutive meetings hearing presentations on the subject.

"It's a tool that if you're not positioning yourself to take advantage of, you're being short-sighted," Hass said. "You can turn a zero tax property into a high tax property."

Dance workshops offered at McCune Arts Center

Three dance workshops are being planned at McCune Arts Center in Petoskey in February and March.

Dorothy Eisenstein, dancer and instructor at Northern Michigan College in Traverse City, has created dance workshops for kids and adults.

STRETCHING for children will be from 11 a.m. to noon Saturday, Feb. 13. Kids will learn to stretch and exercise using modern dance and yoga movements. Eisenstein will use creative approaches to stretching with colorful props, adding to the fun of learning. Tuition is $10 per child.

From 1-2:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 13, teens through adults can try a Dance Sampler. Participants will explore new and different ways to move, while learning about ballet, modern dance and jazz. This workshop is designed as an introduction to various dance styles and is a great opportunity to discover dance as an expressive performing art. Tuition is $15 per person.

The third offering will be from 1-3 p.m. Saturday, March 13, when Eisenstein and members of the Northern Michigan College Dance Company will offer a Modern Dance Workshop for teens through adults.

Participants will explore the elements of modern dance in a creative and fun workshop. A gentle warm-up of dance and yoga movements will begin the workshop, followed by interesting approaches to modern dance using music, masks and colorful props. Tuition is $20 per person.

To register, call the McCune Arts Center at 347-4337.

Community foundation appoints new trustees

Richard Joseph

Three new trustees will serve on the board of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. The appointments were announced at the organization's recent board meeting.

Named to serve three-year terms on the foundation's governing board were Richard Joseph, a Charlevoix resident and partner in the law firm of Joseph, Corcoran and Telgenhof; Judith Lanier, distinguished professor of education at Michigan State University and a resident of Beaver Island; and Paul Michael, an East Jordan resident who recently retired after 28 years as treasurer of the East Jordan Iron Works, who remains active in numerous civic affairs. The three join 12 other volunteers from throughout the county who serve on the board of trustees.

Started in 1992 by a group of local citizens, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation receives charitable donations, manages them in a permanent endowment and distributes income from that endowment to support a variety of this area's nonprofit organizations and civic initiatives. Trustees of the foundation encourage contributions, oversee the financial management of the group's assets and make decisions about grant making. Other trustees are: president, Bill Lorne; vice president, Bill Sherman; treasurer, Larry Mattox; secretary, Jean VanDam; trustees Scott Beatty, John Frey, Leon Jarema, Vel Kammermann, Wally Klein, Nancy Porter, Joe Reed and Mike Stowe.

Skiers peaking for regionals

By Jamie MacMillan

It doesn't matter how you start a season, but how you finish it.

If that's true, then Charlevoix ski coach Sue Miller must be pleased, because with the post-season approaching, her Rayder ski teams seem to be at peak performance.

Both the girls' and boys' teams skied to second place finishes in last Monday's nine-team Manistee Invitational. The girls' team then wrapped up their regular season by winning a conference tri-meet while the boys' club placed a close second in the same meet.

With Tiffany Fisher winning both the slalom and giant slalom, combined with six other Charlevoix top-10 finishes, the girls cruised to an easy conference win over Boyne City and Traverse City-St. Francis (TCSF) at Boyne Mountain. The Rayders ended with 34 points. Boyne City was second with 51 points and TCSF was third with 77.

Fisher won the slalom with a two-run combined time of 1:06.61 and was backed up by teammates Lexi Wilson, fifth, Kelly Kusina, sixth, Kirsten Brendtro, seventh, and Alisha Johnson, 13th.

Fisher's giant slalom time of 46.37 edged out second place Meghann Gerling by two hundredths of a second. Wilson placed third in the GS for Charlevoix followed by Kusina, fourth, Brendtro, seventh, and Johnson, 11th.

In the boys' meet, Charlevoix's Todd Freidinger matched Fisher with a pair of wins, but overall, the team couldn't match the depth of the girls' team en route to a second place finish. Trouble for Roscoe Serrels on his first slalom run wiped out the team's chance for a first place finish. Serrels' second slalom run was more than one second faster than Freidinger's time on the second run. Boyne City took the meet with 39 points followed by Charlevoix, 47, and TCSF, 91.

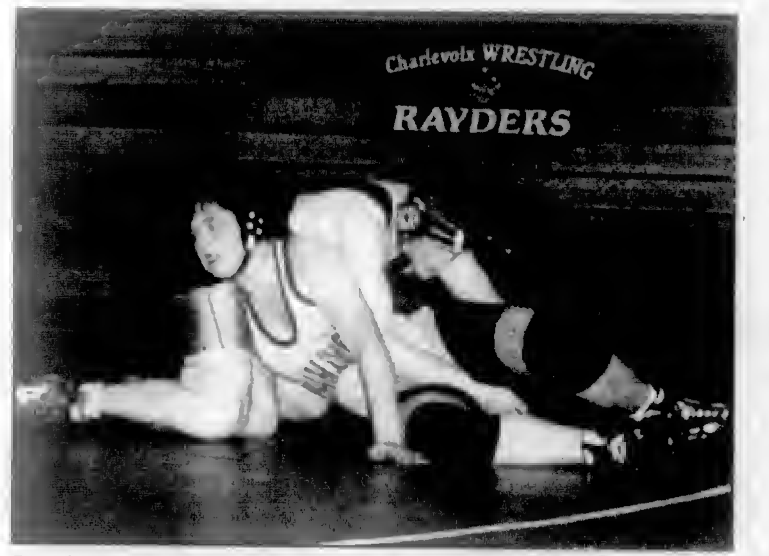
Freidinger's combined slalom time of 1:04.66 was almost two seconds better than his nearest competitor while his 43:20 in the GS event was .16 better than second place. Rounding out the Rayders' results were Steve Pirie, third GS, fourth slalom; Roscoe Serrels, fourth GS, 14th slalom; Shawn MacMillan, 14th GS, eighth slalom; Joel Trubilowicz, 16th GS; and Kyle Louiselle, 18th GS, 12th slalom.

Earlier in the week, both teams earned second place finishes in the Manistee Invitational. In each case, Charlevoix topped everyone in the nine-team field except the host team, Manistee.

The teams earned a total of nine top-10 finishes in the events: Serrels, second boys' slalom, fourth boys' GS; Freidinger, third boys' slalom, eighth boys' GS; Pirie, second boys' GS; Kusina, ninth girls' slalom, eighth girls' GS; Fisher third girls' slalom; and Wilson, fifth girls' slalom.

The Rayders' regular season has concluded, but two important meets loom in the next week. The team will ski in the regional finals at Nub's Nob at 10 a.m. Thursday Feb. 11, weather permitting, and then in the conference championships at Boyne Mountain at 12 noon next Tuesday, Feb. 16.

In the regional meet, the top three teams advance into the state finals as do the top four skiers in each event after skiers from qualifying teams are taken out of the standings.



Rayder wrestler Chris Loper labored with his Rogers City foe before pinning him in the 189-pound match of last week's meet with the Hurons.

Grapplers take top four finishes in meet

Six Rayder grapplers earned top-four finishes in Saturday afternoon's Houghton Lake Junior Varsity Wrestling Invitational.

The team was paced by Ryan Novotny, who took a first place in his 135-pound flight.

Keith Patrick, heavyweight, placed second. Nate Holmes, 119, Jerry Zeitler, 140, and Chris Loper, 189 earned third places and Ben Macks, 160, earned a fourth.

Also last week, the team lost a dual meet to a Rogers City "B" team, 50-33. Novotny, Loper and Pop each won matches for the Rayders.

The Rayders hosted Cadillac last night, Tuesday, but results were incomplete at press time. The match was the regular season finale and the team now has a week to prepare for team and individual district competition, which begins for Charlevoix on Wednesday, Feb. 17 with the team district finals.

Rayders stumble offensively, fall to TCSF, 58-55

Despite the Rayders' loss, Justin Thorp grabbed 16 rebounds and hit this jumper over a pair of defenders. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

Charlevoix's march to the Lake Michigan Conference title hit its first land mine last week.

Traverse City-St. Francis, overcoming some lousy free throw shooting, drilled three treys during a decisive two minute stretch late in the game to upend the Rayders, 58-55, on Charlevoix's home floor.

Meanwhile, 35 miles down the shoreline, Elk Rapids clobbered Harbor Springs, 90-57, to seize control of first place in the conference from Charlevoix. The two schools will battle it out next Tuesday, Feb. 16 in Elk Rapids.

By virtue of the win, the Elks rest atop the standings with a 7-1 record. Charlevoix, having played one less league game than the Elks, fell behind by one-half game with a 6-1 league mark.

The Rayders, 11-2 overall, saw their three-game winning streak snapped by the Glads despite opening up a double digit lead in the latter portion of the first half.

The Glads held a 14-12 lead after the first quarter, but Charlevoix quickly heated things up to start the second stanza. Adam Wood canned three treys on consecutive possessions to start the quarter and jump the Rayders to a 21-16 lead.

The lead climbed to 30-20 before the Glads closed the half with six straight points, trailing by only four points at intermission.

Twice the Glads nudged ahead by a point, 33-32, and, 37-36, early in the second half before a 9-2 Rayder run, sparked by a half dozen points from Sean Stockman, gave Charlevoix some apparent breathing room, 45-39.

The lead had been whittled back down to a bucket, 45-43, heading into the final stanza, but the Rayders were able to build the lead back to six after a pair of Tom Cunningham free throws and a hoop by Matt McClellan.

After that, however, the highlights belonged to TCSF.

Ken Bochy hit two three-pointers and Tim O'Brien swished another and suddenly the Glads' owned a 56-51 lead with just over two minutes to play.

The Rayders scrabbled back to within one point, 56-55, on a McClellan hoop and two free throws from Justin Thorp. They had numerous chances in the final minutes to tie or take the lead thanks to the Glads' inability to cash in from the charity stripe.

After the Rayders sliced the deficit to a single point, the Glads missed the front ends of three straight one-and-one situations. Charlevoix, however, couldn't capitalize, twice turning the ball over on entry passes, and later missing the mark on three-point shots.

The Glads added a basket on Chris O'Brien's jump shot after an offensive rebound, but again missed out to clinch the contest after clanking a pair of free throw misses with five seconds left. A final attempt by the Rayders to send the game into an extra frame went awry when a last ditch trey from Jim Kanine missed off the iron.

Dave Winfry led four Glads in double figures with 14 points and Bochy added 13. Wood was the lone Rayder in double figures, scoring 14.

"We've been in a funk for the last four games," coach Keith Haske said. "We can't seem to put the ball in the hole."

After wowing crowds early in the season with their scoring touch, the Rayders have managed just 65 points per game in their last four outings and twice have failed to surpass 55 points.

"We're not shooting well," Haske said, "We're not getting a lot of production from outside the perimeter."

The Glads didn't just rain on the varsity's parade, but they swept the whole night, winning both the freshmen and junior varsity games prior to the varsity game.

Despite Keith Daly's 18 points, the Rayder freshmen squad fell, 59-40, to drop their record to 7-5.

Brandon Bruce's JV squad, playing without some key players due to medical illnesses, saw their record fall to 8-5 after a 73-63 loss to the JV Glads. For Charlevoix, Ryan Stone scored 13 and Will Wright added 11 to go with 12 rebounds.

Before Charlevoix's showdown with Elk Rapids, the teams have a date at Boyne City on Friday, Feb. 12. A freshmen game begins the night at 4:15 p.m.

Rod and Gun Club teams with 4-H to offer shooting sports

The 4-H Shooting Sports Education Program for Charlevoix & Emmet County youth has expanded its programs that are available to young people.

The program was developed through a partnership between the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and the local 4-H program. The winter/spring programs that will be offered include: 4-H BB Gun, 4-H Skeet/Trap Shooting as well as 4-H Archery.

"In our first year of partnership with the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club we have experienced a tremendous amount of growth and interest from local communities," said John Wurm, Charlevoix County 4-H Youth Agent.

The 4-H BB gun program will be offered by Leo Behling. Behling has a long history of developing shooting sports programs with the Charlevoix County 4-H program. This program will be offered from 10 a.m. until noon Saturdays beginning Feb. 20 through April 24. Ages for participation are from 9-19. Younger children are admitted conditionally with a test from their instructor.

The 4-H Archery program is a new program and will be conducted from 6-8 p.m. Mondays from Feb. 22 to April 12. The age ranges for that program are from 8-19. The instructors will be Dominic Greenman and Todd Culver. Greenman is a past participant in 4-H shooting sports programs while Culver is the owner of Triple T Archery in Boyne City.

The 4-H Skeet program is being offered by Chuck Kalbfleisch. Kalbfleisch actually initiated the partnership after finding many young people requesting youth programs through the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. The 4-H Skeet Shooting program will run afternoons from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. Saturdays in March and continue through May. The ages for that program are 12-19. In addition to many hands-on skills, participants will focus on learning proper gun care and safety.

All participants of 4-H shooting sports that involve firearms must have their hunter safety training certificate. This training will be offered prior to the 4-H Skeet & Trap program and will be sponsored by the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

Other programs that are being planned by the group include air pellet, rifle and muzzle loading programs. A planning meeting will be hosted at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 17 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. Anyone interested in helping in any of the areas should plan to attend.

This year, the program is being dedicated to the memory of Homer Pharis. He gave freely of his time and was dedicated to Shooting Sports Education for all young people. Pharis participated in the activities of 4-H shooting sports and even attended the State 4-H Shooting Sports Tournament during the summer of 1998.

Those wishing to get involved should contact the MSU Extension office for a registration packet. To be assured of participation, youth participants are asked to preregister. There is a limit to the number of potential participants in all of the programs. While the group is non-profit, there is a minimal charge to cover expenses. Grocery receipts or vouchers may be applied to the registration fee, and limited scholarships are also available. Any youth interested in participating or any adults interested in helping are invited to contact the MSU Extension office at 582-6232.

Photos on tape preserve old Charlevoix scenes

By Marilyn Boss

Hometown Chronicles

Dale and I had a very pleasant surprise a few days ago, when we received a videotape in the mail from Captain Eugene Bridge, with pictures of the 1920's and 30's on it. Gene taped the pictures from 10 large reels of 16 mm film. The picture quality was deteriorated because they were 70 years old, but we enjoyed all of it. Gene's father, Robert Bridge, who owned an insurance agency and was president of the Charlevoix County State Bank, had taken many pictures of Charlevoix on his movie camera. Bob became mayor of Charlevoix in later years. Thanks to Gene, we see some of the things that were happening at that time.

There are many family shots taken at 200 E. Dixon, where they lived, and also pictures of Bob's parents, Albert and Celia Bridge, who lived in the big home next to theirs. Bob had a new 1928 Model A car. At that time, there were many double-ended boats (which had a bow on both ends), racing outboard motor boats, and also sail boats. There is a picture of John Roen's first ship, the Fred W. Green. Gene recalls riding on the ship down to Ludington. They had a big crane on the ship, which Roen's son, Mark operated, and when they reached their destination, the Bridges were lifted onto the sandy shore by the crane.

The videotaped photos captured many races on Lake Charlevoix with speedboats. Jimmy Reis and Bill Ockrant were two of those who participated. Pete Ance (the father of Lyle and Norm) owned a ship, the "Piff-Paff." Those shown enjoying a cruise wore their best suits, coats, and the ladies wore the close-fitting hats of that era, and long fancy coats. Many enjoyed tennis matches at the Inn, with the courts located in a field where Marge Dinwiddie's home now stands.

There are pictures inside the bank of Ada Golden and Harry Ladd at their desks. The train at the depot station is also shown, and Meech Street only had two houses on it at the time, one of them being the home Bill Fochtman lived in, and the other, where Ralph Doan lives today. There are also pictures of Gene and his friend, Marian Craig (Rogers), as little tykes, riding Gene's tricycle with Marian standing on the back, hanging on for dear life. The yacht, Sylvia, owned by Logan Thompson, and the Reomar owned by R. E. Olds, are also pictured, and a Coast Guard Cutter (either the Hyacinth or the Hollyhock), at anchor.

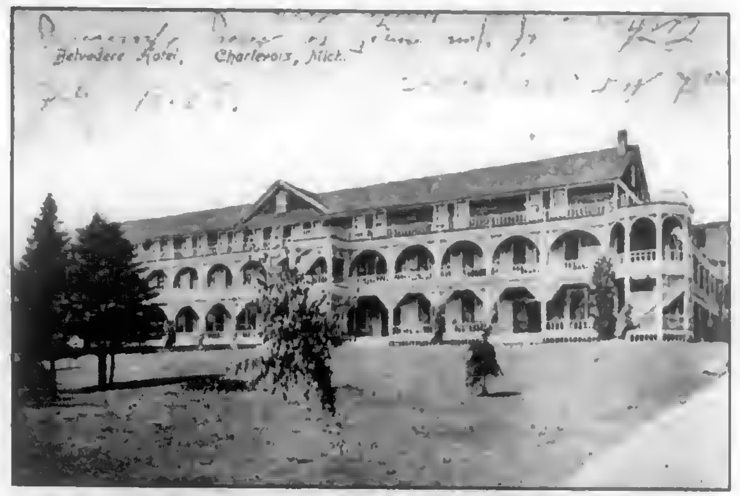
People really loved outdoor winter sports and parades. Petoskey and Charlevoix both had winter parades. The Lake Charlevoix Winter Sports Club named their parade the "Polar Bear's Parade." Charlevoix's parade was made up of a modified Model T with the wheels out of sync, making it wobble down the street, horses pulling skiers, bobsleds, cutters, and even Allie Moore, who was sitting in a small boat.

A commercial segment is included, which was financed by the Reo Motor Car Company and filmed by the Detroit News. They made captions for the Charlevoix scenes. There were pictures of five men, each being pulled by a horse, racing across the ice on Lake Charlevoix, with the caption "No brakes provided." There were Model Ts pulling skiers, and dogs pulling kids on sleds. A group of cars driving behind the big snow plow traveled to Mt. McSauba, where those who skied or rode on sleds and toboggans used the very steep hill that was there at the time. Fred Hardy, a local skier, was very proficient at going over the jump they had at the top of the hill. The spectators gathered along the side of the hill and at the bottom, enjoying the spectacle and also the inevitable spills. Fred was the father of Gene, Dave, Don, and Janet Hardy.

There was a huge rotary plow which was demonstrated at the Chicago Club, where there was a great amount of snow. Also pictured was Leo Allard and the snow plow he drove for the city. Gene's grandfather Morris is shown figure-skating at the age of 75, and he did an excellent job of it.

Charlevoix had three big bobsleds, one owned by Oscar Stroud, one by Frank Bird, and one by Floyd Brown. There was a picture of Louie Wallace in a '29 Model A pulling the sleds back up Bridge Street hill, when they used to go down the hill all the way north through town, across the bridge to the north hill. Clair Webster, the Standard Oil dealer, would take his truck, fill it with water, and ice the track down the center of Bridge Street. Oscar has rebuilt his sled, and has it hanging in his garage. We have the irons and remains of Frank Bird's sled in our garage, given to us by Bill Price. We're hoping to rebuild it someday in the future, when we get old.

Charlevoix certainly enjoyed the seasons back then, and with no TV to contend with, hikes in the woods and fun on the lakes all year long became the normal thing for youngsters and grownups alike to enjoy.



This postcard, dated 1908, depicts the former Belvedere Hotel, which was located on the corner of Belvedere Avenue overlooking the Belvedere Casino. The huge hotel was razed in the late 1950s. The postcard was apparently sent by Esther to a friend in Mancelona. Esther writes: "Got here safe and sound. Will start to work at this place now before supper. But I am rooming at Mrs. Braim. Am going to do dining room work... If you aren't too busy, write soon. Esther." Hard to believe that in 1908, a person in Charlevoix wanting to communicate with someone in Mancelona had to write postcards and letters. (Photo courtesy of Ellen Jesmore)

Cheers to the cheerleaders

The Charlevoix High School varsity cheerleaders placed second out of 19 schools in the varsity, class C/D cheerleading competition at Hope College this past Saturday.

The competition for sideline cheerleaders included performing a cheer learned in a morning clinic taught by the Hope College cheerleaders and a cheer they had prepared for the competition.

The cheerleaders performed superbly with their home cheer, receiving 189 out of a possible 200 points. Their enthusiasm and creativity was the key to their success. The girls were also judged on voice, timing, execution and jumps. Their cheer included a well-performed basket toss and split lifts.

City council approves 1999-2000 budget

Municipal docking fees are going up

The Charlevoix City Council adopted its 1999-2000 fiscal year budget without so much as a murmur from anyone in the audience. The council held a public hearing before adopting the budget, but only a few people showed up for the hearing.

The new budget allows the city to collect 12.336 mills in taxes from April 1, 1999 to March 31, 2000. The millage will bring in $1,236,000 in revenue.

The city plans to spend $575,000 in major street work and $195,000 on local street work.

Improvements made to the city's infrastructure are budgeted at $567,700, while the airport improvements, which include a new airport terminal building, are expected to cost $430,500.

Charges for services provided by the city will bring in an estimated $483,400, while interest and rent will earn $280,000.

Not reflected in the new budget is an extra $12,000 in revenue, which is estimated to come from raising the rates for city dock slips in Round Lake. In a work session held just prior to the public hearing, the council approved raising the fee for transient boat slips to the maximum allowable rate set by the Michigan Waterways Commission.

The commission sets a rate for municipal marinas to charge for boat slips.

Over and above that rate is the Mackinac Island rate. City manager Mike Wiesner petitioned the Waterways Commission and requested that Charlevoix be allowed to charge the Mackinac Island rate. According to Wiesner, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Grand Haven also charge the Mackinac Island rate. The new rate means that a 30-foot boat will pay $26 per day instead of $23; on the other end of the spectrum, a 59-foot boat will pay $64.50 per day instead of $58. Fees are charged by the length of a boat. Flat rate ranges from 82 cents per linear foot for a 25-foot boat to $1.40 per foot for boats over 60 feet in length.

"It makes us competitive with other area marinas," Wiesner said. "It's still less than what private marinas are charging."

A complete copy of the city budget is available at city hall.

Counties consider need for a shared forensic pathologist

By Jamie MacMillan

In an attempt to create better evidence for criminal trial proceedings, officials from a handful of northern Michigan counties met last week to discuss the possibility of creating a regional forensics pathologist position.

The pathologist's main job would be to provide autopsies on bodies involved in homicides as well as medical exams on victims involved in other violent, but nonfatal crimes. The position would absorb the medical examiner job, a job filled in most counties by a local doctor.

The idea is that a viable forensics pathologist could provide local prosecuting attorneys with more reliable DNA and forensic evidence as they go to trial.

With a series a high profile murder and assault cases in the Grand Traverse area over the last year, the concept of hiring a regional forensics pathologist is gaining momentum.

"We don't want an OJ Simpson situation here," said Frank Keesler, Grand Traverse County health department official.

Currently, any autopsy performed in homicide case must be done in Grand Rapids. As a result, an exam which would typically cost $1,700 would then cost the host county about $700, according to Charlevoix County medical examiner Reid Freidinger.

In addition to localizing the work and saving some money, a patholo-

Technology teacher to be honored by Society of Engineers

By Jamie MacMillan

Joe Woods, who teaches drafting, architecture and technology classes at Charlevoix High School, will be honored later this month at the Society of Engineers annual banquet.

Change can be daunting, especially when it entails a mid-life switch of careers.

That is exactly what Joe Woods, engineering teacher at Charlevoix High School, faced one decade ago.

Leaving his job as a UPS driver, a job that he took to help pay for college tuition at Central Michigan University, Woods entered the classroom as a drafting and wood shop teacher at Comstock Park High School.

"It sounds kind of hokey, but I thought it was time to make a difference instead of just making money," Woods said of his change.

His stint at Comstock lasted only one year, since he was hired to fill in while a faculty member was on sabbatical. From there, he went to Grant High School, and in the fall of 1993 he arrived in Charlevoix.

One decade into his new career, Woods will be honored later this month at a Society of Engineers banquet as one of the state's top-10 engineering teachers. The honor coincides with National Engineers Week, which runs the week of Feb. 22.

"It's kind of interesting," Woods said. "Coming from UPS to do this, I never expected that I could be any good. I guess this means someone thinks I'm doing a good job."

At Charlevoix, Woods teaches a number of classes from Intro to Drafting to Advanced Manufacturing. He said his favorite classes to teach are the advanced classes because students in those classes are upperclassmen and have been his pupils since their freshmen year.

"At that level, it's more than just a class," he said.

Woods is quick to point out that his classes go beyond the traditional Industrial Arts curriculum. In Industrial Arts classes, students build devices from a basic design and the main focus of the class is learning how to use tools. In his classes, however, everything starts from ground zero in order to bring more thinking skills into the process.

"We want students to be proficient with tools, but we also want them to master the design process for themselves," he said.

Students seem to be catching on to that philosophy. Last spring, Woods' manufacturing technology class took home a gold medal in a statewide robotics contest for their automatic shotgun loader project called the Shell Shock 1,000.

A main focus for Woods' class is to prepare students for the work force. He said it's still unknown if his classes do that because many students go on to college and won't enter the work force until four years after they've left Charlevoix High School. The classes do help give Charlevoix students an edge because of the variety of the curriculum in the engineering department.

"We're exposing our students to a lot more areas," he said. "When it comes to college courses or trying to get a job, they will not be in the dark."

Six counties may share cost of forensic pathologist

COUNTY

gist would also help overcome the lack of medical examiners in some counties. Medical examiners in Grand Traverse and Emmet counties have recently retired, while some counties, like Antrim, don't have any medical examiners.

Most county medical examiners are like Freidinger in that they balance the public service with their own private practice. Freidinger said counties are having a harder time filling those positions once they're vacated because of the odd-ball hours that can come with the job.

"For whatever reasons, most doctors don't want to get involved," he said. "In this era of specialization it might be smart to have our own forensics pathologist."

Freidinger pointed out that a movement a few years ago to create a regional medical examiner "fizzled out."

This new movement was sparked during a Northwest Michigan Alliance of Governments meeting. Keesler brought up the idea and was quite surprised, he said, when it gained momentum.

Last Friday, officials from a series of northern Michigan counties including Charlevoix, Benzie, Antrim, Leelanau, Manistee and Grand Traverse met with officials from Spectrum, a Grand Rapids pathologist firm which would set up a satellite branch in northern Michigan.

A main pathologist would work out of Grand Traverse county and a deputy system would be created to extend its reach beyond the Grand Traverse area. Keesler said local doctors, sheriff deputies or EMTs would be tapped to do basic work such as administration of blood alcohol content tests.

"It would be nice to have someone near your door to do this work," Keesler said.

It remains to be seen if Charlevoix County will get involved. In 1998, no homicides occurred in the county, thereby minimizing the possible need of a regional pathologist. Freidinger handled 25 cases last year, five of which resulted in local autopsies.

County commissioner Vic Patrick attended last week's meeting and said the county board is at least considering the concept.

"The feeling seems favorable to begin to do this more locally rather than going to Grand Rapids every time to get things done," Patrick said.

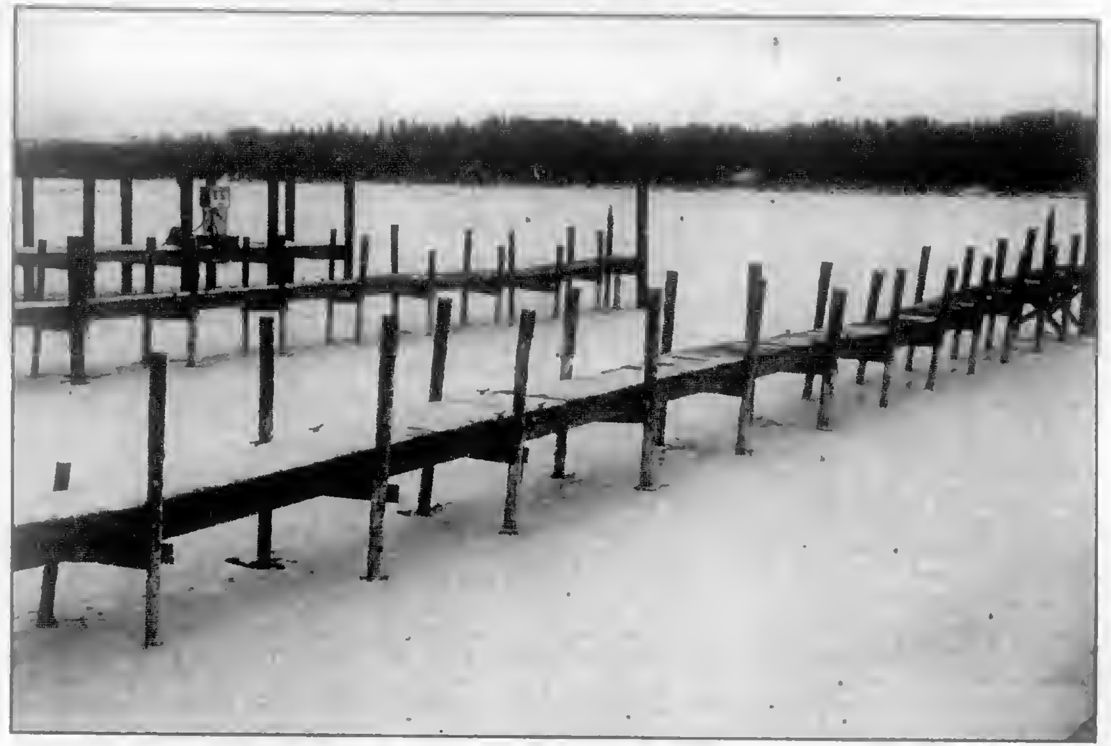
Lake levels have dropped two feet since summer

By Laurie Lounsbury



The docks at the Landing in Ironton stand high and dry, well above the water level. For some, the drop in water level may cause difficulty with dockage this summer, although the lake levels are predicted to rise about a foot by June.

More than a few keen observers have noticed that the lake levels appear to be incredibly low.

Indeed, the water level has dropped two feet since last summer, but no one is panicking just yet. The water level on Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix is still within the realm of normal, and nowhere near the all-time low of 1964, when broad, sandy beaches rimmed the shorelines.

Great Lakes fisheries research biologist Jerry Rakoczy was one person who noticed the low lake levels.

"It's down quite a bit, but we've had a lot of warm weather that would tend to make it (the water) evaporate," Rakoczy said.

A warm, dry summer and a warm fall contributed to the evaporation of lake water. It even contributed to heavy snowfall earlier this winter.

"All that lake effect snow in January, that was all from evaporation," Rakoczy said. "Some of it melts and goes back into the lake, and some of it goes into the ground water tables."

That means the lake levels will probably rise about one foot before summer arrives and people start thinking about putting their boats in the water.

Irish Boat Shop general manager Jack Hodge isn't overly concerned about the low lake levels.

"It won't affect our dock slip reservations, but we will have to do some maintenance dredging," Hodge said. "We've been spoiled over the past years with high water levels. But we're still not below normal levels."

The Army Corps of Engineers has been tracking and recording lake levels since 1918. Their records show that a normal water level for Lake Michigan is 577.5 feet above sea level. In 1964, lake levels were more than a foot below that level, while this year, levels are predicted to be nearly one foot above that level.

"We're obviously way off the 1986 high, but way above the 1964 low," Rakoczy said.

In 1986, water levels peaked in October at nearly five feet above normal. By contrast, levels hit record lows in March of 1964, when they were 1 foot, four inches below the norm.

Since 1997, the water level has hovered at a point about three feet above the norm.

"In March, April and May, the lake comes up again, and then in June it typically goes down a little," Hodge said.

John Miller Music Festival will benefit Camp Quality

John Miller, a well-known country musician from Clarion, died in March of 1995 at the age of 45 after a long battle with cancer. Miller last performed in the area, along with many of his fellow musicians and friends, at the first benefit concert for Camp Quality, held just days prior to his death.

Family and friends of the late John Miller will again honor his memory by staging the third John Miller Music Festival at the Boyne City Knights of Columbus Hall from 2-8 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 28.

This year's music festival will feature two area bands, Northern Nites and F.O.G., along with a live auction and 50-50 drawings. Tickets are available in advance for a $5 donation per person (tax deductible) by calling 535-5071 or 347-9450. Tickets will also be sold at the door. A cash bar and food will be available in a smoke-free environment.

As in the past, Miller's family and friends want all proceeds from the festival to go to Camp Quality of Michigan as a way of remembering John and to continue to help those suffering from cancer, especially children. Camp Quality is a year-round support system for children with cancer and their families that includes, among other things, a free week of summer camp on Walloon Lake at Camp Daggett.

Camp quality is a nonprofit organization that is totally dependent on the many generous donations of time and money that largely come from all the neighboring communities in northern Michigan.

Clinton impeachment trial is good fodder for a musical

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

The Trial of the Century?

I read somewhere that Judge Rehnquist was a devotee of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, and after attending the musical, Trial by Jury, he decided to have four gold stripes sewn on the sleeves of his plain black robe.

His action must have had not only an artistic impact, but also strong significance for those of us watching the trial. One can't help but let one's mind take a short flight of fancy and ask the whimsical question, what would a great composer like Andrew Lloyd Webber be inspired to do, or maybe what he WILL do, with a script for a musical farce called, naturally, Trial of the President?

Picture the bizarre possibilities such a musical would have! Some people might even say it rightly follows in the renowned footsteps of Les Miserables.

Let us begin with the opening scene. Curtain going up. We hear a soft duet, "Dreams," sung by the two leads, Clinton, tenor, and Monica, alto. Suddenly soprano Hillary appears wearing a large hat and sounding like a Valkyrie in Wagner's opera. Lights dim and we hear a chorus of Managers repeatedly drone, fortissimo, "Impeach! Impeach!" while Judge Rehnquist pounds the gavel to the beat of the "Anvil Chorus." (This Manager's scene will be repeated intermittently throughout all three acts). Before the curtain falls on the first act we hear Monica's solo rendition, "Starr-dust," sung over the telephone to Linda Tripp.

In the second act, Representative Henry Hyde, bass, sings a touching duet with Senator Barr, "My Youthful Indiscretion," accompanied by a soft-shoe tap dance. Occasionally you will see and hear Larry King, (who we all know has been married five times), seated at his desk wearing his trademark suspenders and crooning "Family Values" with former prosecutors. Sometime during the play, Webber may introduce Socks and borrow the tune, "Memory" from "Cats." The defense attorneys will break in with a lively melody, "Listen to the PUBLIC, Listen to the POLLS!"

The third act opens with Hillary Clinton rendering a simple little ditty entitled "See No Evil, Hear No Evil, Speak No Evil," followed by White House attorney Charles Ruff giving his final rousing, memorable speech with the full orchestra in crescendo, "I Say Let Him Finish, Let Him Finish Out His Term."

Off-stage we hear a baritone, "For God's Sake, Get It Over With!" The managers sing "Impeach! Impeach!" and a team of Democratic Senators join in the chorus, "The Public! The Polls!" The final scene of the third act shows Hillary, Bill and Buddy leaving for Camp David together. She sings softly to him, "My Unimpeachable You!" Bill takes her in his arms and the curtain falls.

Composer Andrew Lloyd Webber ought to be able to dash this musical off without too much difficulty since he already has a solid outline here of the script as I've envisioned it.

Don't raze down the Wharfside building

Editor:

I am trying to think of a tactful way to remark about the "idea" I read about in your paper to raze the Wharfside building. In my judgment it is such a terrible idea that I am amazed anyone could give it serious consideration. Here are three viable businesses in a brick building that at least has some charm to it, one of which serves a whole community of boaters and the city would consider tearing it down for more view? Do we need another grassy hill on which children can roll? As I envision it, that would leave a sort of half-mushroom band shell sticking up somewhere in the middle of all this grass. I hope the rest of us have a vote in what happens to the city. Perhaps it's that sunlight deprivation syndrome that has hit and brains and thinking will return to normal in the spring. Laurie Lounsbury made some very good points in her editorial, as did Mr. Nowka, and I hope the city can wake up and pay attention before they make an irreversible mistake, one that will not benefit anyone — except of course the demolition crew.

Big Band was a bright spot in a gray winter

Dear Editor:

It is mid-February and that time of year when those of us who stay in northern Michigan all winter tend to become a bit restless, show ourselves to be just a tad cranky, and begin to exhibit all kinds of symptoms of that dreaded disease, Cabin Fever. The snow is gray, the sky is gray, and the lake is gray. All in all, it is a time when we cry out for some type of relief.

Sunday afternoon, the Up North Big Band gave those of us in attendance at the First Congregational Church a wonderful respite from the "winter blahs."

Although their terrific concert did include "Don't Get Around Much Any More" and "Stormy Weather," it also contained "Orange Colored Sky," "I'm Beginning to See the Light," and "April in Paris," leaving us to think that, after such a wonderful afternoon of superb music, spring might indeed be on its way!

For those of you who have not yet heard this sensational group and their "Big Band" sound, you are missing one of the best musical treats in our area. My husband, who was reluctant to drag himself out on a winter's afternoon, admitted to me afterward that they are the best group he has heard up north since we moved here 32 years ago! He has a large collection of Big Band music, and we were both hugely impressed with these talented musicians.

We want to thank the Big Band musicians for the wonderful entertainment of a winter's afternoon. We could imagine ourselves transported out of Charlevoix and to the Aragon Ballroom. And thanks, too, to their wonderful vocalist, Denise Olmsted, who has a beautiful voice and demonstrated a splendid delivery of such old favorites as "Somebody Loves Me" and "Call Me Irresponsible," among others. She was simply terrific!

So... thanks for brightening up a winter's day and thanks to the First Congregational Church for arranging for this series of "Sundays at Four" concerts. If you missed the Up North Big Band this time, watch for their next concert! You will love it!

Kids need sleep, so start school later in the morning

Dear Editor:

My name is Alex Kur and I am in sixth grade. I am very concerned about the school starting time. School starts at 7:50 a.m. I think school should start at around 8:50 a.m. I have sleep experts to back me up. They also say school should start later in the morning. Here is why; in a teenage body your hormone that makes you tired is called Melitonin. It kicks in at around 11:00 p.m., so when you wake up you feel rotten. Studies have shown that kids who have to wake up early in the morning do poorly in their early classes. Most of the kids I have talked to say they would rather have school start around 9:00 a.m.

Experts also say that the average kid should get 12 hours of sleep. With the middle school schedule, kids go to bed around 9 p.m. and wake up around 6:30 a.m. That's only nine and one-half hours of sleep. That's just not healthy. Let's forget about what experts say, what about the parents! They say it would make more sense to have one trip for the bus to make instead of two. I agree.

For those of you new to the community or if you don't have kids, our schools start an hour apart so buses have to make two trips. I want to make another point — if our parents work nine to five and we get out at 2:30 p.m., we are home alone for two and one-half hours. Lots of people don't like that. There is one more thing that bothers me. When we get home we have to do homework, eat dinner, study for upcoming tests, and read for 30 minutes, then we have to go to bed without spending more than half an hour with our family. The reason for all these problems is simple; we have to wake up at 6:30 in the morning!

So, in conclusion, I think it would be healthiest and most practical to change the time school starts. Please, Mr. Sturock take this into consideration.

Respectfully yours,
Alex Kur

Soccer belongs in the middle school program

Dear Editor:

I'm writing this letter to the 4-H Soccer Board and the Charlevoix School Board. I am a sixth grader and I'm wondering why 4-H soccer stops at sixth grade? The only soccer we can play now is travel soccer that is played on Sunday afternoons. Many kids cannot join because of church responsibilities.

How do people who enjoy soccer convince the Soccer Board and the Charlevoix School Board that there should be a middle school team? I wonld think that Mr. Block (the high school soccer coach) would want us to play as much as possible before we get into high school. Soccer is a relatively inexpensive sport compared to football and skiing.

Thank you for listening to the concerns of a sixth grader.

Sincerely,
Andrew Tillotson

Animals shouldn't be killed indiscreetly

Dear Editor:

Do we have to kill so many animals indiscreetly? Animals are part of the wondrous diversity of our ecosystem. If animals such as bears and wolves are eliminated from our community, then animals like deer get overpopulated. While this has led to a lot of happy, well-fed hunters, it has also encouraged killing of other species as well.

My brother shoots squirrels, rabbits, birds and raccoons, but does not eat them. This is cruel and senseless. I would prefer it if animals could live with us and not fear getting killed. I enjoy seeing deer and turkeys walking around in the daytime, and at night, the tiny silhouettes of rabbits hopping around.

An example we might follow are the Indians, who only killed animals to survive. It's up to people to help native animals survive in our world, so that we do not endanger the diversity of animals in our ecosystem.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Gabrielle Dhaseleer

Cigarette butts shouldn't be carelessly discarded

Dear Editor:

I suggest strongly that you read this note carefully. First, I think too many kids and grown-ups are being careless about where they are throwing their cigarette butts. They are throwing them either out the car window or on the ground. The cigarette butts take at least three to five years to disintegrate. The smoke is polluting the air we breathe. I hope other people look into what I have to say. I also think this matters to people who smoke, too, because they need to know what they are doing. Thank you for your cooperation.

Thank you,
Katie Wyskochil

Charlevoix needs a new middle school

Dear Editor:

I think Charlevoix needs a new middle school because the school is 72 years old. When it rains, some of the ceilings leak. Also, you have to walk through a gym class to get to other rooms. The band room is under the gym, so you can hear kids playing basketball. That's very annoying. The rooms either have no carpet, or old carpet that's taped to the floor.

The middle school also needs an auditorium for meetings, plays, dances, and band concerts.

I definitely think we need a new school.

Respectfully yours,
Michelle Fritsch

Middle school is not handicapped accessible

Dear Editor;

We need a new middle school in Charlevoix. It is not handicapped accessible or up to the technology code. Many repairs need to be done, like fixing the messed-up heaters.

Right now we have two kids on crutches. It is too hard for them to get up and down the many stairs. Also, many classrooms do not have enough outlets for the computers. Another problem is that too many classrooms have plaster cracks. The halls have dips in the middle of them. I wish that our school could move to the high school, then build a new high school. So what I'm saying is, we really need a new middle school.

Sincerely,
Anne Strawbridge

Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John Powers

Kathleen Campbell and John Powers were married in an afternoon ceremony at St. Mary's Church on Sept. 12, 1998.

The bride is the daughter of Gabe and Karen Campbell of Charlevoix. The groom is the son of Patricia Powers of Lansing and the late Laurence Powers.

Wild flowers decorated the altar and white bows marked the pews, with 250 guests in attendance.

Father Tom Neis and Father Frank Partridge performed the double ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white crepe sheath gown with a flared mermaid skirt. The top was accented with cropped, re-embroidered lace and elbow-length sleeves. The V-back was outlined with a knee-length chiffon scarf. She carried a large bouquet of wildflowers. Her veil was made by Vicki Beary, friend of the bride.

Musicians and vocalists at the ceremony were Sheri Timsak, cousin of the bride, and Antony Coggins, cousin of the groom.

Readers were Lynne Coggins, cousin of the groom, Becky Moore, sister of the groom and Gina Powers, niece of the groom.

Maid of honor was Jamie Capaldi and bridesmaid was Mindy Joy. They wore grape, crepe, satin-backed gowns. The scooped neckline featured a band of satin and the little cuff sleeves were also banded with the satin side of the crepe. The dresses fell into an elegant princess A-line panel skirt. The back was finished with a large, U-shaped cut-out that was trimmed with the satin side of the crepe and featured a criss cross satin band. They carried bouquets of wildflowers similar to the bride's.

Best man was Matthew Hovey, and groomsman was Joe Powers, brother of the groom. The usher was Gabe Powers, nephew of the groom.

A reception was hosted by the wedding couple and the bride's parents at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Charlevoix. The rehearsal dinner was hosted the evening before the wedding at the Argonne Supper Club by the mother of the groom.

The newlyweds took a Caribbean cruise in November for their wedding trip.

They are making their home in Pulaski, Wis., where the bride teaches kindergarten at ABVM Catholic School. The groom teaches religion at Notre Dame Academy in Green Bay, Wis.

Fund started in honor of late catholic priest

In his lifetime, the Rev. William McKeon made his mark in many ways. A kind and generous man, Father Bill served in the Navy, attended law school, became a Catholic priest, worked with volunteers in the poor regions of Mexico, administered to migrant workers throughout Michigan, and eventually became the beloved pastor at St. Joseph and St. John parishes near East Jordan.

Of all his accomplishments though, he is best known for his dedication to helping those suffering from alcoholism and other addictions. And it is this special compassion that will be memorialized through a new fund at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

The Father Bill McKeon Memorial Fund, established shortly after Father McKeon's death last month, will help support substance abuse prevention and treatment projects in the area. Begun with donations from some of the families whose lives he touched, the McKeon Fund already has more than $13,000 — and it grows daily as more people learn of the tribute.

"Father Bill was an extraordinary man whose spiritual work cut across all faiths," said Bob Tambellini, director of the foundation. "His understanding of addiction made his pastoral care especially effective — and it's clear he helped many, many people in our area. This fund is such a good way to honor his memory. I think he would be happy."

The memorial fund for Father McKeon will be a permanent endowment, and only the earned income it generates will be used to support substance abuse programs and projects. Tambellini said that permanence lends even more poignancy to the tribute. "In this way, Father Bill's legacy will continue helping generations to come."

For more information, call the community foundation at 536-2440, or write P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

OF BLESSINGS

By Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

ARE ANY OF GOD'S CHILDREN HANDICAPPED?

At a meeting of the Charlevoix County Ministerial Association recently there was a video presentation about the ministry of LOVE, Inc. (which stands for "Love In the Name of Christ"). The essence of the video was how churches in an area can be more effective in ministering to the poor and needy by networking together and working in teams of volunteers. But it's not the theme of the video that I want to share with you, but rather a touching story about how a person that we would consider totally handicapped still could serve God meaningfully.

A "cut" in the video showed a quadriplegic man, totally paralyzed from the neck down, using a computer by voice commands to maintain a database of information for the ministry of LOVE, Inc., in his city. In the database the man kept pertinent information about volunteer workers who could be called upon to assist the needy in various capacities. That database was a vital part of the success of the ministry. When a person or family in need was made known, the man could go into the database and find the name or names of the people who could immediately respond, whether the need was for housing, food, clothing, child care or whatever. His work is indispensable to the effective and timely ministry and support to those in need.

We would have the natural inclination to look at a totally paralyzed man, who even has to have others feed him, and say that there is nothing he could do to serve God and have a "productive" life. In spite of his limitations (?) he is playing a vital role for God in bringing timely ministry to the needy in his area. The man is, in many ways, physically handicapped. But he is certainly not ministry-handicapped!

How about you? Are there physical limitations due to paralysis, sickness or disease, or age and infirmity that have prompted you to feel that you have no way to serve God and His people? I believe the man in the video demonstrates that God has no handicapped children. Those who are open to His leading, and the enabling of His Holy Spirit, can be used in some way. And even though it may seem to you to be such a small way that it is insignificant, it really is not.

Perhaps you are a person in good physical health who has believed that there is no way for you to serve God and His people because you don't possess the talents to speak like a Billy Graham or sing like a Bill Gaither. If this is the case you are only handicapped by your erroneous thinking.

Consider again these words of scripture; "The eye cannot say to the hand, 'I don't need you!' And the head cannot say to the feet 'I don't need you!' On the contrary, these parts of the body that seem to be weaker are indispensable, and the parts that we think are less honorable we treat with special honor. And the parts that are unpresentable are treated with special modesty, while our presentable parts need no special treatment. But God has combined the members of the body and has given greater honor to the parts that lacked it, so that there should be no division in the body, but that its parts should have equal concern for each other." 1 Corinthians 12:21-25.

"In 10 minutes, something can change in your life."

By Jamie MacMillan

Cutting the budget

As students pour over their class projects, a voice booms out, warning them of life's nasty curve balls.

"Don't forget, in 10 minutes something can change your life."

The reminder comes from Kristy Swanson, a second-year vocational education teacher at Charlevoix High School, whose class of freshmen are halfway through their year-long class in Business Applied Technology (BAT).

The BAT classes are a required course at the high school for graduation, and usually students enroll in the course during their freshmen year. The classes are reality-based and, as vocational education teacher Jill Erskine said, the number one goal is to teach students "responsibility for their personal business affairs."

Erskine, along with former voc-ed teacher Suzanne Klinger, created the school's BAT curriculum five years ago. The class teaches basic home business skills, such as how to balance a checkbook, but also extends itself beyond the basic to include resume writing and job interviewing skills. The next project, for example, will have students doing their own taxes.

The class is currently involved with a project requiring students to produce a family budget. Students were randomly assigned careers from veterinarian to musician to big business CEO. They were given salaries comparable to their given professions and had to budget accordingly for a family of four.

It sounds simple, but it wasn't. For example, when determining a grocery budget, students couldn't just figure in a dollar amount. Instead they had to research food prices and itemize their grocery budget. They had to do the same thing for automobile and clothing purchases.

"I kind of liked the extra work involved," student Nate Holmes said. "I liked being able to pick my own car."

Of course, life is not just smooth sailing and any family's budget can be busted by unforeseen events. Such was the case for the students' mock budgets. Just as it appeared that students were getting the hang of budgeting for a family, they were hit with a new, unexpected financial burden.

Picking their situation out of hat, some students were unlucky and lost their jobs, hit with a big tax bill or had to pay for a traffic fine. Others received more fortuitous outcomes such as bonus pay, but had to deal with spring vacation costs.

"We just want to give them a concept of what life can cost," Swanson explained, as students hurried to adjust their budgets based on their new situations.

It was interesting to watch students adjust to life's randomness. In order to pay for an unexpected traffic accident or medical bill, many had to make hard choices, from reducing food and clothing budgets, limiting entertainment expenses and, in some cases, opting for a less expensive automobile.

"This has been eye-opening, to see how much you have to pay for cars, food and homes," student Keith Daly said. "A lot of it surprised me."

While the BAT class that freshmen take is a required course, the curriculum does go on in elective courses in the form of advanced accounting and business management classes. Erskine pointed out that they tried to get a legal course off the ground, but not enough students enrolled in the course to keep it alive.

Despite that setback, Erskine is enthusiastic about her class and the type of non-traditional academics they're teaching.

"What we are doing in here is important out there in the real world," she said. "There is relevance to what is going on in these rooms."

Group wants to manage deer herd for better hunting quality

Most of the Northern Lower Peninsula suffers from the same problem as other states with high populations of whitetail deer. Most hunters and nature watchers want to manage for deer numbers rather than health and quality. The harvest result usually shows an overwhelming harvest of 1-1/2 year-old-bucks. For the most part, Michigan has a severely unbalanced buck-to-doe ratio, with very few mature bucks and large numbers of does. We should realize that our deer herd is not reaching its genetic potential. The statement "if it is brown, it's down" is outdated. People need to start managing our deer herd for a quality renewable resources. If our generation wants to hunt quality bucks on a consistent basis, some form of selective harvest is needed.

Most hunters would be much more proud to hang a mature buck on the wall than a spike. If they need meat, the best thing to do for the deer herd is to take some of the over abundant does that are competing with other deer for food and habitat. It is becoming very popular to travel large distances and spend thousands of dollars to hunt for quality whitetails, when the genes for trophies exist in northern Michigan. One example of a high quality deer would be the Mitch Rompola world record buck. The only reason for the lack of mature deer in our area is the harvest of young bucks before they can reach their full potential.

Interest in Quality Deer Management (QDM) is increasing in the northwest counties of Michigan to properly manage for a quality, whitetail deer herd. A quality management branch is in the process of being formed. The nonprofit organization would help deliver information to landowners on deer management, harvest techniques, biology and other important topics to encourage the proper harvest of whitetail deer. Quality Deer Management is a practice that unites landowners, hunters, and biologists in a common goal of producing biologically and socially balanced deer herds within existing environmental, social and legal constraints. This concept was brought to the southeast in the late 1970s and has since been employed successfully on millions of acres of private and public lands across the whitetail's range. QDM typically involves restricting the harvest of young bucks, increasing harvest of antlerless deer (where needed), improving deer herd nutrition, maintaining accurate records and enhancing hunters' experiences.

The QDM believes that education of the hunting and non-hunting public is the key to success. If interested in helping or joining a new branch of (QDM) please call: Antrim Conservation District, 106 Depot St., Bellaire, MI. 49615. (616) 533-8363; or QDMA — Dave Parsons, Charlevoix, 547-2038.

Rayders back on top with win over league rival Boyne City

Matt Dennis led five Rayders in double figures with 19 points as Charlevoix outlasted Boyne City, 85-74, in a Lake Michigan Conference basketball contest last Friday.

It was the Rayders first game since being upended last week by Traverse City-St. Francis and coach Keith Haske said it was obviously good to get back on the winning track.

"It was absolutely nice to see us play with more spunk and more passion," he said. "In that last half we played like the team of old, and it should springboard us into this week."

To earn the win, the Rayders overcame both a poor shooting performance and an over reliance on the three-point shot in the first half.

The Ramblers played a zone defense and in the first half Charlevoix tried, with little success, to shoot over it. The Rayders shot 3-for-12 from beyond the arc and missed all five trey attempts in the second quarter.

Boyne's Jeremy Grice poured in 15 first half points as the Ramblers were able to head into the intermission tied with the Rayders, 34-34.

The story changed in the third quarter. The Rayders became more patient, worked the ball inside and attacked the goal rather than shoot at it from 20 feet away.

Dennis scored eight points in a 24-11 third quarter advantage, giving the Rayders all the breathing room they would need going into the final frame. Matt McClellan added six points in the quarter and Justin Thorp scored five.

The final quarter was a free throw contest, with Boyne swishing 20 freebies and the Rayders canning 13, but, overall, Boyne could only trim two points off the Rayders' 13-point lead entering the quarter.

For the game, McClellan scored 17, Sean Stockman added 14, Tom Cunningham, 13, and Thorp, 11. Dennis and Thorp grabbed eight and six rebounds respectively and Cunningham and Jim Kanine each dished out four assists.

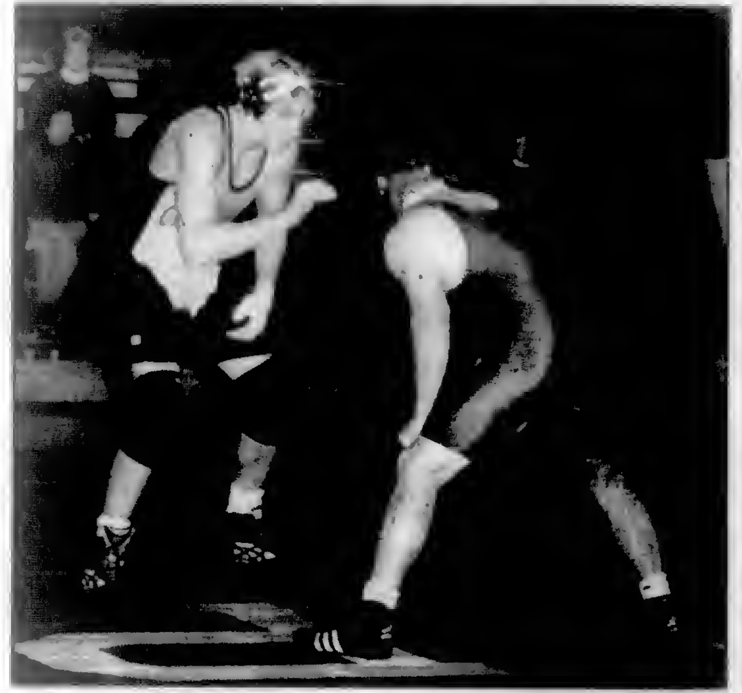
In the undercards, the JV Rayders fell, 74-58, despite getting 16 points from Jeremiah Teuscher and 11 from Doug Reick.

In the freshmen contest, Jim Shepherd wowed the crowd with nine triples and 29 points to lead the Rayders to a 78-68 victory.

The conference title was likely decided Tuesday night, when league co-leaders Elk Rapids and Charlevoix locked horns. Both teams entered the game with 7-1 league records. Game results were unavailable at press time.

The Rayders end the week at home against Kalkaska Friday, Feb. 19.

Grapplers finish regular season, now look to post season play



Above: James Pop and his opponent dance around the floor before engaging each other in a wrestling match last Saturday in Petoskey.

Jerry Zeitler of Charlevoix locks horns with his foe.

The Charlevoix wrestlers concluded their regular season last week with a series of meets.

In action last week, the wrestlers lost to Cheboygan, 51-23, and to St. Ignace, 42-24. Against Cheboygan, Josh Chamberlain, 112 pounds, Ryan Novotny, 125, and James Pop, 171, all earned wins by pinning their opponents. Jerry Zeitler also won his match with a 19-5 decision.

Against St. Ignace, Zeitler won a match and the Rayders also earned wins via three forfeits.

The club dropped its final home match of the season, 64-33, to Gaylord. Chamberlain, Zeitler and Pop each won matches for Charlevoix. Pop and Zeitler both pinned their foes in the second round while Chamberlain won a 9-4 decision. The team also earned two forfeit wins.

The team's regular season slate finished on Saturday with a team dual invitational in Petoskey. The Rayders came out a little worse for wear, falling in dual meets to Kalkaska, Petoskey JV, Mancelona and Maple City-Glen Lake.

The highlight of the day was a gold medal earned by Rayder Chris Loper in the 215-pound division. Loper went 4-0 on the day earning wins via a pin, forfeit and two decisions.

The team now eyes the postseason which begins Wednesday, Feb. 17 with the team district competition in Onaway. Charlevoix is matched with Onaway, Rogers City and St. Ignace with the top team advancing into regional play.

The Rayders will also compete in the individual district competition Saturday, Feb. 20 in Hart. The top four wrestlers in each division advance into the regional round.

Volleyball team drops game to Boyne City

The Charlevoix volleyball team saw its record fall to 6-13-5 with a 15-3, 15-12 loss to county rival Boyne City.

Ann Spang, Kristy Shindorf and Megan Vogel were the team's top offensive players while Taya Drost and Spang sparked the defense. Mandy Webb was the club's top setter and, along with Christine Sweeney, the team's top server.

The loss dropped the club's league record to 2-5.

The junior varsity team also lost to Boyne City despite some good offensive play from Michelle Martin, Lisa Miller and Kelly Reid. Martin, Miller and Molly Arnold keyed the defense. Kathryn Ricks and Amber Parsons led the team in serving.

The freshmen team played in Sutton's Bay on the same day, but suffered the same fate, dropping the match, 0-15, 3-15, 6-15.

Krista Lisk and Jennifer Rowe were the top servers. Krista and Katie Swenor paced the offense while Michelle Yalde and Elissa Wood led the defense.

The teams return to action with a home match against Kalkaska at 6 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 18.

Three skiers advance to state championships

By Laurie Lounsbury

Watching the high school regional ski meet at Nub's Nob last Thursday was like watching the Wide World of Sports video clip that shows "The agony of defeat" over and over again in instant replay.

One skier after another fell in the challenging slalom and Giant Slalom courses, made more difficult by wet, icy conditions.

Todd Freidinger

For Charlevoix, it probably cost the boys' team a trip to the state finals.

Roscoe Serrels, who was expected to put in a top-10 performance on the boys' slalom course, fell early in his first run, blew out of his skis and did not finish.

The girls also had their share of troubles. Tiffany Fisher, top seed on the girls' team, fell twice in her first slalom run, but was able to hike back to the gates she missed, finishing 48th in a field of 70 skiers. Kirsten Brendtro also fell on her first slalom run and did not finish.

The falls put the boys' team 21 points away from a third place finish, which would have earned them a berth in the state finals. They finished in sixth place in the 14-team field.

The girls' team finished sixth, 61 points away from third place.

The top three teams in the regionals advance to the state finals in Marquette on Feb. 22.

The Charlevoix teams did qualify three individual skiers with top 10 finishes for the state finals; Todd Freidinger, sixth in slalom, Tiffany Fisher, third in GS, and Lexi Wilson, 10th in slalom, will advance to the state meet.

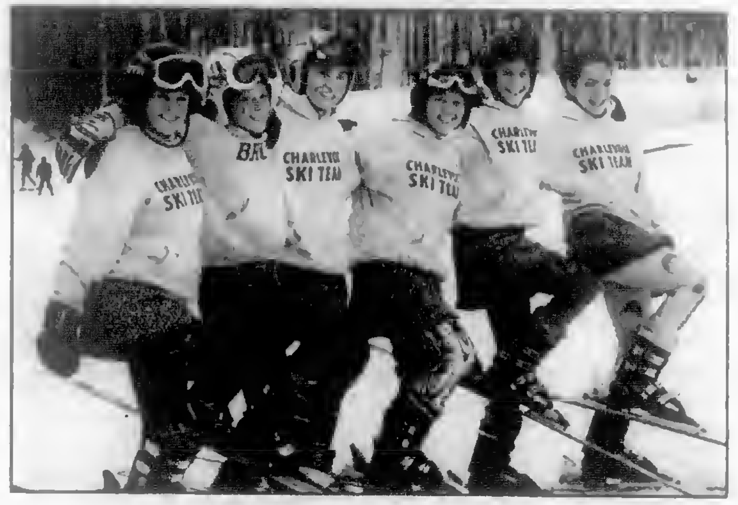
The Petoskey girls and the Harbor Springs boys took the first place honors, with the Petoskey boys and the Harbor Springs girls taking second place as teams. Iron Mountain's teams took third place.

Other results for Charlevoix were: Todd Freidinger, 34th GS; Steve Pirie, 16th GS, 18th, slalom; Roscoe Serrels, 16th GS (tied with Pirie); Shaun MacMillan, 33rd slalom, 43rd GS; Joel Trubilowicz, 38th slalom, 49th GS; and Kyle Louiselle, 41st slalom, 38th GS.

For the girls, it was: Lexi Wilson, 24th GS; Kelly Kusina, 18th GS, 24th slalom; Marie Serrels, 27th slalom, 44th GS; Alisha Johnson, 40th slalom, 59th GS; and Kirsten Brendtro, 61st GS.

Lexi Wilson

Tiffany Fisher



Trendsetters

Right: They may have finished sixth at the regional meet, but the Charlevoix girls' ski team outscored everyone as trendsetters in ski apparel with their fleece-lined, leopard print ski skirts. Girls on the Harbor Springs and Boyne City teams were overheard making envious remarks about the Charlevoix ski-irts, made by the team members. The girls are (from left) Marie Serrels, Lexi Wilson, Tiffany Fisher, Kelly Kusina, Kirsten Brendtro and Alisha Johnson.

Health agency receives grants for abstinence promotion

Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency has been awarded a $125,000 grant for an abstinence promotion and education program for middle school students and their families in five northern Michigan communities. The program will be launched in Alanson, Charlevoix, Glen Lake, Mancelona, and a to-be-determined community in Benzie County. It is a multi-strategy approach consisting of after-school activities, skill-based education for middle school students, education and support for parents, and consistent abstinence messages within the community.

"Instead of a broad-brush program, our approach is to imbue five target communities with consistent messages, recruiting all members of the community to support the campaign," said Jane Sundmacher, Community Health Planner of the health agency. The general approach will be customized in each participating community.

The work plan was designed earlier this year by the Abstinence Partnership of Northwest Michigan, a broad-based coalition with representatives from the health department, schools, human service agencies, and parents, as well as both pro-choice and pro-life organizations.

For more information, or for a copy of Michigan Abstinence Partnership's Promoting Healthy Behaviors for Michigan's Children: An Action Primer for Families, Schools, and Communities, call Jane Sundmacher at 547-7649.

FIRE DEPT.

Top firefighters honored at annual dinner

At the City of Charlevoix Fire Department annual dinner, two members of the department were honored for their outstanding dedication to duty.

Above: Bill Brodin was chosen as EMT of the Year for his professionalism and time devoted to the ambulance service while attending college and working full time.

Why do teens need abstinence training?

Why Do We Need The Abstinence Partnership?

- By the age of 15, at least 25 percent of all young people are engaging in risky behaviors, such as sexual activity and use of alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs. Youth in northern Michigan experience the same rates of risky behaviors as students elsewhere in the State and the U.S.
- Nationally, over one million teenagers become pregnant each year.
- In the United States, the cost of raising a child from birth to age 17 is on average $127,290. Most children having children cannot care for and support a child.
- In outstate Michigan, 35.4 percent of those students who were sexually active used alcohol or drugs during or before their last sexual intercourse.
- Nearly 30 percent of Michigan teens will have their first sexual experience by the time they reach 15.
- HIV infection is climbing among Michigan teens and adolescents.
- Young people aged 10 to 19 have a higher rate of sexually transmitted infections, such as chlamydia and gonorrhea, than any other group. Consequences can include permanent damage to reproductive organs, such as sterility and cancer.

Basketball, skating and suffragettes topped news in 1919

NEED LESSON IN DECENCY

C.H.S. BASKETBALL TEAM WIN UNDER DIFFICULTIES

Clean Sportsmanship Greatly Lacking in Conduct of Opposing Team — Score 16-12

Last Friday night at Harbor Springs, our high school basketball team showed the Harbor Springs team the advantages of clean playing. The score was 16-12 on the score board at the last. If played under basketball rules, the score would have been much larger. No description of the game, as basketball, can be given, because our attempts at fast, clean, playing were smothered in the fouls committed by the opponents. Enough to say that we won.

Feb. 28, they play a return game here. The test of sportsmanship will be applied to us here, even as it was to the team at Harbor Springs. So let us not be influenced by other school's lack of it, but remember that the courtesy extended to the visiting team should be even more marked than that to our own.

Our team is primarily a team of gentlemen, than which there can be no greater compliment. The fact that they are, and that they did not lose their heads last Friday under the trying conditions present, namely, the inexperience of the referee, and the football tactics of the other team, was the direct cause of our winning the game. Had we resorted to the same methods, the outcome might have been different.

There will be a preliminary between two girls teams starting at 7:15.

This week we play Central Lake here. Please come. We must meet the expenses of our trips, and we must have your support in the bleachers.

WONDERFUL SKATING ON PINE LAKE

City to Install Lights for Enjoyment of All

Ald. Grover Geneit of the First ward made a hit with a lot of people of Charlevoix, especially among the younger class, Monday night when he presented a motion at council meeting to place three lights on the ice on Pine Lake, north of the old railroad dock, near the Pere Marquette depot.

The object of the motion was to safeguard against any possibility of danger which might be encountered from rough shore ice or after leaving the depot.

Hundreds of people, both old and young, are now enjoying the best skating in years, and with the installation of lights the sport can be enjoyed during the evening as well as during the day time. The lights are now being installed and will be in use by Wednesday night.

ONLY THIRTY WOMEN HAVE REGISTERED

Must Do So if Right of Suffrage is Exercised

Records at the office of the City Clerk show that up to date less than thirty Charlevoix Women have registered for voting in the spring election and primaries, as is required under the provisions in the statutes, giving women in Michigan the right to the ballot.

The law which allowed women of Michigan the right to vote became effective on January 1, and it is necessary for every woman who wants to cast a ballot in the regular spring primary and election this year to be registered with the city clerk before election time.

The registration book in the office of the city clerk is open and ready to record the names of women at any time. Much interest is centered about the registration booth to determine just how much use the women of Charlevoix county are going to make of their newly made right to cast a ballot and until the books are closed it will be impossible to ascertain how crowded the polls will be at the spring election with women voters.

Riding a toboggan straight down the south hill and through town on Bridge Street must have been quite a thrill in the 1920s. According to our sources, city workers hosed down the street so it would freeze into an icy run for the sledders. (Photo courtesy of the Charlevoix Historical Society)

Little Traverse Conservancy offers afternoon of winter activities

On Saturday, Feb. 20 Little Traverse Conservancy is hosting a special event at the Round Lake Nature Preserve. The Young Naturalists' Club Winter Adventure Program will kick off at 1 p.m. and continue until 4 p.m. This day is designed to encourage winter activities in combination with a natural history theme and is offered free of charge.

Throughout the afternoon, participants will have the opportunity to enjoy a snowshoe hike led by conservancy naturalists. Thanks to grants from both the Charlevoix and Petoskey-Harbor Springs community foundations, the conservancy is able to provide snowshoes free of charge for children and their parents. In addition to this trek on the trails, there will be an ice fishing demonstration on the lake by a staff member of the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

Inside the conservancy building, the group will feature Simon Otto, an Ottawa and Ojibway Elder who entertains and teaches through storytelling. Many of his stories focus on animals and provide an insight into the life and culture of northern Michigan's Native Americans. Activities and crafts will also be available indoors.

This program will be open to the public as well as any members of the conservancy's Young Naturalists' Club who wish to join them for some fun in the snow. The conservancy's Young Naturalists' Club is intended for children from ages 5 to 12 and currently has more than 120 members.

Round Lake Nature Preserve is located on the corner of M-119 and Powell Road between Petoskey and Harbor Springs. Reservations are required so please contact the conservancy office at 347-0991 or e-mail at ynclub@nature.org.

Another lawsuit filed over Venetian fireworks explosion

By Laurie Lounsbury

Another lawsuit has been filed by a person who was injured at the Venetian fireworks explosion that occurred July 26, 1997.

While it is the seventh suit to be filed, it is the first lawsuit to name the Beaver Island Boat Company as a defendant.

Shannon Marie Wilson of Lake Orion filed the suit Tuesday, Feb. 16 in Charlevoix's 33rd Circuit Court. On the evening of the fireworks explosion, Wilson, then 17, was treated and released at Charlevoix Area Hospital for lacerations.

Wilson's lawsuit is similar to other suits in that it names the City of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, the fireworks operator and fireworks manufacturers as defendants, among others.

But Wilson's attorney, Charles Glass of Harbor Springs, goes one step further and names the Beaver Island Boat Company and its president, Lynn DeGrow as being negligent on the night of the tragic explosion. Wilson's lawsuit alleges that DeGrow displayed negligence for "refusing to move its boat back from the area from which the fireworks were to be launched, even though requested to do so by (fireworks operator) Richard Davis."

The lawsuit alleges that the Beaver Islander, which was moored in its usual spot near the foot of Bridge Park, was responsible for causing shrapnel to ricochet off the boat and back into the crowds, where shrapnel killed one Charlevoix man and injured 15 others.

The Beaver Islander was definitely hit by flying shrapnel. The boat's steel frame was dented and twisted in areas where pieces of flying debris struck it.

The lawsuit alleges that DeGrow and the boat company were negligent because "The defendants knew, or should have known that, in the event of an uncontrolled detonation, it would cause shrapnel to ricochet into the spectators observing the fireworks.

Leaving the ferry boat in its place at the dock "caused the concussive effect of the explosion to be increased and directed back toward the spectators," the suit continued.

Wilson is seeking unspecified damages in excess of $25,000 for receiving a laceration to the left side of her body as a result of the explosion. She endured medical expenses, pain and suffering, mental anguish and permanent and severe impairment of bodily functions, her lawsuit claims.

While the legal process is moving along slowly, it is moving along. Plaintiffs and defendants must exchange witness lists by March 29, the same date plaintiff's expert witness lists must be submitted. Defendants' expert witness lists must be submitted by April 26 and a list of potential trial exhibits must be exchanged between plaintiffs and defendants by July 12.

Insurance companies balk at covering Y2K damages

By Laurie Lounsbury

As the level of preparedness varies among people getting ready for the millennium computer bug, the level of response may also vary among insurance companies dealing with the aftermath.

Insurance companies uniformly agree that they will not provide coverage for problems directly related to year 2000 (Y2K) computer chip glitches. In other words, if YOUR computer crashes in YOUR business and causes problems with YOUR payroll, it's YOUR fault.

"The insurance companies are saying this is preventable and avoidable and they won't cover intentional losses," said Bruce Hubble, an insurance agent with Shanley-VanTreese Agency in Petoskey and Boyne City.

It is assumed by most everyone that some glitches are inevitable when computer clocks around the world reach midnight, Dec. 31, 1999. What's not known is the extent of potential damage that might occur.

And it's not known exactly to what degree — if any — insurance companies will provide coverage for losses related to the Y2K bug.

"This is a subject of huge de-

Coverage for Y2K problems is sketchy

bate," Hubble said. "Insurance companies are saying people have an obligation to take action to prevent problems."

According to Hubble, if the power goes out in your city because of a Y2K compliance problem and your pipes freeze as a result of the outage, then insurance companies won't pay for the damage.

The scenario is different at Farm Bureau Agency in Charlevoix. Dennis Kusina, an agent for Farm Bureau, said his company will pay claims for residential Y2K problems if the damage resulted from a situation beyond the homeowners' control.

"If someone drove into a power pole, knocked out the power in your neighborhood and your pipes froze because of it, we would cover the damages," Kusina said. "This is no different — if the city's power goes out, you're covered. We don't ask, was the power outage caused by Y2K?"

Kusina went on to say the exclusion of coverage applies to businesses and their computers.

"We aren't going to cover claims related to your business computers," Kusina said.

Hubble, on the other hand, said the insurance companies they represent won't cover any type of Y2K-connected losses.

"They're saying this is preventable," Hubble said. "So you should call your cities and see if their systems are Y2K compliant, then go buy a generator."

Hubble's agency is sending letters to businesses for whom they provide coverage, informing them of the situation. The letter states that "insurance companies are attaching exclusions to their policies to state their position that no coverage is included under their policies for claims relating to Y2K computer problems."

"I don't like the position we've been put in," Hubble said. "We don't write the policies, yet we're on the front line with our customers. If we get claims, we're turning them over to the insurance company to deny or evaluate."

While insurance companies gear up to reject claims, lawyers are preparing to fight the rejection of claims.

"Trial lawyers have been studying this situation for two or three years," Hubble said.

It stands to reason that lawyers would be one group prepared for the year 2000 problem. Law suits are inevitable if insurance companies won't pay claims and damages occuring as a result of year 2000 problems.

School district's architects may be replaced in future

If the Charlevoix school district ever begins building a new school, it could do so with a different set of architects than the ones currently employed by the district.

Since 1996, the district has been working with the Grand Rapids firm Beta Design, but recent events may have soured the parties' relationship.

At the request of the board of education, superintendent of schools John Sturock sent a letter to Beta Design telling the firm that the district will continue to use them through the bonding process for a new facility proposal. The letter also stated, however, that before any actual building begins the district reserves the right to hire another firm to guide the district.

At a recent school board meeting, board member Scott Boss called the move "prudent business."

"It's good for those people out there paying attention to know that we are not rubber stamping anything," Boss said.

In the two-plus years that Beta Design has worked for Charlevoix schools, the district has paid the firm $34,114.92 in fees and other payments for services ranging from blueprint design for possible building projects to infrastructure improvements at the schools' current buildings.

Money from the latter has been pulled from the district's capital fund balance, an account funded entirely by the voter approved, six-year one mill levy passed in June of 1997. That account is to fund improvement projects at the elementary and high schools such as roof repair, asbestos abatement and revamping of the heating systems.

At issue for the school board are additional costs thrown into some of those projects by Beta Design. While none of the additions were especially costly, it has raised the collective eyebrows of the schools' administration.

When new heating systems were installed at the high school last year, electrical wiring of the fan exhaust in the gymnasium was added to the project after work began.

Building supervisor Mike Pearsall noted that in the end Beta Design covered the roughly $1,400 expense on their own.

"As far as I'm concerned Beta has done a good job," Pearsall said. "The school has the right to (terminate) people if they're not happy. It's my understanding that this is just for their own protection."

The school district is also questioning the need for additional consultants for this summer's asbestos abatement and roof repair projects at the high school. The project is to be done in two stages this summer and in the summer of 2000. Early estimates have the complete project costing the school over $1 million.

Included among those costs is payment for a roof consultant at a cost of $500 per day.

"If you're a full service architectural firm, why do you need another consultant to give us more direction?" Sturock asked. "It may only cost a few thousand dollars, but we're trying to keep the cost of this project within the amount of money we have."

In an interview last week, Sturock was insistent that the board is not looking to fire Beta Design, only to put them on notice that the school district may "want to go back to the well."

"We need to let people know today, rather than nine months from now," he said. "If the board has concerns, it's only fair that we let them know in advance."

The board next meets at 5 p.m. Monday, March 8 in the high school study hall.

Chamber of Commerce will assist school board with community forum to determine future building needs

Charlevoix Public School Superintendent John Sturock announced last week that the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with the Charlevoix Board of Education, will host a community forum to seek public input regarding the school district's need for new facilities at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 9, in the study hall room at Charlevoix High School.

"There is no question that, as a district, we are facing some challenging questions regarding our facilities," Sturock said. "The overcrowding at the elementary school, an aging middle school and a high school that needs to be updated is creating a need to develop a facility management plan which will address our students' needs."

Charlevoix school officials hope that this community input session will encourage area residents, area businesses and parents to voice their suggestions and ideas regarding the district's facility needs.

Upon completion of the community-input session, the board of education plans to create an ad hoc Future Facilities Committee. It will be the committee's responsibility to bring a long-range facilities plan and recommendations for the district to the board of education.

The community input session will be facilitated by Thomas J. Kern of the National Cherry Festival and will follow a small group discussion format. All area residents, business owners and district parents are encouraged to attend.

For more information regarding the community input session, call John Sturock at the school office, 547-3200.

A few things to stick in your "That's Outrageous" file

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

If Mike Royko was alive today, he'd be hammering away on his keyboard with such outrage over a recent news development that the plastic keys on his keyboard would probably crack and split into tiny news-rage splinters.

The story that surely would have sent Royko into a hyperbole-hurling tirade was about an 81-year-old woman in Adrian, Mo., who was driving down the highway on her way to work. She was apparently a cheerful, lively lady who worked as a waitress at Dave's Wagon Wheel. Suddenly, she had a blowout, which sent her car into the ditch. She got out of the car, dazed and confused, and walked into the highway, where an oncoming truck hit and killed her.

It would surprise no one that a lawsuit has been filed over the accident.

But what is absolutely unbelievable and totally incomprehensible is that the party doing the suing is the trucking company's insurance agency.

Good grief, how low can insurance agents and lawyers go for a buck?

The trucker's insurance company is Great West Casualty Co., a unit of the Chicago-based Old Republic International Corp.

They are suing the dead woman's estate for $2,800 in damages that the five-foot-tall, 105-pound elderly woman supposedly incurred to the 18-wheeler when it squashed her like a bottle fly on the grill.

Next thing you know, Great West Casualty will be suing the Audubon Society because endangered species of birds fly into the grill of their big monster trucks and mess up the chrome finish.

I would like to know who, at Great West Casualty, made the brilliant decision to sue this dead woman's family? What makes him tick? Was he abandoned in the desert as a child and raised by snakes? Anyone who could proceed with this type of lawsuit needs to spend some serious time in a psychiatric ward, preferably at a state penitentiary.

It's criminal.

Speaking of the sublimely ridiculous, here's another item from the Wall Street Journal about Arizona State University's drama department.

"The feminists are offended by the selection of works from a sexist European canon that is approached traditionally." That quote is from Lin Wright, the chairwoman of the theater department at ASU, who wrote a letter to the drama professor, Jared Sakren, warning him in 1996 to shape up or ship out. Later that year, Sakren was fired for relying too heavily on the "sexist European canon." The sexist European canon in question was Shakespeare.

This guy got fired for using Shakespeare's works while teaching drama and acting.

"There is a tension between the use of a Euro-American canon of dramatic literature and production style vs. post-modern feminist/ethnic canons and production styles," wrote the politically over-correct Ms. Wright. That's a lot of drama-jargon gibberish to me, but apparently, it means Sakren used plays by Shakespeare, Congreve and Ibsen to teach students how to act.

Now check out the resume of this guy they fired: Sakren was the director of the Alabama Shakespeare Festival, trained movie actors Annette Bening, Kelly McGillis and Val Kilmer, among others, and taught at Yale and the Juilliard School of performing arts. He was wooed by Arizona State to "establish a nationally respected actor training program" at the university.

It might not become nationally respected, but it's going to be nationally renowned for its feminist political correctness.

While I'm not a fan of law suits, I don't blame this guy, Sakren, for suing Arizona State. What's really a hoot is the allegation in his lawsuit: he is charging racial discrimination.

His firing, he contends, resulted from his European descent and his use of works written by male European playwrights.

In other words, this guy is a white, male, Anglo-Saxon — a WASP — and he's suing for racial discrimination.

Gee, it seems like it was yesterday when those guys ruled the world.

So, if I get this straight, this white male is suing over discrimination, because he is white and male.

What happens if he wins his lawsuit?

Will all the white guys in America get to sue their bosses if they get fired? It's bad enough that they have all the good jobs in the first place. Now they'll all get to keep those jobs forever. All the CEOs will be afraid to fire them.

I hope Bill Gates doesn't get wind of this. He'll sue the United States for discrimination.

I can just hear Gates saying, "Hey, you're picking on me just because I'm an obscenely rich white guy! (Although I prefer to be called a Financially Comfortable-American, it's more politically correct). "There aren't very many of us multi-billionaires. We need our own support group. Nobody offers coping seminars for us. Where's the American Civil Liberties Union when WE have a problem!"

When that happens, I'm moving to Antarctica. I hear they don't have discrimination problems down there. It's so cold that sex is irrelevant and all the residents are black-and-white.

Removing Wharfside building is wrong

Laurie Lounsbury, Editor:

As a long-time summer resident of Charlevoix, I have been interested in the proposal that the city buy and tear down the Wharfside building to improve the view of Round Lake. I thoroughly agree with your recent editorial urging that such a move not be made without very careful consideration.

Views of lakes and lawns are pleasant indeed, and Charlevoix already has them in abundance. But if Charlevoix is to remain an interesting and attractive place, it needs more than that. It needs a thriving retail and commercial district.

It is clear to me that the city should do all it can to support and encourage business activity downtown and take care not to destroy any of it in the name of beautification. The loss of the Parkside building was regrettable; the city should not compound that error by destroying the Wharfside building and possibly its tenants.

I can envision a day in the future when the city will actually be subsidizing builders and retailers in an effort to attract them to Charlevoix, including some who wish to be close to Round Lake, in an effort to revivify a dying — and boring — downtown. that will happen when the city understands that beautiful views alone do not make a livable and attractive town.

Cancer survivor gives thanks to all who helped

Dear Editor:

To all the wonderful people of Charlevoix and beyond: Thank you and God bless you for all your love, prayers, cards, support, money, meals, smiles, hugs, etc. In July 1998, I discovered I had tonsil cancer. Now, after two months of radiation in Texas, I have no evidence of disease; with God's continued blessing, in two years it will be considered a cure. I am now focused on that thought. I could not have come this far without those terrific cards and prayers that kept on coming all through my dark days. I can't begin to tell you how much they meant to me. Because of you, I never gave up. And I hope to get my voice back so I can sing in our Church Choir once again. With our Lord's ever present love, I will! There are not enough words to express how thankful that I am to live here in Charlevoix. A very special thank you to the Rainbow Shoppe for their support. It's been a long rough journey, and Erin and I are glad to be home.

Sincerely,
Deb Buckner

Student behavior at games is perfectly appropriate

Editor:

I would like to comment from a parent's standpoint about the adult behavior at some of the recent basketball games that I have attended.

At the last two games I attended, I've heard adults criticizing students for yelling too loudly and standing up too much, blocking the view of the game.

It makes no sense to me why anyone would ruin a spectator's right to yell and scream or jump up and down, especially a student sitting in their own section.

The Rayders are really a pleasure to watch this year and the whole reason any of us are there is to give as much support to this team as possible. This is what a basketball game is all about.

The Rayder basketball team belongs to their fellow students, who are doing a fabulous job of supporting their team in every way, and for any student to be criticized for the way he or she is expressing that is incredibly uncalled for.

It also is not encouraging anybody to enjoy themselves and root for their team, which they should be able to do any way they see fit. It's their school and their team.

Girls' sports teams don't get as much as the boys

Dear Editor:

I'm a sixth grade student at the Charlevoix Middle School. I'm writing this letter telling the community that the girls' sports are just as important as the boys'.

I think that the girls' sports should have all the activities the boys' sports get. They get to have fun activities such as spaghetti dinners and many more. At one of the basketball games, I talked to one of the assistant coaches of the varsity boys' basketball team. I asked him if the girls' sports have the same things as the boys. He said that girls' sports don't have anything near as much as the boys do. So if the boys' coach will say that, then the girls need more. I think that the girls just deserve more. I hope that this means just as much to you as it does to me.

Sincerely,

We need a music store in town

Dear Editor:

I think that we need a CD store in Charlevoix. The reason why is because music is so important to teens. We have to drive at least to Petoskey to get a good CD. I think that having a CD store with band merchandise, magazines and CD players would be totally awesome! The CD music store would be a great place to hang out for teens.

Another thing is that CDs in Petoskey or Traverse City are very expensive, so maybe you could make the CDs less expensive.

New releases would be good too. The reason why is because in regular CD stores, they only have old and not-too-great CDs. So, if you would consider all of this, I would appreciate it very much!

Sincerely,

Middle school roof leaks

Dear Editor:

I strongly suggest that Charlevoix gets a new middle school. First, our school was built in 1927. Next, in the math room the roof leaks so there's a puddle on the desks. When you stand in the middle of the hall you can feel vibrations. There's also cracks in the wall. The wood on the stairway is all chipped, and the railings you can twist. Finally when it rains the band tunnel has water on the floor.

Respectfully yours,
Taylor Martin

Friends of the Jordan receive award

Friends of the Jordan River Watershed (FOJ) received the 1999 Clean Waters Award of the Michigan Outdoor Writers Association (MOWA) on Feb. 5 at MOWA's winter meeting in Marquette.

MOWA Clean Waters Award chairperson Carol Swinehart, communication specialist with Michigan Sea Grant, says the Jordan River group was a natural for the award, designed to recognize volunteers' continuous efforts and effectiveness in preserving, protecting and enhancing the waters of the State of Michigan.

In 1998, Friends of the Jordan River Watershed was successful in its bid to block oil and gas drilling in the Jordan Valley Management Area and is currently seeking to have the area become the first to be protected through Michigan's new State Land Reserve Act, which would permanently restrict such oil, gas and mineral extraction activities.

"We are very grateful that MOWA recognizes our efforts in challenging the people of our region and around the state to work together to protect this 'Crown Jewel' of the Lower Peninsula," said John Richter, president of Friends of the Jordan.

In addition to annual Spring and Fall River Cleanup outings, FOJ also helped develop public access for the Cosner Preserve on M-66, co-hosted a series of workshops on sustainable development, and also received grants to publish a watershed handbook. The handbook will feature geographical and historical information, watershed and land protection methods and other issues relating to management of the public involvement in watershed resources.

"It's very encouraging for this organization to be accomplishing some of its major goals and to gain statewide recognition for its achievements," said the group's director, John Hummer, in accepting the award.

"We know that we'll have to continue our efforts in order for future generations to enjoy the river as we do, and that's what keeps us going."

Formed in 1990, volunteer contributions are essential to accomplishing FOJ's ambitious mission to "conserve the natural resources and protect the environmental quality of the Jordan River and its watershed."

Hummer also expressed gratitude for MOWA and its writers.

"There are three basic reasons why we received this award: knowledge of the resource and issues involving it; dedication to protecting the resource through action; and creating awareness, which is where MOWA comes in. Without the written word, our efforts would not be nearly as effective," Hummer said. MOWA includes outdoor writer members and outdoor professionals.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Joe Johnston
Charlevoix Assembly of God

Are you laying bricks or building cathedrals?

Christopher Wren, who designed St. Paul's Cathedral in London (noted as one of the world's most beautiful buildings), wrote about reactions of construction workers who were asked what they were doing. Those workers who were bored and tired responded by saying, "I'm carrying stones," or "I'm laying bricks."

But one worker, who was mixing cement, seemed cheerful and enthusiastic about his job. When asked what he was doing, he replied by saying, "I'm building a magnificent cathedral."

Surveys and studies have shown that over 50 percent of people do not like their work. Instead of getting up in the morning with eager anticipation toward their job or employment, they are awakened by an unwelcome alarm clock which only reminds them of boredom and weariness. Their dream in life is to win the lottery so they will never have to work another day in their lives.

God clearly did not create us to be bored and unfulfilled by our work. Sure, work is difficult and challenging at times, but we must check our motives to see why we let the challenges of the job get us down. The Bible tells us that we are to work and do everything we do for the glory of God (1 Corinthians 10:31). Are you glorifying God in your job? In Scripture, the word "work" is another word for "worship." Working is simply just one way we worship God.

In Colossians 3:23, the apostle Paul tells us to be happy in our work because we do not work for man but for God. If work to you is simply a way to feed your family and get by in life, you are sadly missing the mark. God wants you to be fulfilled in life. Get fulfillment by worshiping God in your work. The more difficult the situation, the more glory He gets for helping you to overcome it. You can do it with God's help.

Don't be a mere brick carrier or stone cutter. Be a cathedral builder.

Leavin' Dodge is leaving their mark on the music scene

By Jamie MacMillan

Stepping away from their music and to the snowy outdoors of their Charlevoix home are, from left, Michelle Chenard, Erin Brennan and Tim Hosper, members of the folk rock trio Leavin' Dodge.

It may not be the big time, but the local folk rock band Leavin' Dodge has already carved out a nifty career in the northern Michigan music scene.

The band, composed of the cousin guitar-playing duo of Michelle Chenard and Erin Brennan, along with guitarist/bassist Tim Hosper, has played hundreds of gigs locally, went on a mini-Spanish tour, opened for famous acts such as Blessed Union of Souls and recently had one of their original songs showcased on the 24-track, "Northern Michigan Rocks" compilation.

"That has given us a lot of exposure and publicity," Brennan said of the album sponsored by the radio station WKLT. The album features works from two dozen northern Michigan bands.

"Graceful Liberty," a soulful ballad written by Chenard, was selected from over 300 songs for the album and has found its way into the radio station's song rotation.

That soundtrack, however, is not the only place fans can find the urban folk sound backed by the powerful vocal harmonies that is Leavin' Dodge.

In December, the group released its first record, a self-titled work of eight original songs ranging from ballads like "Graceful Liberty" and "Ole Margarita" to down and dirty blues ditties like "Bring Me Down," to the folk róck-a-billy stomp of the title track.

The band set out last spring to produce the album. A busy and ambitious summer tour, however, had the trio scrambling to do the album whenever they had the time, Brennan said.

They did all the recording at the Backtrack studio in East Jordan and in the home studio of a Charlevoix Township cabin the group calls home. To keep everything in their control and fearful that any outside "industry" help might "ruin the fun we had," the group remained independent and released the album on their own label, Dodge Recordings.

"People are really sick of being force-fed bands, and it really is up to the bands themselves to run their careers," Chenard said. "The whole key is to create a buzz and get people saying, 'Whoa, who are these guys?'"

In order to get their start, the cousins did just that — created their own buzz.

Staging an impromptu audition, the pair, absent any public address system or a lengthy set list, performed to about a dozen patrons of the Shipwreck, a tavern in the Upper Peninsula town of Curtis, about 20 miles west of Newberry.

"We felt we had to jump in feet first," Brennan recalled of the June, 1997 evening. "After our three songs, the group at the bar said they would pay us if we kept playing."

As it turns out, the bar's proprietor agreed to hire them and two weeks later Leavin' Dodge played their first official gig.

Chenard handles most of the lead vocals and rhythm guitar. Performing professionally since she was 15 years old, Chenard honed her stage presence playing in numerous bands from Florida to New York City.

One band she was in called the Plaid Skirts found themselves playing in the A-circuit of southern music clubs as well as opening up for such rock dinosaurs like Bad Finger and Humble Pie.

"That was a great experience because it gave me a taste of what it was like to be expected to perform your original songs on stage," she said.

Brennan, who grew up in Newberry idolizing her cousin's music career, soon followed her into the field after burning out on a career in business. She spent about a year in Spain, playing in coffee shops and being influenced by flamenco music and other Spanish folk rhythms.

"Getting into music, for me, was a discovery process, and I goofed around with it for awhile," she said. "I wouldn't trade this in for any job. It has given me so many benefits that aren't necessarily monetary, such as self-satisfaction and being able to be creative."

By adding Hosper to the mix, the duo discovered a self-defined "lifelong side man" who began his professional career as a street musician in San Francisco. Hosper, who plays electric guitar, slide and bass, joined the band on a whim one night last summer when the duo was playing at Charlevoix's Villager Pub. He is now insistent that he has one of the best musical jobs in the area, playing at the side of Brennan and Chenard.

"I'm having a blast with all of this," he said.

The three combine to form a band with folk rock and country-western leanings that, when not performing originals, pulls from a set-list of over 100 cover tunes ranging from Indigo Girls to REM to Sublime.

"We're very interested to see what kind of music we develop," Chenard said. "We know if it's right for us, but really all styles attract us. People can hear that during our performances."

The band is toying with the idea of adding a percussionist, trying to schedule an Ireland tour and is working on a new album which may debut as soon as this summer.

"We've built a good following," Chenard said.

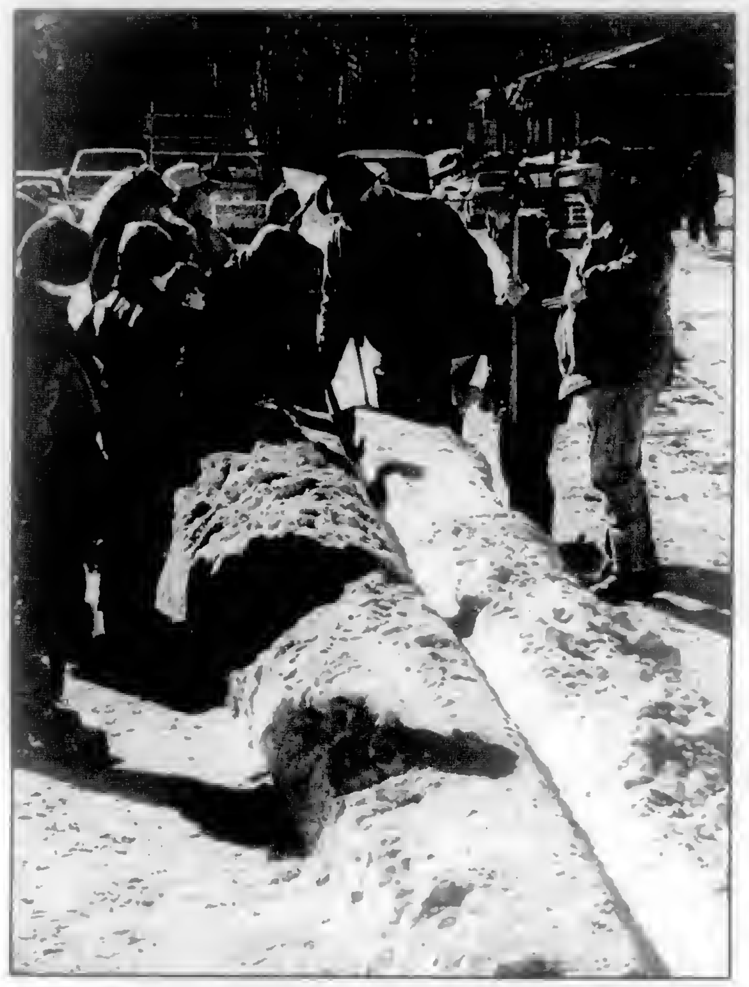
It was fittingly cold and sunny for the Klondike Derby



Members from many area boy scout troops gathered at Shanahan Field Saturday for the Klondike Derby. Troops competed against one another in ice rescue drills, first aid drills, snow snake launching and compass reading. Troop Six of Charlevoix was last year's winner, so they had the honor of hosting this year's competition. Shown here are some of the activities the troops enjoyed.

Clockwise, from top left: Scouts prepare to shoot a snowsnake down a long trough to see who can maneuver the slippery stick the best and the farthest.

Charlevoix's Troop 11 stops to warm up after leaving one test station and before heading to another.

A scout troop practices their ice rescue skills while troop leaders watch and judge their performance.

Big Rock Point ships transformer to new job in different location

Bits and pieces of Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point plant will continue to serve the energy needs of Michigan residents long after the nuclear power plant is dismantled.

On Tuesday, Feb. 9, the substation that channeled power into and out of Big Rock Point was loaded onto a semi-truck trailer as a part of the ongoing restoration project. By Wednesday the substation was on its way to a new duty at Consumers Energy's Thetford facility near Flint.

Big Rock Point could spare the 37-year-old transformer because a decommissioning substation is supplying power to the nuclear plant. The plant is being dismantled and the Lake Michigan site will be returned to green field.

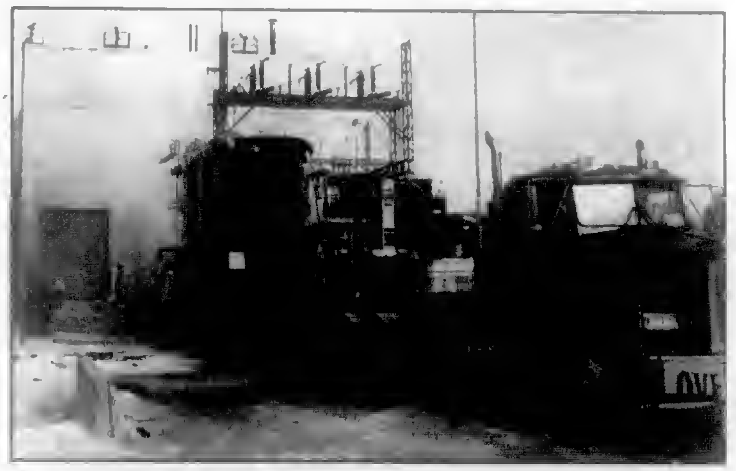
"Even though we're decommissioning and no longer generating electricity, we're proud that we're still able to contribute to the company's mission in other ways, as shown by the transfer of our main transformer," said general manager Ken Powers.

At more than 130,000 pounds, loading the transformer onto a 100-foot flatbed truck took all day. Before it could be moved, 8,000 gallons of oil were drained from the transformer, and cooling fins and other fixtures were removed. Before that work, the transformer weighed more than 254,000 pounds.

The transformer will help support two of the Thetford substation's nine combustion turbines. Three weeks ago, a transformer for two of the 39-megawatt turbines failed. Consumers Energy decided the decommissioned transformer at Big Rock fit the bill, as repair costs for the failed transformer were prohibitive and repairs were not guaranteed to last.

Consumers Energy bought the Big Rock main transformer in 1962 for $129,000.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry. The plant was shut down on Aug. 29, 1997.



On the flatbed and ready to go, this 37-year-old transformer from Big Rock Point will find a new life at the Thetford Substation near Flint. The transformer weighs more than 130,000 pounds empty. Because of its weight, special permits were obtained from the Charlevoix County Road Commission to move the transformer.

Volleyball team falls in league action

The Charlevoix volleyball team continued to struggle last week, falling to conference foes Traverse City-St. Francis and Kalkaska.

Against the Lady Gladiators, the Rayders took each set down to the wire, but didn't have enough steam to nudge ahead en route to the 12-15, 14-16 loss.

Courtney Butler, Megan Vogel and Lindsey Carland paced the team with three kills apiece and Mandy Webb served two aces and had three assists. Ann Spang added four aces and Vogel, one.

Despite another solid game from Webb, who had nine assists and five aces, the Rayders found themselves on the wrong end of the scoreboard against Kalkaska, dropping an 8-15, 9-15 decision.

Christine Sweeney, Juli Swenor and Vogel each had three kills to lead the offense, and Spang and Taya Drost served two and one aces respectively.

With the defeats, the club's record falls to 6-15-4, 2-7 in Lake Michigan conference play.

The junior varsity team also dropped both of its matches, 9-15,7-15, to Traverse City-St. Francis, and 5-15, 5-15, to Kalkaska.

The highlight of the week on the local volleyball courts was the Charlevoix freshmen club, topping conference foe Traverse City-St. Francis, 13-15, 16-14, 15-7.

Tegan Lawson, Jennifer Rowe, Elissa Wood and Michelle Yalbo paced the offense while Krista Swenor, Rachel Kanine, Libby Withrow and Annie Mas keyed the defensive effort. Top servers for the team were Lawson, Krista Rusk and Kristi Swenor.

The varsity team will look to get back on track with a busy schedule starting Wednesday with a conference match at Boyne City. The team will host East Jordan in another conference game next Monday, March 1. Sandwiched between the league dates, the club will travel to play Suttons Bay on Thursday, Feb. 25.

Charlevoix shakes off Elks loss and beats Kalkaska

By Jamie MacMillan

Shaking off the doldrums from last Tuesday's emotional loss to Elk Rapids, four Rayders scored in double figures and Charlevoix drilled nine three-pointers to motor past Kalkaska, 78-64, last Friday night.

Charlevoix pulled away from the Blazers with three scoring runs featuring balanced scoring, a rediscovered touch from the three-point range and a swarming press, all of which proved the perfect tonic for the loss to the Elks earlier in the week.

Rayder coach Keith Haske admitted that practices following the loss to the Elks — which in all likelihood dropped the Rayders out of contention for the league title — were a little down. The coaching staff, however, preached to the players the importance not just of bouncing back, but also having some fun in the process.

"We told them to go out and have fun, relax and just play the game," Haske said. "They had been so tense and worried about just winning that they forgot how to enjoy playing basketball."

The fun for the Rayders started early in Friday's contest with the Blazers. With Matt Dennis and Justin Thorp crashing the offensive boards and a press which forced the Blazers into five turnovers in the opening two minutes, Charlevoix scored the game's first eight points.

Despite not getting a shot at the goal in the game's first two minutes, the Blazers battled back on the hot shooting of guard Jerry Kitter. With his teammate Matt Horton, the league's top scorer, on the bench in early foul trouble, Kitter dropped in his team's first nine points on a series of drives, jump shots off screens and a three pointer.

Scoring 14 points in the opening half, Kitter helped Kalkaska erase the early deficit and seize single point leads four different times in the first half.

The Blazers' final lead of the game came when Kitter and Dave Crandell hit consecutive baskets, giving the Blazers a 29-28 advantage with just under two minutes in the half.

Adam Wood and Jim Kanine each drilled a three-point shot as Charlevoix closed the half on a 9-1 run to take a 37-30 lead at intermission.

The momentum carried over into the second half. Woods scored eight points in the early sequences of the third quarter as a 10-3 run helped Charlevoix double their advantage to 14 points, 47-33.

The Blazers steadied themselves a bit with back-to-back hoops, but the Rayders put the contest away by scoring 16 unanswered points.

Tom Cunningham canned a pair of treys, Dennis added four and Kanine, Wood and Thorp each scored a basket in the decisive run.

When the dust cleared, the Rayders had an insurmountable 63-37 lead with seconds left in the third period. Kalkaska actually outscored the Rayders in the final frame, but never threatened the Rayders' lead.

Kanine led the Rayders with 19 points and dished out six assists. Wood poured in 15, Dennis, 14 and Cunningham, 13. Dennis led the team in rebounds with nine.

The Charlevoix JV squad scored eight of its final 10 points from the free throw line as the JV Rayders labored past Kalkaska JV, 56-51.

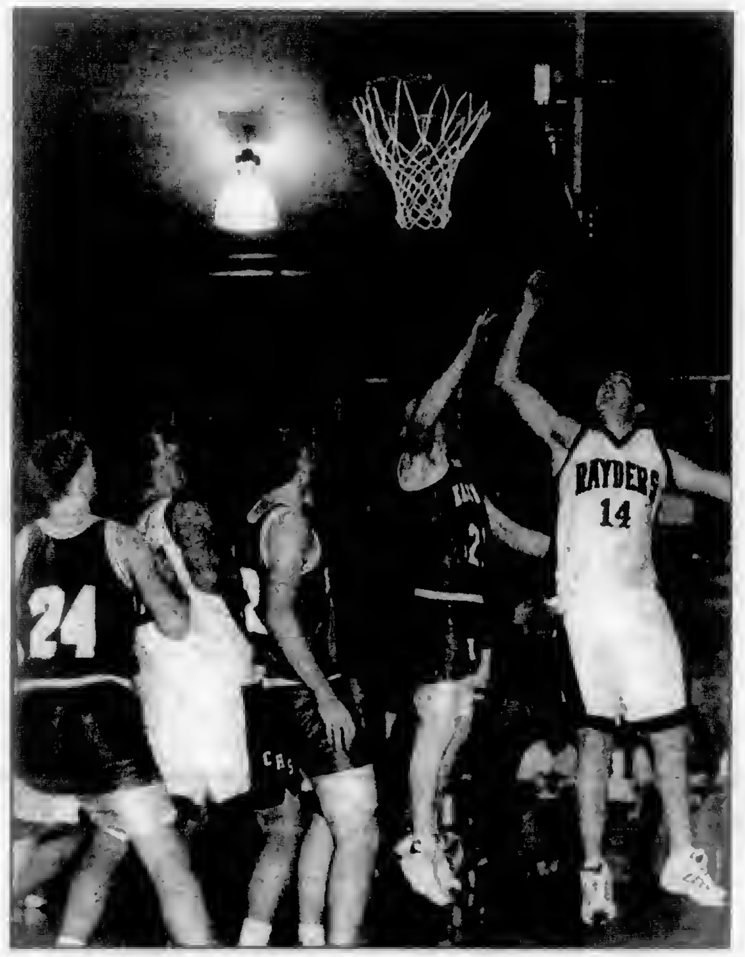
Zach Dennis, Scott Parrish and Ben Coen each swished a pair of free throws and Doug Reick and Jeremiah Teuscher added one each, helping the Rayders outscore the Blazers 10-3 after the game was tied at 46-46 with 2:50 remaining.

Despite Friday's fun, the Rayders might have to settle for second place in the race for the league title. Using a 30-11 scoring advantage from the free throw line, the Elk Rapids Elks topped the Rayders 73-68 in a battle of league co-leaders last Tuesday night in Elk Rapids.

The updated standings have the Elks well in control with a 10-1 record. The Rayders are in second place with an 8-2 record. As the Rayders step out of conference with games this week at Cheboygan on Tuesday, Feb. 23 and at St. Ignace on Friday, Feb. 26, the Elks will look to wrap up the league title at Kalkaska this Friday.

If the Elks lose, then the Rayders can tie for the conference title with wins in their final league games next week against East Jordan and Harbor Springs. If not, they can only hope for possible redemption against the Elks in the district tournament to be staged next month in the cozy confines of the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

"Hopefully we'll see them again and we can step it up next time," Haske said. "It'll be up to our senior guys to get us going with the urgency that this is it."



Charlevoix's Tom Cunningham scores two of his 14 points on this baseline drive. Cunningham drilled three treys and was one of four Rayders scoring in double figures in the win.

The Charlevoix High School performing arts team will be presenting their award-winning play, Oklahoma, in Charlevoix at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 27 and at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 28.

At regional competition, the performers earned all excellent ratings of 1 from all three judges, but due to an odd scoring technicality, did not get picked to move on to state championship competition.

Individual excellence awards in acting were given to Caleb Levengood as the surly Judd, Nick Grosberg as the conniving traveling salesman, Tyler Lieberman as the romantic cowboy Will, and Abby Paterka as the matriarch Aunt Eller. Nick Kessler received a superior acting award for his lead role as Curly.

The play is a spirited throwback to the classic American musical. Patrons will enjoy several ensemble dances performed by a skilled chorus. The musical score has many recognizable favorites, and does not disappoint as good old-fashioned entertainment.

SCRAPBOOK

Disguised as a boy, local girl fought in the Civil War

By Geoffrey Reynolds

From the Archives

While Charlevoix claims many Civil War veterans in its history, little has been written about the famous woman who served her country as a man.

According to military records, Sarah Emma Edmonds was born in St. John, New Brunswick, Canada in 1839. During her childhood she was exposed to a cruel father who treated his daughters poorly and expected them to work as hard as men on their rural farm. After many years of hard labor and verbal mistreatment, Edmonds was promised by her father to an older neighboring farmer. Frightened by this prospect, Edmonds sought the aid of a neighbor boy to help conceal her identity, and in 1856, fled her home. Once disguised as a young man, Edmonds took the identity of Franklin Thompson and traveled south into the United States and traveled as an itinerant Bible salesman. By 1860, she had stayed briefly in Oakland County, Mich., eventually settling down in Flint, with a family that had befriended her.

After the beginning of the Civil War in the spring of 1861, Thompson joined with the existing local militia group, the Flint Union Greys, on April 17, and officially became a private in the Second Michigan Volunteers, Company F on May 25, 1861 in Detroit. Since no close physical examination was required, she was enlisted without question as a man.

Once in the army she officially served as a nurse, message dispatcher, mail carrier, and finally regimental postmaster. She served as Thompson for two years, at which time she became very ill with malaria and had to desert the army to avoid detection by regimental doctors.

After her two-year stint in the Union Army, Edmonds returned to her given name and female role and served as a nurse for the United States Christian Commission. In 1864, while convalescing in a hospital, she wrote her version of the time she spent in the military, published the next year as Nurse and Spy in the Union Army. Historians feel that her book eventually led to an erroneous myth that she served as a spy during the war which still persists today. In fact, no accounts, other than her own, exist of her duties as a spy or were ever mentioned in the official records of the army or verified by her commanding officers or fellow enlisted men.

In 1867, after returning to her hometown and reuniting with Linus N. Seelye, the boy who had helped her to transform her appearance, she was married to Seelye in Cleveland, Ohio. According to census records and a local newspaper story, the Seelyes resided in Charlevoix Township from 1867 to 1870. This move was probably motivated by the fact that Linus' sister, Mrs. A.K. Doughtery, was residing here at that time. While here she gave birth to one son, Linus B. the elder Linus worked as a carpenter and is credited with building the second home of Charlevoix pioneer Morris J. Stockman. This house, located at 110 Park Ave., is still regarded as the oldest surviving house in the city.

Eventually, all three of her natural born children, Linus B., Homer, and Alice Louise, died very young. After the couple spent some time running an orphan asylum they adopted and raised two boys who grew to adulthood.

After leaving Charlevoix they moved to Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Louisiana, Kansas, and eventually Texas. While living in Fort Scott, Kansas, Seelye began securing affidavits for application for a veteran's pension from fellow soldiers. Affirming her story the government granted Seelye, alias Franklin Thompson, a soldier's pension on March 28, 1884 as "a female soldier who...served as a private...rendering faithful service in the ranks." Historians have always questioned whether her tent mates might have known and chose not to expose her secret identity, but this has never been proven. In fact, government officials pursued this line of questioning quite vigorously when Seelye applied for a soldier's pension in 1882 for her service as Thompson. Still, the old veterans maintained their ignorance of her true sex until meeting her at a Flint veterans' reunion in 1884. There, once slender and wiry Thompson now appeared as a rather stout and fleshy, married woman named Sarah Seelye.

After receiving her pension, Seelye moved on to La Porte, Texas and became the only known woman to be granted regular membership into the Grand Army of the Republic (G.A.R.) and later became a member of the Houston post.

After an eventful and full life as both a man and as a woman, Seelye passed away in La Porte on Sept. 5, 1898 and was buried there with full military honors. In 1901, her body was moved to the G.A.R. (veterans group) section of Washington Cemetery in Houston.

Beaver Island loses mainland power source

By Laurie Lounsbury

The electrical umbilical cord that connects Beaver Island to the mainland has apparently sprung a leak.

At about 10:30 a.m. Friday, Feb. 26, island residents lost their power supply from the mainland. Power was restored several hours later by using generators located at the island's power plant.

"There were a few tense hours for a while there, but the higher-ups at the power company are working really hard to fix this situation," said Rich Gillespie, a relief operator at the island's power plant.

Since 1972, Beaver Island residents have been getting their electrical power from the mainland through a 27 mile-long cable that lies under the water — or ice — of Lake Michigan.

That flow of electricity was halted Friday when a fault somewhere in the cable caused the power to shut down.

"Engineers tested the cable Friday, and based on what happened during their tests, they narrowed the problem down to that cable," said Dave Guzniczak, communications director for Great Lakes Energy.

Narrowing the problem down to 27 miles of cable was the first step. Great Lakes Energy has also hired a technician to drive up from Florida with a trailer full of cable-fault location equipment. With the equipment, the technician can send a signal through the cable and, by measuring the distance, pinpoint the fault in the cable to within 500 feet, according to Gillespie.

Until then, island residents are getting their power from three of the four generators that are part of the island's aging power plant. Emergency preparations are underway to bring the fourth generator on line, and Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative, the power supplier, is trying to get an extra generator to the island as soon as possible.

Gillespie is optimistic, but will feel more comfortable when an extra generator arrives.

"Right now we feel pretty good about the situation, but we've got to get to a safe point here, to higher ground," he said. "As long as we don't have any major problems, we'll hold our own."

The risk of a power shortage on the island is still high if one of the generators breaks down, according to Guzniczak.

"It's unbelievably coincidental that we shut down the power plant 24 hours to the minute before the power went out," Gillespie said, noting that the plant was mothballed by Wolverine Power due to its age and condition. Because the power plant had been mothballed and fuel had been pumped out of the diesel generators, it took Gillespie and his brother John, who also works for Wolverine Power, longer

College proposal put on hold

By Jamie MacMillan

For the last month, county commissioners had looked forward to last week's meeting in order to quiz North Central Michigan College officials about their proposal to annex Charlevoix County into the school's tax district. The county clerk's office, however, was informed by the college two days before the meeting that they would not be attending.

"In other words, they're regrouping," commissioner Vic Patrick said.

In an interview the following morning, college president Robert Graham said questions the college could not answer surrounding the wording of an eventual ballot proposal led to the postponement of their appearance.

"We didn't have any final answers for some of their questions, so we felt it best to wait and not rush anything," Graham said.

The college will eventually be asking Charlevoix County residents to approve a pair of ballot initiatives. One simply asks if residents would support annexation, while the other asks residents to support a 2.5416 millage in property taxes to fund the college.

The local commissioners had inquired about the possibility of four ballot proposals, one asking for annexation support and three others breaking down the 2.5416 millage.

The millage number is actually han usual to get the plant up and unning. The plant is normally used only in the summer when the elecrical load is at peak levels.

Island residents are responding to the crisis with typical hardy spirit that goes with island living.

"It's business as usual," Gillespie said. "Everyone here is really helping out with conservation of power. We noticed a big difference on Monday. Usually usage is high on Monday, with everyone doing laundry and what not, but it was down quite a bit."

Working in the utility's favor is the relatively mild winter we've had this year. Lake Michigan is free of ice, so a fifth generator could conceivably be brought over on the Emerald Isle ferry boat instead of being transported by the Air National Guard. The milder weather will help the utility company if they have to repair a cable fault out in the middle of the lake.

The cable runs from Sturgeon Bay Point near Cross Village to the island. It is the second cable to connect the mainland and island. The original cable, installed in 1972, had to be replaced about 16 years ago after a boat anchor damaged it. The cable is about 1.5 inches in diameter.

"If we're lucky, the fault will be near one of the shorelines, then it will be possible to make the repairs right now," Guzniczak said. "To be on the safe side, we're warning island residents that it could be quite some time before we can repair it if the fault is in the middle of Lake Michigan. But who knows, we might get lucky."

Proposal to annex Charlevoix County for college is delayed

an accumulation of three different millages the college has had approved by Emmet County voters: a 1.2416 general operating millage which extends indefinitely, a 1 mill expiring in 2006 and a .3 mill for building and renovation expiring in 2016. All three millages are for operational expenses.

Graham said the college board liked the idea of four different proposals, but legally it could not be done. Instead, he said, the college is tinkering with the ballot language that would break down the effect of each millage.

Behind the issue of the ballot language is the fact that the local commissioners don't appear supportive of the annexation idea.

"We've been worried about the length of time," commissioner Carl Price said of the millage requests. "We don't think as a board or a county that we should be able to support that."

After the meeting, commissioner Shirley Roloff expressed concern over holding the election when the "snowbirds" aren't in town. Roloff said she has been surprised by the fact that everyone she has talked to expressed concerns about the issue, ranging from senior citizens who don't want a property tax hike to students who say that Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City is the local higher education school of choice.

Graham remains encouraged that the proposal will pass in large part because college officials are armed with a survey done by Kathy Feaster of School Public Relations Consulting Services stating that 65 percent of Charlevoix County residents favor the initiative.

"I have to believe she does accurate surveys, or we would not be out there asking this question," Graham said.

Graham noted that the college used Feaster's company during their February 1997 millage election in Emmet County. Survey results predicted 61 percent support and when final votes were tallied the college had gained 62 percent support. Graham said the next step after finalizing the ballot's language is setting an election date in Charlevoix County.

"We're pretty open, but we think it will be helpful if we do this while school is in session," Graham said.

Clarification

A clarification was requested regarding a story that ran in last week's Courier, dated Feb. 24, 1999. The story discussed insurance coverage for problems related to the Year 2000 Bug.

"In the insurance industry, businesses are being mailed exclusions to their policies, and when they receive them they should contact their insurance agents," said Bruce Hubble, insurance agent with Shanley-VanTreese Agency in Petoskey and Boyne City. "At this time, homeowner policies are not being subjected to exclusions," Hubble added.

Area code will change in northwest Michigan

The area code prefix of 616 is going to belong exclusively to residents of southwest Michigan starting June 1. The coverage area of the 616 area code, which currently includes the entire western portion of the state of Michigan, is being broken up into two parts. The geographical area north of Grand Rapids and west of I-75 became the losers who have to surrender the 616 area code.

In June, the new area code for the northern portion of the zone will be 231.

A grace period from June to October will allow people to use either the new area code or the old area code in northwest Michigan. After that, the 231 area code will be the only one that will get calls through to northwest Michigan. Printing companies are expecting an onslaught of business as people change stationery, business cards and letterhead to include the new area code. It's advisable for people who will need to order new business supplies to do so as soon as possible.

Watershed addresses taught by land expert

Thanks to a unique new program funded by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation Youth Board, area fifth grade students will gain a whole new sense of place this spring.

Called "What's Your Watershed Address?" the program is the brainchild of Charlevoix County Land Conservancy Director Jo Anne Beemon.

So what is a watershed address?

"A watershed address is a global address," Beemon wrote in her grant application. "It is the way you would describe where you live if there were no roads! It would be how you would give an eagle directions to your home. It is a new, yet very old way of looking at where we live."

Beemon will use new GIS mapping techniques that overlay watershed boundaries and roads to help students in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City schools pinpoint their locations — literally.

"A large map will display the watershed, each identified with colorful flags (green flags for Inwood Creek, yellow for Susan Creek, blue for Whiskey Creek, and so on) inscribed with children's names and places where they live in their watershed," Beemon said. "They'll

Boat owner's water pump saved the day for the city

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

There's nothing new in Charlevoix when it comes to networking. Let's turn hack the clock to the '60s, long before computers, when townspeople knew exactly what huttons to push to get things done — and fast.

Doug Bergmann, a third generation native, recalls the awful day when all the electricity in the city went off and the water level in the old tower on Park Avenue was getting low. The city's gasoline-powered emergency water pump would not start. This meant that everyone in the city would be without water until the motor was repaired or replaced.

For those who like to know these things, the water pump was a four-cylinder Sterling marine motor made especially for Charlevoix. Located in the water treatment plant next to Lake Michigan beach, it pumped 750 gallons per minute.

Bergmann, who worked at Bellinger Marine at the time, was one to receive a call for help. Sure enough, he knew exactly where there was a Sterling marine motor — in the late Jack Goldman's 42-foot mahogany yacht, The Boss, which was laid up for winter storage in its hoat house on Round Lake. A call was made to Goldman in St. Louis for permission to remove the starter from The Boss and loan it to the city until a new motor was found. Permission granted. But Bergmann didn't have the key to the boathouse. He had to squeeze under the boathouse, walk on ice, and climb aboard the yacht, which had been hoisted out of the water. Bergmann quickly removed the starter from The Boss and installed it in the city's water pump and thank heaven, it worked!

Subsequently, numerous calls were made throughout the Midwest to have the starter repaired without success. Over 1,000 tiny wires were involved and no one wanted to tackle the joh until finally an old repair man was found in Detroit who agreed to rehuild the starter for the princely sum of $15! It served the city well until the new plant was built in 1986.

Whatever happened to The Boss, you may well ask. According to an article (June, 1996) in Traverse Magazine, the yacht, which was originally custom-huilt in 1921 for Jack's father, Alvin Goldman, (a multi-millionaire and the largest cotton hroker in the country),. is now berthed in Les Cheneaux Islands. It is lovingly preserved and cared for by the second owner, John Brandt of Grand Rapids.

Still, even the present owner is not aware of the crucial role The Boss played on that fateful day when Charlevoix's water system almost failed, and The Boss's starter saved the day.

Bring Sno Challenge back next year

Dear Editor:

I think we should bring back the Sno Challenge. It was great for the community. It brought people from other towns and we made a lot of money for our town. We had a great time, and it gave us something to do. Another thing is that most of all Charlevoix enjoyed it. It was terrific to see all the people at Mt. McSauba.

We couldn't have the event mainly because of the noise, improper parking and the partying. I think we could think of some ways to change it though.

First, everyone who chooses to drink and is over 21, will get a hracelet that allows you to have three or four drinks. Every time you buy a drink, they punch a hole in your hracelet. Second, we should definitely have more police controlling the noise and parking. That way we will have fun and be able to enjoy this event!

Sincerely,
Lexie Evans

Student likes Sno Challenge

Dear Editor:

I think that we need to have the Sno Challenge again because a lot of people had so much fun.

Families got together and spent good quality time with each other. Everyone yelled, screamed, and had fun watching the monster trucks. It was really exciting!

One way to improve this event is to make it alcohol-free. It would make it a safer environment for everyone there.

Finally, the Sno Challenge brings the town together as a community. I hope you'll reconsider this event.

Respectfully yours,
Tyler Bier

Band room shakes under middle school gym

Dear Editor:

I, along with many other students at Charlevoix Middle School, think we should get a new middle school. We want a new one because there are cracks in some walls, and warped floors that are like speed humps, and there are leaks in the roof. Another reason is the band room is right underneath the gym. When we're down there the lights shake and make noise. Another thing is there is no auditorium. The stage is in the gym so we have to sit on metal chairs for plays. I hope the people of Charlevoix agree with my letter.

Sincerely,
Adam Wager

Charlevoix could use a cool shopping mall

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to a higger shopping mall in Charlevoix. Right now all we have is Kmart, and the Dollar Store. That's OK, hut if we want to huy anything cool and cheaper we have to drive to the mall in Traverse City.

It would be nice to have a mall in Charlevoix. Just think about it. You could go there shopping, buy pets, eat there, huy clothes and play in the arcade, all in one day. You could build it by Wolohan Lumber on the train track.

So, anyway., if there is anyone else who feels this way, they should write a letter too.

Respectfully yours,
Joshua Marr

Middle school has cracks in the walls

Dear Editor:

I'm writing to you about my concerns about our middle school. It has cracks in the walls and in the ceiling. When it rains, the ceiling leaks in some classes, and in the tunnel there is always a big puddle of water by the door. Someone could slip and fall and get hurt if these problems are not addressed. The school is also not insulated well. If you slid your desk across the floor it disturbs the class below you. When you shut your locker you can sometimes feel vibrations.

Thanks for your time and cooperation.

Sincerely,
Brittany Niswander

Charlevoix needs an indoor sports park

Dear Editor:

I think that Charlevoix needs an indoor sports park because hasehall, basketball, football, and soccer games get canceled because of bad weather! Also, you can't roller blade, skate board, or bike very well when the jumps and half-pipes are wet.

Also, you have to wait for summer to get over to have it cold enough just to go ice-skating. Sometimes you only get to skate for a month because the ice melts so

Road commission wants money for new trucks

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners tahled a request last week from the county's road commission for an additional $225,000 to buy a pair of new sand trucks.

Commissioners Carl Price and James Behling favored the idea, with Price noting that the county has enough in its general funds to cover the expense.

"This will save money in the long run, it's only an initial expense," Price said.

The majority of the commissioners balked at the idea that the county's general funds could support the request.

"We have too many things going on that I don't know if we do have the money to do this," commissioner Shirley Roloff said, noting the county's multi-million dollar commitment to the jail expansion and humane society relocation.

The road commission wants to purchase four new vehicles, with money for two coming from their own hudget. Road commission board members Keith Ogden and Wayne Saunders, along with engineering manager Pat Harmon, appeared before the county board last week asking for funding for the other two vehicles.

"During the storms in January we had two sand trucks in the shop and hroken all week," Harmon told the board. "We could have used them, hut they were husted down. It's hard to serve the puhlic that way."

Added Ogden, "We have no back-up trucks — at times this is a marginal, skin of our teeth outfit."

The road commission has 29 trucks in its fleet, most of which are models from the mid-1970s, 1980s and 1990s. Its oldest truck is a 1946 tar truck. Harmon said they put ahout 500 miles on it each summer for routine tar and chipping work.

Scheduled for replacement is a 1981 GMC Tandem, a 1973 Ford Tandem, and 1980 Ford Single-Axle and a 1978 Ford Single-Axle.

Ogden said they plan to open hids for the two trucks to be purchased out of their hudget on March 5 and hoped to get a thumhs-up from the county board so they could add the other two trucks to that hid list. Ogden said the estimated date for purchasing the vehicles is in August or September, so they wouldn't need the county's money until then.

The board tahled the request until their next meeting, so that the road commission could get a better feel for the vehicles' cost and allow for a committee meeting to determine how much the county could afford on this matter.

"This will give us a chance to see where that money will come from," commissioner Don Smith said.

Harmon told the hoard that these vehicular purchases are only the start of a larger plan to revamp the road commission's fleet. He said he wants to make sure that no truck sitting in their garage is older than eight years.

"We'd have to buy four trucks a year over the next seven to eight years to do that," he said.

Commissioner James Behling said he would support a 0.5 millage to fund road commission equipment purchases.

"I don't know if it would pass, hut I would like to try," he said.

The county hoard next meets at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 10.

fast. When it snows a lot, the plow takes forever, but whenever it does plow it wrecks the ice! Those are reasons I think Charlevoix needs an indoor sports park. Did you know Buy Low has been closed for over five years? That could be used for an indoor sports park.

We need a new middle school

Dear Editor:

I think Charlevoix needs a new middle school and so do many other people. When kids are in the hand room the lights are moving hack and forth from the kids in the gym running around, and that is why I think the school needs a new band room. Some places in the walls have large cracks. When there is a class in the gym the only two ways to the last wing is outside and through the gym. I think they need to put a hallway in. I think the middle school needs to be made for handicapped people.

Sincerely,
Alex Chaika

Fine people who litter

Dear Editor:

I think there is too much littering. One way to help stop littering is to raise the fines. Also we can teach younger kids to recycle, and set a good example ourselves by recycling whenever possihle. We need to protect the country side of northern Michigan so it stays beautiful. Whenever we see someone litter we should tell them its a crime! Finally, if you see litter, pick it up!

If we all work together and each do a little, the joh won't be so hard.

Respectfully yours,
Willie Schoof

learn how their activities affect people upstream and downstream."

Rod Cortwright of the Charlevoix County Extension Service will assist in generating maps of the watershed and suh-watersheds in the Charlevoix schools area.

The presentations will take place in April and May — a natural time of heightened awareness to the water all around us, Beemon noted.

"We are all fascinated hy water!" she said. "We stop to watch the water in our city drains; we watch the water run down driveways, into ditches and then into creeks. We watch the lakes and streams and rivers rise and swell over their banks with unflagging interest, year after year."

Turning that inhorn fascination into a sense of stewardship is the goal of the watershed address program, Beemon said.

"Children will learn a new way of looking at where they live and how their activities relate to other living things in their watershed," she wrote in her grant application project summary. "A Sense of Place is needed for us to understand our important task of being good conservationists."

An evaluation form provided for teachers will ask for comments and suggestions on how to make the presentation more helpful.

Charlevoix dance student honored with modern dance scholarship

Emily Heck, a senior at Charlevoix High School, recently auditioned and was awarded the Modern Dance Scholarship from the Northern Michigan Dance Council in Traverse City.

Emily attended the New York Dance Alliance Convention and workshops Jan. 22-24 in Lansing, where dancers came from Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Wisconsin. Her dance company, Company Dance Traverse, won a gold award for their ballet small production and a high silver award for their modern piece.

At Wayne State University on Feb. 7, the company auditioned and was chosen as one of the top three dance companies in Michigan for the Michigan Youth Arts Festival, which will be in May at Western Michigan University. With this honor, they will perform for the opening Gala event, and will attend three days of classes.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Mark Hofstra
Associate Pastor
Community Reformed Church

"The Lord was not in the wind... nor the fire; and after the fire a sound of sheer silence... Then there came a voice to him that said..." (Excerpts from 1 Kings 19:11-13)

The following story that came to me via e-mail was one of those demanding a forward to my "everyone" group and to this Beacon entry. May it help us all listen for God's voice during this Lenten season of preparation for observing Jesus' death and resurrection.

A young man had been to Wednesday night Bible Study. The pastor had shared about listening to God and obeying the Lord's voice. The young man couldn't help but wonder, "Does God still speak to people?"

After the service he went out with some friends for coffee and pie and they discussed the message. Several different ones talked about how God had led them in different ways. It was about 10 p.m. when the young man started driving home. Sitting in his car, he just began to pray.

"God, If you still speak to people speak to me," he said. "I will listen. I will do my best to obey."

As he drove down the main street of his town, he had the strangest thought; stop and buy a gallon of milk. He shook his head and said out loud, "God is that you?"

He didn't get a reply and started on toward home. But again came the thought, buy a gallon of milk. The young man thought about Samuel and how he didn't recognize the voice of God, and how little Samuel ran to Eli.

"Okay, God, in case that is you, I will buy the milk."

It didn't seem like too hard a test of obedience. He could always use the milk. He stopped and purchased the gallon of milk and started off toward home. As he passed Seventh Street, he again felt the urge: Turn down that street.

This is crazy, he thought, and drove on past the intersection. Again, he felt that he should turn down Seventh Street. At the next intersection, he turned back and headed down Seventh. Half-jokingly, he said out loud, "Okay, God, I will."

He drove several blocks, when suddenly, he felt like he should stop. He pulled over to the curb and looked around. He was in a semi-commercial area of town. It wasn't the best but it wasn't the worst of neighborhoods either. The businesses were closed and most of the houses looked dark, like the people were already in bed.

Again, he sensed something: Go and give the milk to the people in the house across the street. The young man looked at the house. It was dark and it looked like the people were either gone or they were already asleep. He started to open the door and then sat back in the car seat.

"Lord, this is insane. Those people are asleep and if I wake them up, they are going to be mad and I will look stupid."

Again, he felt like he should go and give the milk. Finally, he opened the door, "Okay God, if this is you, I will go to the door and I will give them the milk. If you want me to look like a crazy person, okay. I want to be obedient. I guess that will count for something, but if they don't answer right away, I am out of here."

He walked across the street and rang the bell. He could hear some noise inside. A man's voice yelled out, "Who is it? What do you want?" Then the door opened before the young man could get away. The man was standing there in his jeans and T-shirt. He looked like he just got out of bed. He had a strange look on his face and he didn't seem too happy to have some stranger standing on his doorstep.

"What is it?"

The young man thrust out the gallon of milk and said, "Here, I brought this to you."

The man took the milk and rushed down the hallway speaking loudly in Spanish. Then from down the hall came a woman carrying the milk toward the kitchen. The man was following her holding the baby. The baby was crying. The man had tears streaming down his face. The man began speaking and half-crying.

"We were just praying," he said. "We had some big bills this month and we ran out of money. We didn't have any milk for our baby. I was just praying and asking God to show me how to get some milk."

His wife in the kitchen yelled out, "I ask him to send an Angel with some... Are you an Angel?" The young man reached into his wallet and pulled out all the money he had on him and put it in the man's hand. He turned and walked back toward his car and the tears were streaming down his face.

He knew that God still answers prayers and that God still speaks to His people.

Turf war losers

Hundreds of thousands of dead alewives are washing up on the shores of Lake Michigan. Biologists say it's a likely sign that the zebra mussels are altering the aquatic food chain. The alewives and zebra mussels compete for plankton, and the ever-increasing zebra mussel population are out-eating the alewives. Experts say it could be a problem for salmon, which feed on young alewives. Tom Rozich of the state Department of Natural Resources said that the alewives probably didn't have enough food to carry them through the winter. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Song of the Lakes to perform in East Jordan Civic Center

Song Of The Lakes, the well-known Northern Michigan musical quartet, will perform live in concert at the East Jordan Civic Center at 7 p.m. Friday, March 19, as part of the Jordan River Arts Council winter performance arts series.

For years, Song of the Lakes has been making and playing some of the region's best music. Part of its uniqueness is that it's not only from this area, but the music is dedicated to celebrating the area — especially the waters of the Great Lakes. Ingemar Johansson (guitar, mandolin, harmonica), Michael Sullivan (guitar, mandolin, concertina), Lisa Johansson (flute, piccolo whistle), and Rick Jones (bodhran, bones, conch) are skilled musicians who have found a special synergy when their talents are combined.

The group has performed at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland in July of 1998 and has been invited back for the '99 Festival. They were one of 230 bands out of 260 chosen to record a sound track from the event and received the coveted #2 track. Upcoming performances include a Lake Michigan tour in late April, a Henry Ford Museum date, concerts with the Grand Rapids Symphony in July and serving as the headline group for the Michigan Bluegrass and Folk Festival in Portage.

The arts council is fortunate to present this concert due to funding by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Michigan Humanities Council. Admission is $5.

This performance is the only evening event in the art's council's mini-series this year. The main impetus has been to bring a variety of quality musicians to the elementary schools in the council's coverage area. In January, Altitude spent a day at the East Jordan Elementary School, with hands-on workshops for the fourth and fifth grades and a school performance. February brought Black Earth Arts to St. Mary's Elementary School in Charlevoix for a workshop and a performance at the Charlevoix Elementary. Song of the Lakes is spending March 19 in the service of the arts council.

They will be performing to both the Bellaire and Mancelona elementary schools prior to the evening civic center public performance. The final event of the series is an April date with the Guaillaird Quartet at Boyne City Elementary School.

Pre-sale tickets to Song of the Lakes are available at the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce and the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey. They will also be available at the door.

Farmers attend state seminar

Farmland preservation and a host of other issues were discussed when about 400 Michigan farmers expressed their agricultural concerns to legislators during Michigan Farm Bureau's annual Lansing Legislative Seminar hosted Feb. 9 in Lansing.

Farmers from across the state, representing Michigan's diverse agricultural industry, attended the annual pairing of farmers and legislators.

Charlevoix County Farm Bureau participants included Tim Machett, James Hisey, Ardeth Wieland and Tom Wieland.

Three sessions served as educational and discussion forums for Farm Bureau members before meeting legislators during a late afternoon reception.

The Right-To-Farm Act's sec. 4, which allows township zoning to supersede the act, continued to be of great concern for many farming operations, particularly livestock.

Farmland preservation was also a hot topic, as farmers explored the possible solutions to Michigan's declining farmland. A presentation was offered by the new farmland preservation director Jim Fuerstenau on agricultural security areas, which are blocks of land set aside for farmland.

Farmers continued to push for further funding of Project GREEEN, which is an effort to boost the state's economy by expanding Michigan's plant-based agriculture and processing systems through research and educational programs while protecting and preserving the quality of the environment and the safety of the food supply.

Michigan Farm Bureau is the state's largest general farm organization, with 169,202 member families.

RE/MAX real estate company announces top sellers in Charlevoix

Realtors with RE/MAX of Charlevoix were recently honored by the RE/MAX Real Estate System for outstanding sales and service in 1998. They received their awards at the RE/MAX of Michigan 20th Annual Regional Conference held February 4-6, 1999 at the Grand Traverse Resort in Traverse City.

Joseph Vogelheim was inducted into the RE/MAX International Hall of Fame. From January through December, 25 individuals among the 829 RE/MAX of Michigan membership were inducted into the RE/MAX Hall of Fame in 1998. The award is earned by members who, during their careers with RE/MAX have helped at least 350 families buy or sell homes.

Joseph Vogelheim, Kevin Heard, Stephen Andreae, Gregory Bryan, Judy Petkewicz and David Campbell were honored with the 100% Club Award. Among the 829 RE/MAX of Michigan members, 212 individuals qualified for the RE/MAX 100% Club in 1998, which is based on sales production for the year. Each of those inducted assisted 68 to 105 families with their real estate needs, far above the industry average.

Sandra Sheridan was awarded Executive Club honors for assisting 31 to 67 families with their real estate needs in 1998.

"We recognized 620 award winners during our Regional Conference," said Elda Helm-O'Brien, Regional Director. "This represents 75 percent of our entire membership and an 11.1 percent increase in award winners compared to the previous year."

"The number of award winners from one office is a testament to the hard work of everyone on the RE/MAX of Charlevoix team," said Helm-O'Brien. "RE/MAX of Charlevoix is a large part of the success that the RE/MAX real estate network enjoys in Michigan. I am proud of them as an office and as individual associates," she added.

French winemakers visit northern Michigan inn

Three wine makers, two from Provence and one from Chablis, are converging on this tiny hamlet for two special wine events. On Friday, March 5 Jean Paul Versino, Domaine Bois de Boursan, Chateauneuf-du-Pape, and Bernard Latour, Domaine de l'Espigouette, Violes, will host a six course, six-wine dinner at the Rowe Inn. On Sunday, April 11, Jean Francois Seguinot, Chablis Premier Cru, Maligny, will be meeting and greeting the public at a buffet wine brunch at the same restaurant.

"We are honored and excited that three of France's best vigneron's would come so far just for us," said Wes Westhoven, proprietor of the Rowe Inn. "I am personally acquainted with all three, and in addition to making great wine, they possess the charm that is so characteristic of the French. Chef Kathy Ruis has created two fabulous menus for the two events. After all, it is for the French men and they, of course, are very particular about their food."

The Rowe Inn is noted for their wine cellar, which is probably the most extensive in the state. Westhoven travels to both California and France each year on buying trips and has been collecting the Inn's cellar wines for 27 years.

Charlevoix wrestling program is safe for the near future

By Jamie MacMillan

Head wrestling coach Joe Johnston (on right, kneeling) and assistant coach Chris MacCallum (standing), watch as members of the Charlevoix wrestling team cheer on a teammate during a recent bout at Petoskey. While the team won few matches this year, 15 student-athletes came out for the team and the sport's future in Charlevoix no longer is in jeopardy. (Photo courtesy of Joe Johnston)

Another wrestling season has been completed and while the school's win-loss record reflects a losing season, the sport earned a huge win for its future.

Unlike last year, the program won't have to grapple with school officials regarding its future. At this time last year, the sport was the subject of school board discussion regarding whether or not it was logical to continue offering the sport to budding wrestlers.

Participation in the sport had dwindled over the years from a complete squad to only four wrestlers at the conclusion of the 1997-98 season. Schools officials could have axed the program from its athletic budget, but, at the suggestion of athletic director Keith Haske, instead gave the sport one more chance at survival depending on whether or not it could fill 70 percent of the 14 weight classes wrestled during a meet.

The season started with 15 wrestlers on the team, led for the second year by coach Joe Johnston. Johnston noted that four students left the team during the year, but that he was able to fill out 11 of the 14 weight classes during most of the season. He did say that at times this season he only filled eight spots on his roster due to injuries and timing conflicts with other extracurricular activities.

Putting that into perspective, Johnston pointed out that the neighboring program in Mancelona began the year with 32 wrestlers only to see the number fall to 12 students by the end of the year.

A conversation with Haske revealed that no plans are in the works to discuss the program's future and that this winter reestablished a place for wrestling in the Charlevoix athletic scene.

"It's unrealistic to expect him (Johnston) to fill out a full team," Haske said. "I think our numbers will only improve as we go along. Unless things totally fall apart, I don't see anymore discussion on the subject."

Wrestling at Charlevoix can be judged in comparison to other schools. Some schools on the Rayders' schedule, such as Petoskey and Rogers City, are stacked three-deep at each weight class and offer the sport on the junior varsity level.

Most schools on the team's slate struggled, like Charlevoix, to fill out a complete roster. Johnston said that, on average, his team earned as many points via forfeits as their opposition did.

"We had enough guys that we could beat any team we faced," Johnston said. "What hurt us was that most of their guys had so much more experience."

Most of Johnston's crew were freshmen or underclassmen wrestling on the varsity level for the first time. His only seasoned wrestler was James Pop, who compiled a 34-8 record and advanced into regional play for a second consecutive season.

Of the crew that will return to the mats next year, Johnston said he has a good nucleus to build around with the trio of Ryan Novotny, 125 pounds, Jerry Zeitler, 145, and Chris Loper, 189. Novotny is a sophomore and Loper and Zeitler are freshmen. The trio had a combined record of 62-63 in their matches this season.

"Loper lost his first 10 matches, but the last half of the season he improved greatly," Johnston said of the freshman who ended the season with a 19-21 record. "We're all very positive about next season."

While the pressure may be off from the school's administration to improve the sport's numbers, Johnston said work remains in terms of making sure the program remains on solid ground.

"I feel like I'm still stating my case," he said.

"I'm keeping the pressure on myself until the numbers are there every day and we have a full roster and a JV team."

Rayders lose two consecutive games for first time this year

For the first time this season, the Charlevoix Rayders lost consecutive games.

The club ventured on the road last week and came up short in games against Cheboygan, 88-76, and St. Ignace, 72-64.

"I'm disappointed with the losses, but not discouraged with the way we played," coach Keith Haske said. "Those are two very good teams and they nipped us in the end."

In Cheboygan, Jim Kanine paced the club with 15 points, Matt Dennis added 14 and Adam Wood chipped in with 12. Wood paced the club against St. Ignace with 23 points. Matt McClellan scored 13 and Kanine added 10. With the losses, Charlevoix's record fell to 13-5.

The Chiefs and the Saints have a combined record of 27-8 and St. Ignace has now reeled off seven straight wins. The loss to St. Ignace was the second time in as many weeks that the Rayders lost to an opponent whom they had defeated earlier in the season. A similar fate befell Charlevoix in a loss at Elk Rapids two weeks ago.

The Charlevoix team received another dose of bad news last week when Elk Rapids topped Kalkaska, 59-53, to clinch the Lake Michigan Conference Championship. With an Elks' loss, the Rayders could have shared the title with wins this week over conference foes East Jordan and Harbor Springs. Despite having the conference title out of reach, Haske said there's plenty of motivation for his team in their week of regular season action.

"The kids want to win every game they play and we need to get ready for the district," Haske said. "We need to get better defensively and stop making mistakes in our switching coming off of screens. If we tighten up defensively, then we'll be fine."

In junior varsity action, the JV Rayders split their games last week. They won at Cheboygan, 72-69, behind Scott Parrish's 20 points. Their momentum was stopped against St. Ignace in a 71-70 loss. Ben Coen scored 18 points and Scott Parrish added 17 for the JV Rayders who are now 12-6.

The teams conclude their regular season with a home game Friday, March 5 against Harbor Springs. The JV game tips off at 6 p.m.

CUSSA racers finish season

Central USSA Region Three concluded their regular race season with a championship event last weekend at Boyne Mountain.

In Sunday's Giant Slalom event, Charlevoix's Troy Smith took first place overall, while his younger brother, York Smith, finished first in his age class and ninth overall.

Taylor Fisher finished 45th and Chad Johnson 49th in the event. Lexi Wilson finished 21st overall in GS.

At Saturday's slalom races, Charlevoix's Tiffany Fisher took 10th place overall. Lexi Wilson finished 13th overall and seventh in her age class. In the boys' slalom, York Smith took 20th, Roscoe Serrels, 21st, Kelsey Barnard, 56th, Taylor Fisher, 63rd, and Chad Johnson, 64th. York, Roscoe, Kelsey and Lexi will proceed to the Central USSA age class championships in Marquette this week.

David and Goliath: charter school ski team beats bigger schools

By Jamie MacMillan

If you can't join 'em, beat 'em

After the charter school attempted to share a ski team with other public schools and were turned down, they formed their own small team and beat most of the competition. Teammates are (from left) Craig Welscott, York Smith, Kelsey Barnard, Brad Hice and Brad Long. The quintet finished second in last month's Little Brown Jug Race.

When their season began, the quintet of skiers on the Northwest Academy Middle School ski team had an identity crisis.

Arriving at meets, no one knew who they were and joked when seeing the school's initials, NWA, on the scoresheet that a rap group was on its way.

"We were kind of camouflaged and nobody knew who we were," eighth grader Brad Long said. "People were asking 'What school is that?' and when they realized we were good it was 'Oh yeah, the charter school.'"

People know who they are now, after the team wrapped up its season with a solid second place finish in the annual Little Brown Jug Race. The Little Brown Jug Race traditionally marks the end of the middle school ski season and the giant slalom event was raced last month at Nub's Nob. En route to the second place team finish, the local charter school placed three skiers in the individual top-10, including York Smith, a seventh-grader, who skied to a first place finish in the individual standings.

Also for Northwest Academy was Kelsey Barnard, fifth, Long, ninth, Brad Hice, 46th, and Craig Welscott, 51st.

Hice, Welscott and Long are eighth graders and Barnard is in sixth grade. His mother, Sue Barnard, handles the team's management duties.

Petoskey topped the eight-team field with 19 points. Northwest Academy finished second with 61 points and Boyne City took third place with 68 points. They were followed by Harbor Springs, 82; East Jordan, 101; and Charlevoix, 113.

"Petoskey has more kids on their ski team than we do in our school," Barnard said. "We aimed for second place, and we got it."

Skiing is the only team sport available at the charter school, and the entire student body celebrated their classmates' achievement with cake and a celebration party the following day.

The skiers on the team said they're proud of the way they skied and happy to shine the spotlight on their school.

"This definitely has had a positive influence," Welscott said. "More people are interested and asking us questions about our school."

District tournament starts Monday

Rayders take on Elks in first game of tournament

By Jamie MacMillan

March Madness will descend upon Charlevoix as the Rayders host next week's district tournament.

The tournament will open with a big bang as the co-favorites Charlevoix and Elk Rapids will battle in the opening game of the tournament at 6 p.m. Monday, March 8.

Mancelona will square off with Harbor Springs in the second game Monday night. Mancelona is the only non-Lake Michigan Conference team in the field.

Boyne City drew a first round bye and awaits the Charlevoix-Elk Rapids winner for a semifinal game at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 10. East Jordan will play the winner of the Harbor-Mancelona contest in the opener of next Wednesday's doubleheader at 6 p.m.

The championship game will be at 7 p.m. Friday, March 12. All games will be played at the Charlevoix High School Gymnasium.

The tournament pairings were determined during a blind draw at the high school Monday afternoon with coaches and athletic directors from all schools present.

Heading into the regular season's final week, Charlevoix and Elk Rapids are the only squads in this district field with winning records.

The Rayders stand at 13-5 while the Elks are 18-1. The remainder of the field has a combined record of 26-45 with only Boyne City close to a winning record at 9-9.

Charlevoix and Elk Rapids split their two meetings this year with each club securing a win on their home floor. The Rayders used a 19-9 first quarter run to overwhelm the Elks, 69-54, in January. The Elks bounced back on their home floor last month with a 73-68 win, outscoring the Rayders 30-11 from the free throw line.

The Elks were able to parlay that win into an outright conference title with an 11-1 record. With two league games remaining, the Rayders are 8-2 in conference play and have secured second place.

after the draw that his club knew they would have to battle the Elks to win the district title and it means little that this game will begin the tournament. He said the game might be better played by both teams early in the tournament since both teams will enter the game fresh.

"Our kids are looking forward to this," Haske said. "They can't wait to go after the Elks and it won't matter to them when the game is played."

School facility forum is Tuesday, March 9

Tom Kern, director of the National Cherry Festival, will moderate a forum to get public input about the Charlevoix Public Schools. The forum will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 9 in the high school study hall.

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is hosting the forum along with the Charlevoix Board of Education. They are encouraging area residents, area businesses and parents to voice their suggestions and ideas regarding the district needs for building facilities.

Challenges facing the district include: overcrowding at the elementary school, an aging middle school built in 1927 and an outdated high school.

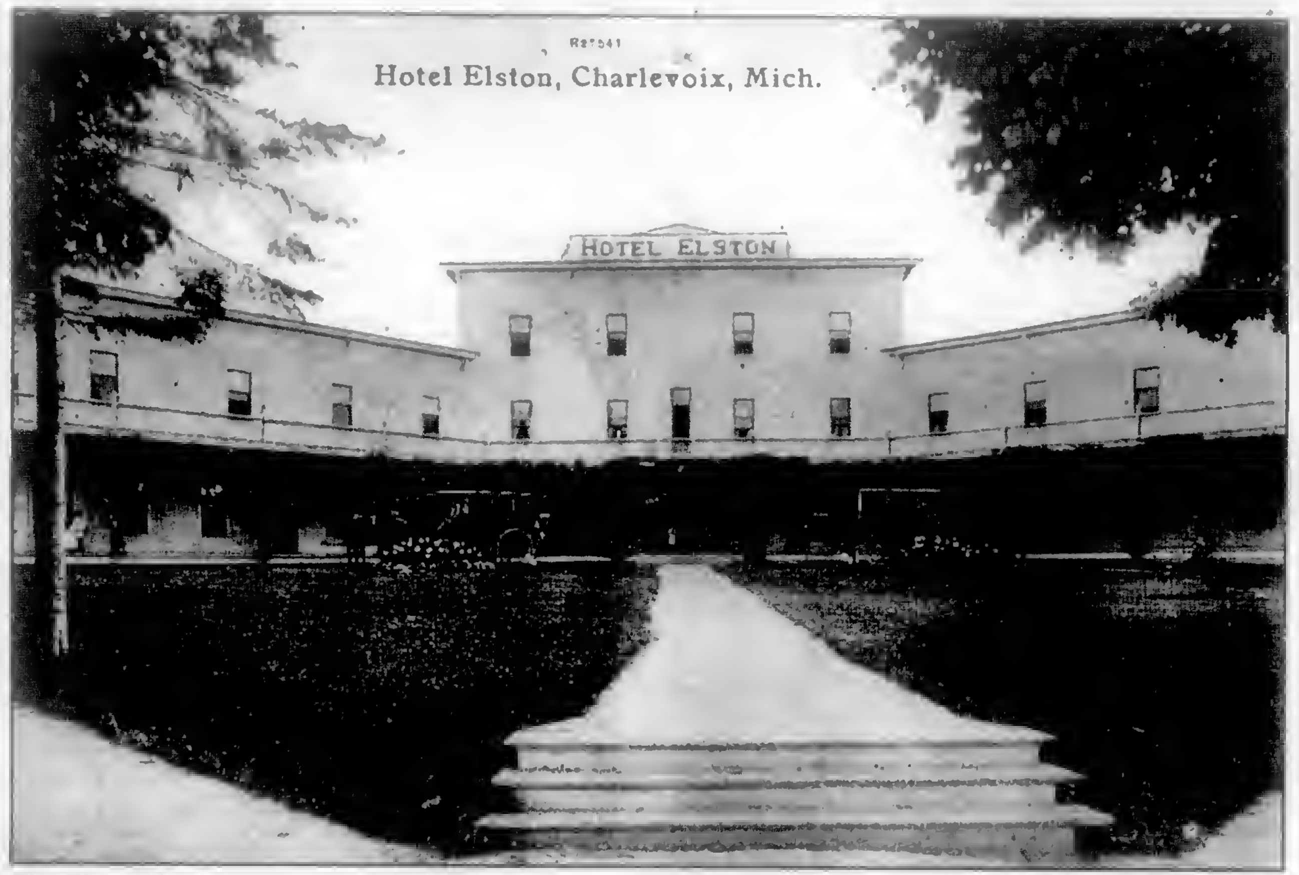
SCRAPBOOK

Hotel fire could have killed guests if not for a smart dog



The Elston Hotel, as shown here on a postcard, sat prominently in downtown Charlevoix before the fire consumed it. The hotel was located where Oleson's shopping center now stands. (Photo courtesy of Charlevoix Historical Society)

The following story was submitted by Cynthia Postmus, taken from news stories in the Charlevoix Courier. It is reprinted in its entirety, exactly as it ran originally.

(Charlevoix Courier, Wednesday, March 31, 1915)

HOTEL ELSTON BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE EARLY TUESDAY MORNING

Dining Room, Kitchen and Laundry almost a Total Loss, While entire Three Floors of Main Part of Building is Badly Damaged... Inmates Aroused From Slumber by Intelligent dog.

One of the most disastrous fires that has ever happened in this city occurred Tuesday morning, when the Hotel Elston was nearly destroyed.

The fire started in the basement, either from an overheated fireplace or from the pipe running from the heating plant to the chimney. About 3 o'clock Mrs. C.E. Noble was awakened by the barking of "Shep," a Collie dog owned by Robert Bonthron, who was in the sleeping room occupied by herself and daughter, Edna.

The dog was a pet of everyone about the hotel and on the night previous had entered her room as she was about to retire for the night. An attempt was made to get him to leave the room, but rather than to force him out, he was allowed to remain there during the night. It was due to the almost human intelligence of the animal that the lives of all in the hotel were saved. When the smoke became thick in the room he began to bark and repeatedly jumped upon the bed until he awoke Mrs. Noble, who gave the alarm of the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bonthron, who occupied a room across the hall, were the first to awake after the alarm had been given. Mr. Bonthron rushed to the second floor and succeeded in arousing everyone. Many were bewildered and half suffocated by the smoke, but all succeeded in reaching the outer air before being overcome.

When first discovered the fire was under the dining room and in the side walls running to the second floor. In a few minutes, the interior of the dining room was a mass of flames, which quickly spread to the kitchen and laundry. The fire department responded and within a few minutes four streams of water were being thrown on the burning structure. Owing to the fire being mostly within the walls of the building, it was very difficult to check it. As soon as it was overcome in one place it broke out in another, until the entire dining room, kitchen and laundry were on fire.

The building is a large, roomy one, constructed entirely of wood, and, with the wind blowing, the flames steadily worked their way through the entire west end of the building and into the second and third floors of the main part of the building. The roof of the kitchen and dining room fell in shortly before 7 o'clock. Every effort was then made to keep the fire from spreading to the east and north wings. Lines of hose were carried into the building on the second and third floors and this part of the structure literally flooded with water. Holes were cut through the flooring of the lobby in several places and the fire which had made its way underneath was put out.

Shortly after eight o'clock the flames were gotten under control. The entire west end of the hotel is a total loss and the first, second and third floors of the main part of the building badly gutted, the north and east wings were not injured with the exception of from smoke.

The sleeping rooms of the servants — which were over the dining room and kitchen — were burned, together with all the furnishings. Practically all succeeded in getting out their personal belongings, many escaping from the windows upon the roof of the annex, where they jumped to the ground.

The Hotel Elston was one of the best-equipped hotels in Northern Michigan. The furniture was almost new and the kitchen and laundry equipment was modern and costly. Fire destroyed all the machinery and laundry equipment and hundreds of dollars invested in dishes, linen, etc., are ruined. In the lobby the furniture and piano were taken out, but on the second and third floors everything is drenched by water and ruined by smoke and flames.

An estimate of the damage would be hard to make because of the smoke having reached practically every room in the house, and in many places the water reached the ground floor rooms.

The hotel was valued at $45,000 and insured for $30,000. Whether it will be rebuilt is not known at present.

Keep yourself protected at all times by a liberal fire insurance policy. All insurance on this fire was carried by Myrtie Young and Son, who will give you the same protection. Adv.13tl

Inspiration lives on after death of friend

By Laurie Lounsbury

Judy Edger

If Judy Edger's life was measured in terms of the inspiration she's given, then it would be deemed a long life. But to her many friends and family, Edger's life was far too short. She died Tuesday, March 2 after a battle with cancer.

The most lasting memory Edger leaves behind was her unflagging optimism in the face of a killer disease. After being diagnosed with breast cancer nine years ago, Edger became a role model for other women with the disease and crusader in the fight against breast cancer.

"She was a total inspiration to me," said Katherine Campbell, a close friend of Judy's. "She was so positive, and a role model for anyone who's had an illness or been in any difficult circumstance. At cancer support meetings, she was an inspiration to everyone. I'm really going to miss her."

In an interview with Edger nearly one year ago, she said, "The trick is to hang in there and be positive and hope they make strides with research in time."

For the courageous woman, the cure didn't come in time, but she

Celebrating the key victory

Charlevoix Rayders secured an important win with their victory over Elk Rapids in the first game of the district play-offs. They will play Boyne City Wednesday in the next round of elimination games. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

In a match-up between two teams who had their eyes on a deep tournament run, the Charlevoix Rayders outlasted the Elk Rapids Elks, 73-66, in the opening round of class C district play.

Jim Kanine scored six of his team-high 12 points and four other Rayders scored at least two points in a decisive fourth quarter run that pushed the Rayders past the Elks in the game's closing minutes.

While only a first round game, the contest had all the makings of a title match and an anxious, standing room only crowd filled the Charlevoix gymnasium 30 minutes before tip-off in anticipation of the night's event. The game brought in all sorts of spirited spectators, as perfectly sane people donned painted faces, orange or maroon hair and all sorts of wacky hats and masks. Student sections taunted each other with chants during pregame warm-ups, and a college scout or two was also spotted among the throng.

"I was taking it in, trying to enjoy it," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "I told the kids to soak it all in and have a great time."

A blind draw placed arguably the two top class C teams in northern Michigan in an opening round game, providing the perfect kick-off to March Madness.

Legendary Charlevoix coach dies

Don Carey

Friday evening had all the look of a celebration.

It was the final home basketball game and a vocal, standing room only crowd filled the local gymnasium to cheer on the 14-5 Rayders and bid adieu to nine seniors who had excited and thrilled them all season long.

The festive mood quickly turned to sadness when, just before the national anthem was performed, public address announcer Ken Boss passed along the news of the death of long-time Charlevoix football and basketball coach Don Carey.

A moment of silence was observed to honor the fallen coach prior to tip-off, but the real tribute came once the game started.

Exhibiting all the hallmarks of some of Carey's classic teams, the Rayders showcased precise skill, dove for loose balls, played hard-nosed defense and basically outworked their foe from Harbor Springs en route to a 96-62 victory.

Coach Carey's spirit was everywhere in the building that night, right down to the adult crowd who masked their tears for their coach of a generation ago with throaty cheers for the present day Rayders. From his new perch above, the old coach must have been smiling.

Coach remembered for bringing out the best in players

After a quiet, yet courageous battle against cancer, Carey passed away Friday at the age of 75.

Former players and assistant coaches called his passing the end of an era.

"He was the last of the long-time coaches," Pat Klooster said. "He is one of those persons that you build and name things after."

Born in 1924, Carey graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1943, promptly entered the Navy and witnessed World War II aboard the U.S.S. Cleveland.

After the war, he went on to Alma College where he earned all-conference honors as a quarterback.

He broke into the coaching ranks in Mason County and, while there, married Joan Parsons in 1950. The couple moved back to northern Michigan in 1954 when Carey took a job at East Jordan Schools. In 1955, he returned to Charlevoix to teach U.S. History and coach both the varsity football and basketball teams.

Inspired by the local coaching shadows of Ray Kipke, Del Terrill and Stewart "Irish" Coleman, Carey remained on the job for 30 years.

"He followed a long line of coaching icons," his son Tim Carey said. "I'll always consider him as one of those four."

Known as "Smoky" during his playing days because of quickness, Carey had become "The Dean" by the time he stepped away from the gridiron in 1985.

He developed a system predicated on hard work and discipline, but his greatest coaching attribute may have been his ability to adjust to whatever talent pool he had in a given year.

"He was excellent at knowing how to use each athlete to create the best mix for the team," said Roger Gowell, who was an assistant to Carey and later replaced him as football head coach. "I learned everything I know about the game from him."

Carey coached both the varsity football and basketball teams at Charlevoix until a new school rule prohibiting anyone from being the head coach of two programs went into effect in 1970.

His hardwood teams won a handful of district titles in the 1960s, but when he had to make a choice, he stuck with football.

Over 30 seasons, he compiled a 155-70-11 record and won numerous Northern Michigan and Michigan-Huron Shores conference titles. His signature teams were the 1959 squad, which not only went undefeated, but went without any opponents scoring against them during the season, and the 1977 squad, which went 9-0 and ended the season as the top-ranked class C team in the state. The 1977 squad was the last Rayder football team to go through a season without a loss. In 1985, he was inducted into the Michigan High School Football Coaches Hall of Fame.

Klooster, a defensive back on the '77 team, said Carey had a presence about him that made you hang on every one of his words.

"When he walked in the gym, you didn't do anything else but listen to him," he said. "If someone was dribbling the ball, he would just raise his voice above it and pretty soon the dribbling would stop."

Klooster learned the hard way, though, that when Coach Carey asked you a question, it was probably rhetorical.

It was Klooster's freshman season, and after a grueling workout in the hot August sun, some of the players sought refuge under the shade of nearby trees. Seeing his players taking a break, Carey noted how hot it was and asked if any of them wanted to call it day and go inside.

Only Klooster raised his hand, and Carey promptly sent the freshman home.

"Everyone else knew enough not to raise their hands. I was set up and it was a lonely run back to the locker room," Klooster recalled. "He was a good coach, and we had a lot of fun times."

Even when not blessed with superior talent, Carey's teams remained in the thick for league and district honors, because to play on one his teams meant out-working and out-preparing the competition.

"He expected the best you could do and then another 10 percent," said his son, who quarterbacked his dad's teams in the early 1970s. "He was a stickler for details and was always thinking about football. Even after he stopped coaching, he was always scribbling on index cards new offensive and defensive schemes."

Away from the sport, he helped run Carey and Sons House Painting, a business started by his grandfather in 1903 that is still in existence today. By all accounts, he was a passionate, generous and kind-hearted man who shied away from the limelight, preferring to read books about football or World War II. His son said that his father's generosity will be his lasting image.

"He was a very caring, giving person. If you needed a dime, he would give you the last one he had in his pocket. His door was always open."

didn't squander her last year of life worrying or feeling sorry for herself.

"She never gave up, never lost hope, right up to the very end," Campbell said.

Edger became a well-known, smiling face in northern Michigan when she and her husband, Terry, moved to Charlevoix in 1974 to start a radio station, WVOY. Edger was extremely successful as an advertising salesperson for the radio station. She parlayed her strong sales ability into real estate and most recently worked with Frisbey Better Homes and Gardens of Charlevoix.

"She was a great co-worker and teammate," said Mark Knapp, office manager of Frisbey Better Homes and Gardens. "She loved her work. She had so many goals and she probably accomplished almost everything she set out to do. She let nothing stand in her way."

Over 200 friends and family members convened at the Charlevoix Methodist Church for Edger's memorial service last Sunday.

"She did everything with such zeal," said Ann Hufford, a sorority sister of Edger's. "She never took no for an answer."

Traveling was one of Edger's favorite past times. Whether it was a trip to England or a trip across town for dinner, Edger made the most of it.

"She was so much fun wherever we traveled, and so much fun to be around," Hufford said.

Edger also leaves the community with words to live by, which she said a year ago in an interview about her own battle with cancer.

"Life is a lot sweeter. I don't take it for granted anymore."

Anyone who would like to make a memorial gift in honor of Judy Edger may contribute to the Judy Edger Breast Cancer Memorial Fund, which is set up at Charlevoix State Bank on State Street.

Power situation improves on Beaver Island after shaky weekend

By Laurie Lounsbury

When the largest of four generators that has been providing power to Beaver Island residents broke down Saturday morning, island residents found themselves taking turns for electricity.

After a day of rolling power outages, it was a huge relief to islanders to see the Emerald Isle cruise into St. James Harbor Sunday evening with a one megawatt back-up generator.

The Emerald Isle was pressed into service at least one month ahead of schedule to pick up the generator in Charlevoix. The Coast Guard Cutter Acacia broke ice on Lake Michigan from Charlevoix to St. James Harbor on Beaver Island. The cutter then escorted the Emerald Isle to Charlevoix and back to Beaver Island with its precious cargo.

"There was three feet of ice in St. James Harbor, so we definitely needed the Acacia," said Lynn DeGrow, president of the Beaver Island Boat Company.

The arrival of the generator provides island residents with some extra security while they wait for their regular power source, a 27-mile long cable, to be repaired.

"The oil-fired generator is a back-up to the back-up system," said Dave Guzniczak, communications director for Great Lakes Energy.

The back-up generators at the island's power plant have been providing electricity to island residents since Friday, Feb. 26, when a fault in the electrical cable that runs from the mainland to the island knocked out the power supply. Since then, Great Lakes Energy and Wolverine Power Supply have been struggling to keep the islanders sufficiently powered.

When the largest generator broke early Saturday morning, Wolverine Power flew workers to the island to make necessary repairs. To protect the other generators from being overloaded, utility officials scheduled planned, rolling power outages throughout the day. The generators are usually only used in the summer time, when demand for power is at its peak. Even then, the primary source of power is the cable that runs beneath Lake Michigan. It's not something the island residents can do without for an extended period of time. Unfortunately, it looks like repairs to the cable might take place later rather than sooner.

"The cable tester found the fault about four miles offshore from Sturgeon Bay Point," Guzniczak said. "It's not where we hoped it would be."

Had the fault been close to either the mainland shoreline or the Beaver Island shoreline, Wolverine Power Supply workers might have been able to fix it promptly. With the fault so far into Lake Michigan, the power company may have to wait to make repairs until spring, when the ice is completely off the lake.

The back-up generator, which was hauled by truck from Missouri to Charlevoix, is currently sitting next to the plant on Beaver Island.

Wolverine Power Supply is the power provider for Great Lakes Energy.

Landfill expansion denial is appealed to state

By Jamie MacMillan

Almost a year after county planners denied its request to expand, officials at Cedar Ridge landfill have appealed the decision to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ).

The state department has until June 18, 1999 to rule on the matter. They will hear public input on the subject during a public hearing at 7:00 p.m. Monday, March 29 at the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus Hall at 15144 Bells Bay Road.

A hefty contingent from Water Air Team Charlevoix (WATCH), an environmental watchdog group, is expected to attend the hearing to voice their opposition to the landfill's expansion.

"We're strongly opposed to any more expansion," said WATCH official Jerry Puhl. "The reason being is that it's too close to Lake Charlevoix and closer still to Nowland Lake. If anything happens to the landfill's liner whatever leaks will eventually be in Lake Charlevoix."

Cedar Ridge officials had expected to appeal the decision immediately after planners nixed the idea, but the company's merger with USA Waste stalled the process.

Cedar Ridge was previously owned by Waste Management, but the company was absorbed by the larger USA Waste last summer. The new company is still called Waste Management, but a new management hierarchy was put in place. New company officials had the task of assessing all the landfills now under its control and deciding which ones would fold and which ones would remain open.

"They had to make a decision on each of the 500-600 landfills, and that slowed the process to a crawl," Dave Barron, Cedar Ridge site manager, said.

The company officially appealed to the DEQ on Feb. 19 and have asked the department to approve a construction permit for an 11.5-acre horizontal expansion and a two-acre vertical expansion of the facility. Such an expansion would increase the landfill's capacity by an additional five years.

According to Barron, without an expansion the landfill would reach its capacity early in the year 2000.

Last April, the Charlevoix County Planning Commission denied the

OPINIONS

A rose is a thorn when its name is in the newspaper

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

For all those people who never, ever want to see their names in the newspaper, I have a bit of advice:

Never do anything great, good or wonderful.

And never do anything wrong, immoral or illegal.

It's that simple.

Occasionally, an extremely modest, upstanding citizen will ask to have their name kept out of the paper. Even though their good deeds might make an interesting story, we will grudgingly honor their request. After all, they're the good guys.

The flip side is another matter.

In the last few months, I've had a rash of people asking me to keep their names out of the paper.

They don't want the fact that they've applied for a marriage license printed in the paper.

This is a matter of public record, and it's been the policy of the Courier to print that information every week.

People have asked me to bend that policy, but I don't really want to. Policies are kind of like uncooked spaghetti -- they don't bend well, they just break. And then you're left with nothing but a mess on the kitchen floor.

My first question to these people is always, 'Why don't you want your marriage license listed in the paper?'

Marriages are usually happy occasions, a cause for celebration, and a reason to encourage people to send nice gifts.

One possible reason for not wanting your marriage license listed in the paper is elopement. But it's not hard to get that deed done before it's announced in a weekly paper. As a weekly, we're not exactly on the cutting edge of fast-breaking news.

The truth is, elopers are almost never the ones who want to keep their names out of the paper. Elopers are usually quite clever. They leave town, then elope in a different city and county. We have no record of the happy occasion in Charlevoix County.

The people who usually want their name kept out of the paper have less than scrupulous reasons for wanting to remain unknown.

"Our landlord thinks we're already married, and he might get mad and kick us out if he finds out we've been lying," was one excuse.

So you lied to your landlord. This is the newspaper's problem?

"I'm pregnant and my insurance won't cover it if I'm married. My benefits only apply to a single woman below a certain income level."

Hey, if you want to commit insurance fraud, that's your business. Don't drag the newspaper into it.

"My family gets the Courier in Florida and we don't want them to find out in the newspaper that we got married. We want it to be a surprise in June."

OK, then give them a call and tell them you're getting married BEFORE it's announced in the paper. Or wait until June to get married.

"My estranged wife will be very disgruntled to learn I've already lined up my next wife."

Man, you're really pushing your luck, buddy.

I'm amazed at the righteous indignation of these people when I won't honor their request to keep their names out of the paper. Their response is always the same: "Getting married is our business and nobody else's. Why do you have to make it public information?"

Getting married might be their business, but public news and information is our business — the newspaper business. If we start leaving news out of the paper just because someone requested it, what would be left?

A few ads for used cars and some birth announcements.

Without exactly saying it, these Keep Me Out Of The Paper people give me a look that says,

"How dare you be such a curmudgeonly stickler for policy? How dare you not help me in my desire to commit a lie of omission?"

If these about-to-be betrothed people don't want it known in Charlevoix that they're getting married, I suggest they get married in a different county, or better yet, in a different state or country. Las Vegas, Nevada or Nogales, Mexico come to mind. I don't think a beat reporter in Vegas is going to care much about a couple from Charlevoix who got married in the Church of Double Box Cars. In Mexico, they're too hot and thirsty to care about a gringo wedding.

Another group of people who want to keep their names out of the paper are those who were busted for driving while intoxicated. I don't blame them for wanting to keep their names out of the paper, but again, it's our policy to publish court news, and we can't start selectively putting some people's names in and keeping others out.

The very people who don't want their names in the paper are the same ones who voraciously gobble up the court news in the paper as soon as they get their hands on a copy. They love to see who's been naughty and who's been nice.

Which brings me back to the beginning. If you don't want to see your name in the paper, don't break the law.

Or just don't read the court news.

Wharfside building shouldn't be in master plan for park

Dear Laurie,

Like many people I have spoken with, I am in agreement with removing the Wharfside building. First, the building is in no way an historical building, nor does it have any architectural history or significance. I also believe the three retailers that are currently in the building would have increased traffic if they were alongside other retailers in our community. There are numerous vacant stores throughout our downtown area. Also, the DDA (Downtown Development Authority) and chamber (of commerce) goal with the renovations to Bridge Park is to develop retail business on the 200 block facing Round Lake.

Most important for our community is to have long-term vision as to what the park should ultimately encompass. I personally don't think that having one retail store in the center of the park is appropriate. We have the greatest natural harbor in the Great Lakes, and without a doubt, the worst facilities. We are a boating community, without which, the vast majority of us would not be here, including the local merchants. I have spoken with several members of the Waterway Commission and I believe funds could be obtained to improve our slips as well as our facilities. This money has been paid to the state by way of a fuel tax by boaters. Hopefully, we can receive a state grant to purchase the Wharfside.

Currently, the city has over $300,000 earmarked for East Park improvements. Combined with these various government funds, I think we could also raise money from the private sector for a worthwhile cause that benefits everyone in the community. To do this, we must have a master plan, even if this plan takes three or four phases over a number of years to complete. We must have a final goal in order to not waste resources, make mistakes and not end up with as nice a park as could have been possible.

I don't believe our city fathers should ever defer their efforts toward making our community the best it can be because of a few negative comments. There are always those people who never want to see anything change no matter what it is. Had they done so in the past, today we would not have a beautiful, renovated Bridge Park. At all levels of politics, it is typically the vocal minority controlling the silent majority. Rarely do we call or write when a restaurant, car dealership or politician has done something of which we approve. I have spoken with many people who are in favor of removing the Wharfside and renovating our park and our marina facilities to make it as beautiful as our natural resources.

Sincerely,
John Winn

Expansion appealed to State department company's request for a 12-acre expansion to the southwest of its current 40-acre facility in Eveline Township.

In a 4-3 vote, the commission's stance was that the expansion would encroach too close to Sears Creek as well as violate township zoning ordinances.

The county's siting criteria regarding landfills requires that the trash facilities be more than 2,000 feet away from any running body of water. A 500-foot setback is required for an intermittent body of water.

Sears Creek is 520 feet to the south of the landfill's proposed expansion, and using mapping done in 1989 by the Michigan Resource Inventory System (MIRIS), which designated the creek as a permanent body of water, planners deemed the expansion would violate the criteria.

When appealing the decision to the DEQ, Cedar Ridge officials said they will argue that the map is a mistake and that the creek, which typically dries up in the summer time, is intermittent.

Deborah Johnston, environmental engineer for the company, said they will present evidence from the U.S. Department of the Interior's geological services which portrays the stream as intermittent on two of its three maps of the area.

Puhl, however, said that regardless of what kind of stream it is, the potential for hazardous material to enter that body of water is dangerous.

"Whether it's part time or full time, it's still a stream," he said. "It still can carry materials into Lake Charlevoix."

County planners also said the expansion would violate local zoning. Cedar Ridge is on commercially zoned property with a special use permit to operate a landfill. A state mandate allows landfills in any agricultural district, but Eveline Township doesn't have any such district. The township does have forest/farmland districts, similar to agricultural districts.

"There are no ag-districts in Eveline Township, but if forest/farmland isn't agricultural, then what is?" Johnston said.

Upcoming students will outgrow middle school

Dear Editor:

I'm a sixth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I strongly feel that the upcoming students of this school will quickly outgrow the middle school. When I was in fifth grade at the elementary school we added two portables and an additional first grade class room to hold all the students. By the time the first grade class reaches sixth grade, where will they go to school?

I also feel we, as a community, need to build a bigger middle school or change the grades that attend. For example, instead of sixth, seventh, and eighth grade, we could have seventh and eighth grade only.

School is important to me and I hope that it is to all the Charlevoix residents because we are the future of our community.

Sincerely,
Melissa Grosberg

Charles and Irma Roberts, along with Jerry and Sandy Puhl, are pleased to announce the engagement of their children, Heidi Ermgard Roberts and David Matthew Puhl.

David is a 1990 graduate of Charlevoix High School and a 1995 graduate of Michigan State University. He is employed by Jervis B. Webb in Farmington Hills, Mich.

Heidi is a 1989 graduate of Watertown High School in Watertown, South Dakota and graduated from the University of South Dakota in 1992. She has been teaching first grade in Deerfield, Ill. for the past six years.

The couple plans to be married Oct. 9, 1999 in Charlevoix.

Lactation consultant available at Charlevoix Area Hospital

When Angela Nachazel gave birth to her second child, Jacob, at Charlevoix Area Hospital Jan. 20, she planned to breast feed. A lactation consultant was on hand to observe mother and baby and offer any advice that Angela might have needed:

Breast feeding newborn babies is beneficial to the baby and mother for numerous reasons. The American Academy of Pediatrics have been a staunch advocate of breast feeding as offering the optimal form of nutrition for infants.

But sometimes mothers and babies aren't on the same wavelength when it comes to breast feeding. Baby's position and mother's tension along with other factors may interfere with the natural act of a mother breast feeding her baby. That's where Debbie Kragenbrink helps out.

Kragenbrink is a lactation consultant, contracting her services with Charlevoix Area Hospital. Prior to working in Charlevoix, Kragenbrink was at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey. She is a registered nurse who worked in obstetric fields for 11 years in California, including postpartum patient care, pediatrics and neonatal intensive care.

"The first couple of weeks after birth is an important time for the baby to receive nutrition from the mother, to get all the antibodies," Kragenbrink said. "If it doesn't go well at first, that's when the moms stop. So it's important that moms and babies get off to a good start."

To educate moms about breast feeding, Kragenbrink leads mother and baby support groups before, during and after mothers start breast feeding. She also teaches classes that help with postpartum needs, and one class that deals with back to work issues.

Kragenbrink also helps mothers with the everyday aspects of breast feeding, making sure that a nursing mother's bra is properly fitting, and that they are correctly using a breast pump if needed. Mothers are able to call Kragenbrink after they've been discharged from the hospital if they're having difficulties.

Kragenbrink is on hand to help new mothers with any breast feeding problems and to lead mother and baby support groups. (Photo courtesy of Charlevoix Area Hospital)

Kragenbrink is at Charlevoix Area Hospital Monday through Friday, and can be reached at the hospital's obstetrics department at 547-8575 for more information.

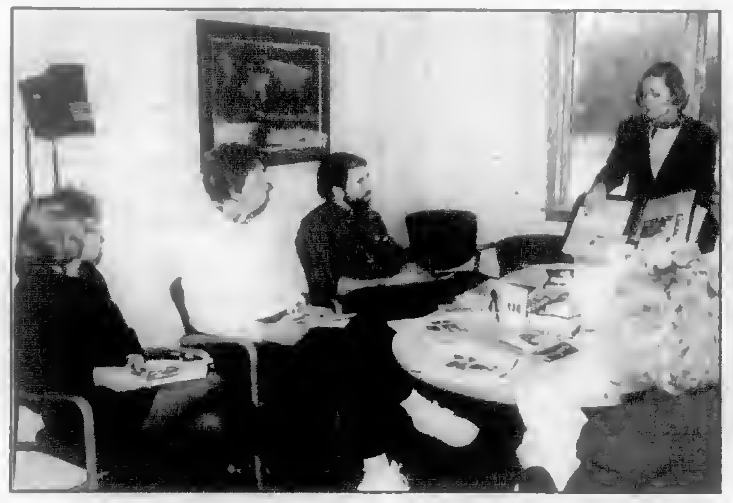
Just what the doctor ordered — a good book to read

Read to Succeed, a program designed to help children stay healthy and form healthy habits through reading, was recently adopted at Pine River Medical Center. Doctors Dennis Joy, James Stewart, Edward Newcomb and Roderic Tinney share the Park Avenue practice.

Kids who are seeing the doctor for a check-up or a "well baby" visit are given a "prescription" by the physician to take a book home from the office. Parents are encouraged to help choose a book and also to sit down with the child and read to them once they are home. Books are distributed to children two months old through age 5 and are free of charge. Children will be given the opportunity to take a different book each time they visit.

"The growth in this program and the willingness of these physician practices to work with us to better the health of the kids in our community has been great. Read to Succeed has been met with enthusiasm and true dedication on the part of office staffs and physicians who believe that reading is one of the keys to better health," said Jean Hayner, Education Specialist for the Community Health Education Center in Petoskey.

For over a year, the program, funded by Northern Michigan Hospital/Burns Clinic Foundation, has provided more than 6,500 books to participating area physician offices.



Jean Hayner (standing, right) of the Community Health Education Center discusses details for the introduction of the Read to Succeed program at Pine River Medical Center in Charlevoix with staff and physicians.

Little gems

"When parents treat a child as if he or she was their equal, they will be unable to convince the child of their authority. A child cannot look up and straight ahead at the same time."

"A young child needs to believe that there are virtually no limits to his parents' capabilities. This 'immature' belief in their omnipotence anchors the child's sense of security, enabling the growth of competence."

— From John Rosemond's Daily Guide to Parenting

Oh boix

A collection of praises, awards and accomplishments of Charlevoix area people.

Marine Cpl. Keith D. Parish, son of Paul K. and Marge K. Parish of Charlevoix, recently participated in a noncombatant evacuation operation with the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU), deployed to Okinawa, Japan.

Parish's unit evacuated Americans from the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, following the commencement of coalition air strikes against Iraq. More than 90 diplomats and American citizens were processed for transportation from Kuwait to a safe haven where they could arrange transportation home.

Parish's unit is an expeditionary intervention force with the ability to rapidly organize for combat operations in virtually any environment. MEUs are composed of more than 2,000 personnel and are divided into an infantry battalion, an aircraft squadron, a support group and a command element. With the combination of these teams, Parish's unit supplies and sustains itself for either quick mission accomplishment or clearing the way for follow-on forces.

The 1994 graduate of Charlevoix High School joined the Marine Corps in Sept. of 1994.

ANSWERING IMPORTANT CONCERNS ABOUT WIRELESS COMMUNICATIONS

A New Perspective... from Wireline to Wireless!

CUT THE CORD...CUT THE COST!

Simplifying Wireless Rate Plans

In this fast paced mobile society, wireless phones make our lives easier. When you're on the go and need to make that business call or touch base with your family, you can always pick up your wireless phone. However, you may have found yourself hesitating to do so because paying for the call was always so complicated and costly.

Good News! Some wireless companies have created new rate plans that help to simplify the charges and even reduce your phone costs. Now you can have one flat rate covering you anytime of the day or night that includes not only local but long distance calls to anywhere in the continental U.S.*

No more wondering what each call will cost—peak, off-peak, local or long distance. Now you can use your phone when you want to, not just when you have to. And, FREE Long Distance* on your wireless phone will often save you $$$ on your overall phone costs at home or at the office.

You can't get this new option everywhere. Actually, there's only one plan like it in Northwest Michigan and it's available only from Cellular One. It's called the FlatRate™. You can choose from six packages with airtime as low as 10¢ a minute.

Now is the time for a new perspective. Make your wireless phone your main phone. You can cut the cord... stop relying on wireline phones... and get the convenience of a wireless phone... and save $$$ at the same time.

Obituaries

Donald G. Carey

Donald G. Carey, 75, of Charlevoix, died Friday, March 5, 1999 at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The funeral was Tuesday, March 9 at the Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Margaret Nattermann officiated and burial will be in Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Mr. Carey was born Jan. 28, 1924 in Charlevoix, the son of Thomas Leo and Marion (Emrey) Carey. He graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1943 and then served in the U.S. Navy as a signalman aboard the U.S.S. Cleveland during World War II. After the war he attended Michigan State University and later graduated from Alma College, where he played basketball and football and was All Conference Quarterback.

Don taught and coached in Mason and East Jordan before returning to Charlevoix in 1955 to teach and coach. He was inducted into the Michigan High School Football Coaches Hall of Fame and retired in 1985.

During the summer months, Don was the third generation in his family to operate Carey and Sons House Painting.

Don was a member of the Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix, was Senior Deacon and a life member of Charlevoix Lodge #282 F & AM, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star Chapter 72, a member of the M.E.A., and a member of the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association.

On May 30, 1950, Don married Joan M. Parsons in Mason and she survives. He is also survived by a son, Tim Carey and his wife, Stephanie, of Charlevoix; two daughters, Jeryl Ann Stanley and her husband, Mark, of Manchester, Conn., and Marjorie Kirinovic and her husband, Tom, of Big Rapids; grandchildren, T.J., Todd, Jeremy, Ryan, Madison, Tyler, Mitch, Grier, Blake and Matt; two brothers, Thomas Carey and his wife, Esther, and William Carey and his wife, Judy; a sister, Marjorie Coleman, all of Charlevoix; and several nieces and nephews.

Memorial contributions may be made to Charlevoix Area Hospital for the C.A.T. scanner, or the Peggy Carey Northway Nursing Scholarship.

Judy Edger

Judy Edger of Charlevoix passed away March 2, 1999, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

A memorial service was held March 7 at the Charlevoix United Methodist Church. The Rev. Dale Ostema led the ceremony.

Judy was born in Buffalo, N.Y., the daughter of Max and Winifred McKee. She graduated from Hastings High School and married Terry Edger, also of Hastings, in 1961. The couple moved to Charlevoix in 1974 when they started the radio station WVOY.

She had a successful career in advertising sales with WKHQ and WMBN radio stations and most recently as a real estate sales associate with Frisbey Better Homes and Gardens of Charlevoix.

In addition to her love of family and her career, she enjoyed sailing and traveling. She was an active member of numerous clubs and associations, including the Charlevoix Yacht Club, a chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority, Zonta Club and several organizations related to the support of breast cancer victims and other women's health issues.

Judy is survived by her husband, Terry; daughter, Holly, of Boulder, Colo.; son, Todd and wife, Mary, and two grandchildren, Lindi and Austin, of Charlevoix; her father, Max McKee, and brother, Tom McKee, both of New Braunfels, Texas. She was preceded in death by her mother, Winifred McKee.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Judy Edger Breast Cancer Memorial Fund, Charlevoix State Bank.

OF BLESSINGS

Beacons of Blessing
By Rev. Stephen Guthrie, Chaplain
Northern Michigan Hospital

At a social gathering last week, I found myself part of a group of cordial strangers, and the light conversation wandered easily through topics of common interest: what sort of winter it has been, trips we'd taken lately, how weary everyone had grown of the impeachment process. Then one person innocently commented that she did not want to be traveling on New Years Eve for fear of the failure of air traffic control computers. From the moment that favorite millennial topic, "Y2K," made its way into the conversation, the mood in the room changed. It seems everyone has a view on how to prepare — or not prepare — for New Year's 2000.

It seems pretty clear that because of the proliferation of computer chips in this technological age, we stand to experience some disruption in our routine around the time that computer clocks roll over from the year 1999 to the year 2000. Whether it will be a minor inconvenience or a major disaster remains to be seen. The conversations I've been in lately too often ignore the question of how to best cope with the impact on the social order of an undetermined number of malfunctioning computers by throwing it in the same hopper with several other seemingly related topics. The result is that in any given conversation on the Y2K issue, we may find ourselves dismissing the effects altogether as a nonproblem, strategizing over how to withstand widespread shortages of goods and services, or fretting over malfunctioning Russian missiles with nuclear warheads. If we are of a survivalist mentality, the conversation may focus on devising a battle plan to protect our stash of food and fuel from hungry neighbors, or if we have embraced the mission of several area churches to use the occasion to display the love of Christ, the conversation might turn to how to prepare in a way that will provide for both ourselves and that hungry neighbor.

Whatever our view of Y2K, there is a critical element of our preparation that I rarely hear discussed: how shall we prepare ourselves spiritually? In the rush to buy generators and canned goods, it is easy to overlook what Scripture tells us about preparing for hard times.

We remember that the gospel never instructed us to build more barns and accumulate wealth, and it cautions us about storing up treasure that thieves could steal or which could spoil in time. Rather, we should anchor ourselves on the promises God has made to provide for the children of His creation. Certainly we should be reasonably prepared, just as we should prepare for any winter in northern Michigan. But it is folly to think that we could ever store up enough gas, guns, or grub to be adequately prepared for any worldly circumstances. Scripture promises us that God is a very present help in time of trouble, and the best investment of our time to prepare for whatever the year 2000 eventually throws at us is to seek first His kingdom and rest on His promise to provide.

The New Testament tells us to "fear not" 43 times, and if we approach New Year's in the right relationship with a loving Father we will prepare in faith, not fear.

Local officer completes D.A.R.E. training

Twenty-seven officers from 26 police and sheriff departments from across Michigan graduated earlier this month from the D.A.R.E. Officer/Instructor Training School conducted by Michigan State University's School of Criminal Justice.

Local D.A.R.E. graduate, Deputy Robert Scholey of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, completed the two-week session that provided 80 hours of required training for officers so they can go into Michigan schools as certified D.A.R.E. officers.

Deputy Robert Scholey

D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) is a police officer-led, semester long series of classroom lessons that teach fifth and sixth grade children how to resist pressure to experiment with drugs and alcohol. More than 100,000 Michigan grade school students benefit from the D.A.R.E. program each year. D.A.R.E. is taught every year to more than 25 million school children in all 50 state and 11 foreign countries.

"D.A.R.E. doesn't just tell students to say no to drugs and alcohol, it teaches them new ways of how to say no," said Candace Curtis, Executive Director of D.A.R.E. Michigan. "D.A.R.E. targets students when they are most vulnerable to tremendous peer pressure, helping them build their self-esteem, manage stress, resist pro-drug media messages, and identify alternatives to drug use.

"Most fifth and sixth graders are more sophisticated about substance abuse than their classroom teachers," Curtis said. "The D.A.R.E. officers direct experience with substance abuse, giving them a credibility unmatched by teachers, movie or TV celebrities, or professional athletes."

STATE OF MICHIGAN ANNUAL TAX SALE

ORDER FOR HEARING

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX

No. 98-1567-18-PZ

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

The State Treasurer has petitioned this court for a judgment in favor of the State, against each parcel of land described in Schedule A, for the unpaid taxes, interest and charges on each parcel of land, and that the lands be sold for the amounts claimed due by the State.

It is ordered that the petition will be brought on for hearing and judgment at the April term of this court, to be held at Charlevoix, in the County of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of April, 1999.

At the opening of Court on that day, all persons who have an interest in the lands or any part thereof, who wish to contest the lien claimed by the State, shall appear in this Court and file their objections with the clerk on or before the first day of the term of this Court mentioned above, and a judgment will be made as requested in the petition if the amounts due are not paid.

It is further ordered that the lands described in the petition, will be sold for the taxes, interest and charges on the first Tuesday in May thereafter, beginning at 10:00 A.M. on that day or days after, that are necessary to complete the sale of each parcel, at the office of the County Treasurer, or at a location selected by the Treasurer, at the County seat of the County mentioned above.

This sale will be open to the public and each parcel described in the judgment shall be separately offered for sale and sold to the person who pays the full amount charged against the parcel and accepts the smallest undivided interest in the property. Any parcel of land that is not sold on the first offering shall be reoffered on the succeeding day, or before the close of the sale. If not sold on the second offering the County Treasurer shall bid off the parcel in the name of the State.

Witness the Hon. Richard M. Pajtas, Circuit Judge, and the seal of the said Circuit Court of Charlevoix County this 1st day of February 1999.

Countersigned, Cecelia Borths, Deputy
Richard M. Pajtas, Judge

STATE TREASURER PETITION

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX.

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix

Mark A. Murray, State Treasurer of Michigan, shows unto the court:

1. That he is the Treasurer of Michigan and files this petition under the provisions of P.A. 206 of 1893, as amended, and P.A. 380 of 1965, as amended.

2. That the attached Schedule A is the tax record required by the act and contains the description of all lands in the above county upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein and have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned delinquent or for land identified as certified special residential property under section 55a, 90 days after the lands were returned as delinquent.

3. That the amounts opposite each description of land are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes which may lawfully be sold at the next annual tax sale, (b) interest calculated as provided by law to the first day of May, (c) a county property tax administration fee of four percent, with a minimum of $1.00, and $10.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the act mentioned above.

4. That all of the taxes, interest and charges are valid and have remained delinquent for sufficient time to require the sale of the lands against which they were assessed at the next annual tax sale, and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land, and that a judgment be issued in favor of the State against the land for the payment of the amounts specified, and if not paid, that the lands be sold.

Therefore your plaintiff requests:

a. That within the time provided by law this court determines that the taxes, interest, and charges on lands described in Schedule A are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land.

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final judgment in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of land for the payment of the taxes, interest, and charges, in Schedule A, and that the amounts in the column headed "Aggregate" shall constitute the amounts adjudged against the lands, unless amended by this court;

c. That if the amounts in the schedule are not paid, the lands, or the portion that is necessary to satisfy the amount adjudged against the lands, shall be offered separately at the tax sale as the law provides;

d. That your plaintiff may have such other and further relief that this court finds just and equitable.

Friends of the Jordan host meeting to discuss future of Pinney Bridge

The Friends of the Jordan River Watershed (FOJ) will be hosting a public forum from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 18 in the Community Meeting Room of the Jordan Valley District Library in East Jordan.

The purpose of the forum is to elicit public comment and ideas for the future of the Pinney Bridge site on the west side of the Jordan Valley. The bridge, one of the oldest in the area, has suffered severe damage in recent years. Parts of the bridge deck have broken off, both concrete abutments are in advanced stages of deterioration, and one of the steel trusses has dropped vertically about one foot.

Personnel from the Department of Natural Resources will be on hand at the forum to provide a few alternative plans that may be considered. The bridge, used to cross the Jordan River as part of the Jordan Valley Pathway, formerly provided access to the hike-in campground on the north side of the river. One of the main uses of the bridge has been to service outhouses located at the campground. The Gaylord District DNR has acted upon the recommendation of their engineering section and has halted future use of the bridge until a new plan is formulated.

For more information, contact John Hummer of Friends of the Jordan at 533-5063 or Mike Mang of the Gaylord District Department of Natural Resources at (517) 732-3541.

Charter school adds sports to roster

By Jamie MacMillan

When the charter school Northwest Academy opened its doors on Hurlbut Street in 1996, it offered the promise of smaller class sizes, computers and an alternative form of education for parents and students who had tired of the conventional methods offered by the area's larger public schools.

Being a K-12 school with an enrollment below 100, however, the school was unable to offer some of the non-academic activities found at most schools, such as athletics.

As the school approaches the end of its third year, that could change.

Spurred both by the recent success of its middle school skiers and a February enrollment count of 105, the school's highest number to date, the charter school is planning to add volleyball, soccer and basketball programs in the near future.

"We have to pick and choose what we can do, but if we pick the right things, we can do it," said school administrator Steve Bennett.

According to Bennett, the school plans to field a boys' high school soccer team next fall. About a dozen students have expressed a desire to be on the team, but Bennett conceded that the school won't know until next fall if interest and enrollment will remain high enough to warrant a full-fledged squad.

Despite that uncertainty, the school has moved forward with scheduling and Bennett said contact has been made with Central Lake and Charlevoix regarding possible games.

"Even if they're only scrimmages, at least our kids will be out there competing," Bennett said. "Unless something falls through at the last minute, we should be able to swing this."

An eighth grade girls' volleyball team is forming right now and a middle school girls' soccer team may take to the field this spring. Bennett also said there is the possibility of an intramural basketball program for next winter.

The school's work to create athletic programs came after talks with larger public schools regarding a possible athletic cooperative agreement stalled.

Bennett and Charlevoix schools superintendent John Sturock discussed the possibility, and, according to Bennett, Sturock favored the idea. After discussing the idea with board of education members, the Charlevoix district cooled on the idea.

"Talking independently with our board members, it was best to leave it alone and not make an issue about it," Sturock said.

Competition for students and the state revenue was a possible factor in the decision.

"Nobody is saying let's stick it to the charter school, but I do think it's important to keep in the back of our minds that we are in a competitive environment," Charlevoix Board of Education president Allen Telgenhof said. "We want what both schools can offer to be a factor when parents decide where to send their kids."

Beyond competitive issues, board members were concerned about the extent that the charter school would pay for equipment and coaches' pay, Telgenhof said. The board president also noted that board members were hesitant to enter any agreement that had charter school students paying to play while students at Charlevoix played for free.

"It all sounds good, but it's not the environment Governor Engler has put our schools in," Telgenhof said.

According to Bennett, Northwest Academy had discussions with East Jordan on the subject, but the charter school stopped pursuing that idea because the distance between schools would create transportation problems. Bennett also noted that students' grades could suffer because of the travel involved with going back and forth from East Jordan.

Northwest Academy's enrollment is predominantly comprised of middle school students. The school tends to lose students to local high schools because of social issues and sports, Bennett said.

For example, 21 students were in the school's eighth grade when school ended last spring. When school resumed in the fall, however, only 10 students were enrolled in the ninth grade.

According to the charter school's current crop of eighth graders, athletic options will play a part in their decision about where to go to high school.

"Sports would be the only factor in changing schools," student Brad Hice said.

For the most part, however, charter school students said their school had other pluses, such as more computers, flexible scheduling and a good teaching staff which would keep them from transferring.

Eighth grade student Michael Bohn said athletics are fun, but that he would get as much enjoyment out of playing recreational sports as he would varsity athletics.

Added Jeff Buckley, "If you overload your schedule with sports and other activities, you can't do anything else."

Reibel is granted a special use permit for M-66 property

By Jamie MacMillan

The Marion Township Planning Commission approved, without dissent, a special use permit requested by local businessman Arthur Reibel for general storage at his proposed boat storage facility on M-66.

Before approval is finalized, it must be voted on by the township board, which next meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 16 at the township hall on Marion Center Road.

Reibel appeared before the planning commission during its last meeting requesting a change to a previous agreement between the township and himself that allows for indoor boat storage on 24 acres of land Reibel owns along M-66 and Wickersham roads.

Reibel sued the township after two previous attempts to rezone his land from agricultural, A-1, to marine industrial, I-2, had failed. He wanted to build a boat storage park, but township officials denied the rezone requests in January, 1997 and August, 1997 because they felt ample space had already been provided in the township for boat storage.

Reibel took the township to court in October of 1997 and, after a year of legal wrangling, the parties agreed to terms last fall. The settlement included rezoning the land to marine industrial and approved a site plan for the first phase of Reibel's project. Reibel's plan is to build 34-38 storage buildings on seven acres on the property's southern end. The facility will have one entrance off of Wickersham road.

The storage park will be across the street from the Castle Farms property, owned by the Reibel Family Trust.

The settlement limited Reibel's project to indoor boat storage and eliminated all other uses, such as boat manufacturing, that an I-2 property allows unless the township grants a special use permit.

In this most recent request, Reibel wanted a permit to allow for more general storage such as recreational vehicles, snowmobiles and other equipment. He told the board that many people who would store their boats at his facilities were also interested in stowing their other vehicles.

A handful of area residents spoke out against the request, siting concerns over increased traffic and broadening the scope of the settlement between Reibel and the township.

"The ink isn't even dry on this deal and he wants to change it from boats to whatever he wants," said Wickersham road resident Richard Swenor.

Swenor expressed frustration with the terms of last year's settlement saying that the "residents of Wickersham were sacrificed to settle a lawsuit."

"This is a residential area with nice homes and a nice subdivision across the creek," he said. "To have marine industrial here is not the best zoning plan. It hints of spot zoning."

Commission Chairman Tim Matchett defended the settlement, noting that, had the township lost in a civil trial, the land would not only have reverted to marine industrial, but the township would have lost control over what could be done with the land.

As for this request, he called it "no big deal."

"Basically storage is already allowed and general storage wouldn't significantly or substantially affect the surrounding property owners."

Reibel is also required to landscape the property and maintain a 20-foot green belt along the project's north, west and east perimeters. He indicated to the township planners last week that he is in the process of moving dirt from the property across the street in order to build a berm to enhance the storage park's green belt.

In other news, the township is moving closer to changing its agricultural zoning in order to provide for more clustering of homes.

Matchett said township officials have been working for a number of months on the project and an informational meeting last Monday night with landowners showed residents as being "quite receptive" to the change.

Currently the township's agricultural district allows for one home for every acre. Matchett said the change would eliminate any minimum lot requirement, but it would require property owners to maintain portions of the property for conservancy issues.

The chairman said the issue will discussed and possibly voted on during the planner's next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 23.

The expansion proposal is for the NE1/4, Section 19, T33N, R7E, Eveline Township, Charlevoix County. The landfill is located approximately 1 mile from the Village of Irontown.

The landfill expansion area would be licensed to receive domestic, commercial, and industrial solid wastes. An additional five years of disposal capacity would be added to the existing facility. The landfill expansion area would be constructed with a single-composite liner system and will be monitored with ground water monitoring wells.

Rayders ease by Elks in tourney

a decade, came in with a 19-1 record and had reeled off 14 straight wins since a January loss to the Rayders. Charlevoix also sported a glossy resume. Finishing in second place to the Elks in the conference race, the Rayders completed an ambitious schedule with a 15-5 record, including a pair of wins over Petoskey and Boyne City.

With the crowd anticipating a breathtaking contest, the players on the teams didn't disappoint, as both clubs played an intense, furious first quarter.

Colin Carr and Ed Wierzbicki scored a pair of hoops for their clubs in the opening minutes, but it was Wierzbicki who placed an early mark on the game to give the Elks an early advantage.

Scoring on a variety of post moves and second chance tip-ins, Wierzbicki scored 14 first quarter points as the early play mirrored the teams' contest last month, which went to the Elks. The Elks hammered out a 27-19 lead after the first quarter behind Wierzbicki's three 3-pointers and six free throws.

"It takes so much to win a ball game," Kanine said afterward, "that we knew it was going to take four quarters to pull it out."

The Rayders charged out in the second quarter and scored the first eight points, tying the contest on a knifing move through the lane by Matt McClellan with 5:55 left in the half.

Tied at 27-27, the teams exhibited the game's best basketball down the first half stretch, trading baskets until the halftime buzzer. In that span, the teams exchanged the lead three times and were tied four times. Highlights during the run included a lunging hoop through a pair of defenders by Sean Stockman, long jump shots from Kanine and Tom Cunningham and a baseline reverse scoop from the Elks' Jeremy Reisig.

The Rayders rugged interior defense began to exert itself in the second quarter and in the third quarter it took over the game. Matt Dennis had three of his seven blocked shots during the quarter's opening minutes and Justin Thorp snared rebound after rebound, sparking a defensive effort which limited the Elks to only 10 points in the quarter.

"In the first half they were faking us out of position," Thorp said. "We knew we had to stay on our feet since they couldn't shoot over us because we're too tall."

The Rayders seized a 44-41 lead on a 3-pointer from Tom Cunningham and took a 53-49 advantage into the final frame.

After the Elks trimmed the lead to 59-58, the Rayder defense clamped down and held the Elks scoreless for over two minutes midway through the final quarter. Meanwhile, Charlevoix reeled off eight consecutive points and when Dennis later swished a free throw, Charlevoix held an insurmountable 70-59 lead.

With the Elks out of the way, the Rayders advance to play Boyne City tonight, Wednesday, at 8 p.m. The winner plays either Harbor Springs or East Jordan in the finals at 7 p.m. Friday, March 12. All games are in Charlevoix.

Even with the Elks out of the way, no one, even amid the hoopla of a victorious locker room, was ready to crown Charlevoix.

"We played Boyne twice this year, and they gave us absolutely everything we wanted," Haske said. "To win a district title, you have to show up every night."

KILLER SERVE

Charlevoix's Ann Spang fires a serve during Saturday's district volleyball tournament. The team squared off with Inland Lakes in the first round and were eliminated by the Bulldogs, 15-5, 15-4. Inland Lakes advanced and eventually won the district title with wins over Charlevoix, Harbor Springs and East Jordan. The Rayders finished their season with a 6-18-4 record.

SCRAPBOOK

The Hustler provided good reading in 1908

By Marilyn Boss

Hometown Chronicles

Albert Sharrow brought Dale and I several 1907-1908 Charlevoix high school papers a few weeks ago. Harry Hooker had given them to Albert years ago, and he saved them. They were in very good condition, and we enjoyed reading them.

The paper was called The High School Hustler, and was published the first and 15th of each month of the school year at the office of the Charlevoix Sentinel, the town paper at the time. It made a very professional paper for the school. Earl Young was editor-in-chief, and Irene Harsha (later to become Earl's wife) was associate editor. Henry Partridge was also an associate editor. John Lyngklip was the manager, and Don Campbell, assistant manager. Arvilla Dunham was literary editor, and Kathryn LaPeer, social editor. Doris Kane was the exchange editor, Marion Jones, humorist editor, and Cleland Mayne, advertising editor, Isa Mitchell was secretary and Emerald Emory, athletic editor.

They put out a good paper, which was filled with ads from local merchants. One that I enjoyed was the ad for Cohen's Cheap Store. They had men's and ladies' patent leather shoes for sale, and had low prices, evidently. Fred Cartier advertised his tailoring business, and he would make suits for the moderate price of $15 to $35. W. C. Bellinger advertised the fact that $5 would buy a dark brown shaded, Stradivarius model Violin Outfit, complete. George Glados, owner of the Sugar Bowl, advertised his candies as the kind that give greatest satisfaction, and invited people to come in and get a cup of that delicious Beef Tea, Chocolate, or Tomato Bullion, served hot with wafers. Dr. R. B. Armstrong had his office over Hines and Co.'s drugstore, with telephone numbers listed to reach him there or at home — 255 and 59. Henry Wagner had a dray and baggage line, F. G. Bellinger had a jewelry and optical store, where he tested eyes and ground lenses while you waited. J. H. Reid was the local Standard Oil Co. man. The Charlevoix County Bank gave you 3 percent interest. Ashton's offered a clean towel with every shave. J. A. Auld as a Doctor in Dental Surgery, and H. R. Fowler owned a Cash Meat market. The Hotel Elston advertised rates of $2 and $3 a room. J. K. Nobel was the proprietor. J. J. Fagan had an Electric Theater which you could enjoy for 5 cents.

The local paper, The Sentinel, was established in 1869, and Willard Smith was the editor and proprietor. In the local news in the Hustler was an item that said: "Don Campbell found a shiny new knife." Arvilla says, "You can sharpen pencils with it just dandy, girls!" Another item was "Louie See entertained a few of his friends Friday evening, November 8."

There was also an item which read: The members of the senior class have organized a Ciceronian Order, the following officers being elected: president, Don Campbell, vice president, Henry Partridge, secretary, Isa Mitchell and the executive committees were Emerald Emory, Marion Jones, Sam Levinson, Dorothy Iddings and Mae Felts. They held debates and some of those participating were Irene Harsha, Doris Kane, Cleland Mayne, Marion Jones, Kathryn LaPeer and Charles Plum.

About four years ago, there was an ad in the Charlevoix Courier placed by the grandson of Sam Rose. Sam was a barber for many years in town, and also a deep sea diver who worked on the underwater construction of the 1901 swing bridge. His grandson placed the ad, looking for information about his grandfather, who had died in the 1940s. Dale, seeing the ad, called him up in California and gave him all the information he knew about him. Two years ago, he stopped at our house, and Dale filled him in about his grandparents. His father was Mason Rose, and the Hustler paper had a poem about him in its pages. "Little Mason Rose sat on a pin — little Mason rose!!"

Earl Young, the editor, wrote the following in his column: "There has been a small change in the editorial staff, The manager, Sam Levinson, is resigning and John Lyngklip is taking his place. Sam says he does not want to get out of it entirely, and that if any of the editors have anything he can help them do, just let him know. He is perfectly willing to write an eight thousand word story for every issue, or to fill seven humorous columns."

For many years, I have made up two books each year of current history from the Courier for the Charlevoix Historical Society. There are many volumes there, which people can peruse. I felt current history is important for those down the line to read, and so it is very enjoyable to look at the papers Albert has. Again, thanks to Albert for letting us read his papers and share some of the memories of 1907-1908 in Charlevoix High School.

HOW TO KILL A BUSINESS
... in ten easy steps

1. Don't Advertise
Just pretend everybody knows what you have to offer.
2. Don't Advertise
Tell yourself you just don't have time to spend thinking about promoting your business.
3. Don't Advertise
Just assume everybody knows what you sell.
4. Don't Advertise
Convince yourself that you've been in business so long customers will automatically come to you.
5. Don't Advertise
Forget that there are new potential customers who would do business with you if they were reminded.
6. Don't Advertise
Forget that you have competition trying to attract your customers away from you.
7. Don't Advertise
Tell yourself it costs too much to advertise and that you don't get enough out of it.
8. Don't Advertise
Overlook the fact that advertising is an investment in selling ... not an expense.
9. Don't Advertise
Be sure not to provide an adequate advertising budget for your business.
10. Don't Advertise
Forget that you have to keep reminding your established customers that you appreciate their business.

Apartheid awareness lecture offered at college

Apartheid awareness is coming to northern Michigan through a lecture at North Central Michigan College at 1 p.m. Thursday, March 11 in the college conference center.

The speakers, Menelisi Genge and Somadoda Fikeni, have experienced the devastating effects of this issue first-hand. They will share their insights of how post-Apartheid challenges are currently effecting politics and life in South Africa.

Genge, a historian, will present a brief history of the 20th century South Africa, giving special emphasis to the African National Congress. He taught at the University of the North in South Africa before beginning his doctoral studies at Michigan State University.

Fikeni, a political scientist, is a former boxer and student political activist. He teaches at the University of Transkei, South Africa. He is currently pursuing a doctorate at Michigan State University.

The lecture is open to the general public at no charge.

Telgenhof will run for reelection to Charlevoix Board of Education

By Jamie MacMillan

Citing a positive atmosphere and a desire to complete unfinished business, Charlevoix Board of Education president Allen Telgenhof announced last week his intention to seek reelection.

Telgenhof said at one point he was hesitant to run for a second term, but with a bond issue "lurking," he felt it was best to remain a part of the process.

"Continuity is important, especially with a new superintendent," he said. "Everything has been so positive lately, it would be hard to just walk away."

Telgenhof was elected to the board in 1995 and is finishing his first term. For the last 21 months, he has served as board president. Previously, he had been a school board member in the Clio School District.

Telgenhof is a partner in the local law firm of Joseph, Corcoran and Telgenhof. He and his wife, Judy, have four children, Ty, 8, Ally, 7, Will, 2, and Luke, eight months.

Only one seat is up for grabs during this election and anyone interested in seeking the post has until 4 p.m. Monday, April 12 to turn a nomination petition to the district's central offices at 208 Clinton St. The petitions are available at the same location.

Big Rock metals may return to Charlevoix

By Laurie Lounsbury

The radioactive metal at Big Rock Point may have the physical properties of a boomerang — it may be sent away and then come whistling right back to northern Michigan, although in a different form than when it left.

Unbeknownst to the consumer, it may come back as your new bed frame or a soup ladle.

As Big Rock Point is dismantled, all the radioactive metal within the sphere needs to be dispensed with in some matter. It's something most local citizens don't think about. The presumption is that the radioactive metal will go away, never to return to Charlevoix.

But recent information from the Nuclear Information and Resource Center in Washington, D.C. suggests that the contractors in charge of radioactive waste disposal may be recycling some of the hot metal instead of burying it.

The dismantling activity at Big Rock Point may be linked to increased activity in Oak Ridge, Tenn., where two of Big Rock Point's contracting companies have metal reprocessing facilities.

GTS Duratek is the contracting company that was awarded the $25 million contract to remove the low level, radioactive waste at Big Rock. British Nuclear Fuels, (BNFL) was awarded a $35 million contract to dismantle the plant's large components.

Both GTS Duratek and BNFL have reprocessing plants in Oak Ridge, Tenn., where they melt down or reprocess radioactive metal. Some of the radioactive metal is melted down and reformed into large metal shields, which are sold to the Department of Energy (DOE). The DOE uses the shields, which contain some radioactivity, for their high energy physics pro-

Rayders rout Rams, win district title

Charlevoix coach Keith Haske got a well-earned victory ride upon his players' shoulders after the Rayders secured the district title last Friday night. It was Haske's first such title in his 15-year coaching career. For complete coverage of the Rayders' triumph see pages 12-15.

Facility forum offered ideas, but any consensus is far off

By Jamie MacMillan

At last week's community facility forum, it was learned that local residents liked the downtown location of the district's schools, the middle school's proximity to the library, the separation of all three schools and the quality of the high school football field and track.

It was also discovered, however, that citizens' biggest concerns focused around the outdated science labs, poor band and performing arts facilities, poor athletic fields beyond the gridiron, lack of room and the overall condition of the middle school.

The tug of war between favoring the schools' current location and the call for upgrades in what those facilities offer was not lost on board members.

"Without doing something different location-wise," board member Scott Boss said, "I don't think we can accommodate anything on the top of their lists."

Over 100 community members filled the high school study hall last week for a two hour forum regarding the future of the school facilities. More people attended the forum who didn't have children enrolled in the district than those who did. Of those who had children in the school, most were parents of students in the elementary-school. A handful of high school students also attended the forum.

"We wanted to be the voice from here, instead of them guessing," senior C.J. Winnell said. "A lot of these people are never in our buildings and we just want to tell them what we really need."

The forum was sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and mediated by Tom Kern, executive director of the Traverse City National Cherry Festival.

The forum opened with people dividing into groups of between eight to 10 people to list both the positives and the negatives of the Charlevoix school system. After compiling the lists, they were then asked to place sticker dots on those which they deemed most important. For the most part, the most items on the positive side were the schools' downtown location while the negative dots centered around lack of space at the K-5 and the condition of the middle school.

"A guaranteed recipe for sprawl is to move your post offices and schools away from downtown," JoAnne Beemon said to her group during discussion time.

Meanwhile, board of education members and school administrators remained in the background, occasionally walking around the room

Pump you up!

On Friday, March 5, the City of Charlevoix Fire Department received a new fire tanker from CSI Emergency Apparatus. The new tanker is a 1999 GMC with an automatic transmission. The tanker holds 2,000 gallons of water and has a 500 gpm Darley pump. This tanker was designed with a short wheelbase which is very important when maneuvering in tight areas at a fire scene. gram. The program creates its own radioactivity, so the shields will become contaminated in the process anyway. Using contaminated shields instead of clean metal shields saves money and resources, according to Diane Brown, a spokesperson for GTS Duratek.

Other radioactive metal that is deemed to be recyclable is cleaned and sold back to the scrap metal market.

Diane D'Arrigo is the radioactive waste project director at the Nuclear Information and Resource Center. According to her, those who favor radioactive metal recycling claim that it benefits everyone to reuse the radioactive metal. Recycling the metal and selling it to the scrap market will prevent the need for more mining. D'Arrigo, however, claims that the metal can't be completely decontaminated, and shouldn't be released back into the market.

"If they can't fully clean it, then it's not a service to the public," D'Arrigo said. "They're spreading the legacy of nuclear weapons and nuclear power plants all over the country."

The tolerance level of leftover radioactivity in recycled metal is vague and not defined by any agency at this point in time.

"We make sure there is no detectable (radio) activity when surveyed on the surface of the metal," said John Hess, who works in the field services group for GTS Duratek.

Hess explained that facilities like the GTS Bear Creek reprocessing facility in Oak Ridge follow guidelines of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Free Release Program, where metal is surveyed and then a determination is made if it is clean enough to be released back into public markets.

"There isn't a specific concentration base set for general free release," Hess said.

In other words, the Nuclear Regulatory Agency hasn't set an acceptable — or unacceptable — level of radioactivity for recycled metals sold to the scrap metal market.

As nuclear weapons factories and nuclear power plants around the country are decommissioned, millions of tons of radioactive metal must be dealt with. It either has to be compacted and buried in a low level waster repository or recycled back into the general market. While it's not new for companies to process radioactive metal, the volume of metal processing will be increasing to unprecedented levels with decommissioning.

"This service (radioactive metal reprocessing) has been around for 15 years," Hess said. "The Department of Energy is decommissioning a lot of their (nuclear) facilities, so we're anticipating that we'll get a lot more business."

For consumers, it means that a lot more recycled, potentially hot metal will be in the market place. Although the levels of radiation in recycled metal are supposed to be low to undetectable, the effect on humans after years of exposure is uncertain. A study compiled by the NRC showed that prolonged exposure of 10 millirems would cause three in 10,000 people to die of cancer.

"Everything we learn about radiation is that it's worse than we thought," D'Arrigo said. "We want to protect the public from radiation exposure."

Facilities forum held

Facilities

an up-close look at the various discussions throughout the room.

"The days are over when councils, boards and superintendents can come in and sell you solutions," Kern explained. "It just doesn't work. They have got to ask you first what you want and what you'll support."

After a short break, participants returned to find each table assigned one of the negative aspects of the schools and, choosing what table to sit at, were charged with the task of inventing solutions to the problems.

It appeared that some "dot-stacking" was going on. For example, over 10 dots were placed on the lack of art facilities, but no one chose to sit at that table, apparently not really considering the art facilities to be a problem.

As far as solving the district's facility question, the participants seemed as conflicted over building a new high school or new middle school as the board of education is.

One group felt it was best to build a new high school and move middle school students to the current high school because grades will be reconfigured for a 5-8 middle school with a separation between grades 5-6 and 7-8.

"The winged floor plan is already in place at the high school to do that," Tim Volovsek said.

Others dismissed that concept over cost issues.

"There is a feeling that even if everyone in this room agreed that that was the best plan, the town wouldn't pay for a new high school because it's more expensive," Steve Meissler said.

Other ideas ranged from building a new elementary school and moving the middle school to the current K-5 building, to the creation of an additional K-2 elementary school, to the elimination of a building and expanding current facilities to accommodate a K-6 school and 7-12 school.

Over 100 school district residents turned out last week to share their ideas at a schools' facility forum. For the most part, residents agreed that the schools' current locations is a plus, but that upgrades in what those facilities offer are required. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

"It just goes to show the responsibility that the board has, to juggle all these issues," board president Allen Telgenhof said. "I heard every possible idea and through it all we have to somehow sift through it."

The board's next step will be to create a steering committee to further guide the process. The board will have a special session at 7 p.m. Monday, March 29 to discuss the particulars of the committee such as size, board involvement and whether or not the committee will be asked to draft a facility recommendation for the board to act upon.

Charlevoix council sets hearing on dog control ordinance

By Jamie MacMillan

The city's proposed dog control ordinance will require owners to pick up after their pet's droppings and carry containers for such disposal when walking their pet. The proposal also prohibits the animals from the sandy areas along the city's public beaches.

Despite that, some city council members were uneasy and felt the proposed law didn't go far enough.

"I'm not real comfortable with this, but I'll go along with it for now," councilman Gabe Campbell said.

Campbell, Bernie DeVries and Bob Timms all seemed inclined to prohibit the animals completely from the city's beaches.

"Most of the people I talked to said they don't think in an area where you're having a picnic or playing ball that dogs are appropriate," Campbell said. "If we restrict them to the grass, that's fine at Michigan Beach because all the activity is on the sand. It's not like that at the other two beaches."

The other two beaches, Ferry and Depot, are mostly grass, but with stretches of sand closer to the water.

Timms noted that it would be easier to police if a total ban was implemented.

"It's a lot easier to keep them out rather than policing after them," he said. "It's just a thought."

Not all council members were willing to extend the proposed law to ban canines. Council member A. J. Witthoeft said he and his family always take their dog to the beach, but it's on a leash and well-behaved. He noted that most other dog owners act in the same responsible manner. Valerie Barnes echoed his thoughts.

"I don't want to totally prohibit the dogs," she said. "I don't see us keeping them away from our other parks."

No total prohibition was added to the proposed ordinance and city manager Mike Wiesner suggested that the council ease into the law to see if it will work in its original capacity.

For now, city police officers will be charged with enforcing the ordinance, which carries a $25-$250 fine for violators.

Before voting on the matter, the city council will hear public input during a public hearing at 7 p.m. Monday, April 5.

In other news, council approved an extension of the current lease agreement between the city and the Beaver Island Boat Co. for the company's use of office and dock facilities.

The council also passed a pair of resolutions endorsing grant applications for improvements at Ferry and Depot beaches.

Improvements to picnic shelters, athletic facilities, trails and parking lots are slated for both beaches. Initial estimates have the work on Michigan Beach totaling $780,964. If the city's application for a grant is approved by the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund, then the local requirement will only be $281,000.

The Depot Beach project is less expensive, totaling only $190,674. The city is seeking grant money via the recreational bond proposal that voters state-wide passed last November. The city has applied for grants before to do this project, but have been turned down each time. City planner Gary Harsch said this new route for grant money is more encouraging.

"It's a new pot of funds," he said. "It's for small towns like us to do upgrades on existing park facilities. It gives us a little better chance."

Should the city receive a grant for this project, the local match is estimated to be $68,664.

Also, the council heard a request from city resident Karrie Chaudier to abandon a portion of the north-south alleyway just north of Petoskey Avenue between Nettleton and Auld streets.

A public hearing on the matter has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, April 19.

OPINIONS

If the price is right, then it must be the right facility plan

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

It comes down to one single thing — money.

In the final analysis, any changes, additions, or renovations to our school facilities will be approved by voters only if the price is right.

The school facility forum was a positive event (as opposed to a "non-positive" event), where people got to express their feelings about the good and not so good aspects of our current school facilities.

They also made suggestions about what they would like to see incorporated into a new school facility plan.

Bigger and better band rooms, an auditorium, bigger playgrounds, better science laboratories, more computer and technology equipment, were all thrown onto the wish list.

The big question is, can we afford all of that? Will voters approve of it?

Facility plans have been stalled for three years because no one can come to an agreement about what we need and what we should spend.

Two years ago, the school board decided a $20 million project would include all of our imaginable needs and most lavish desires.

Of course it would. It was the Charlevoix Trump School plan.

Voters balked at the price tag and the millage they would be paying for decades. They loudly said, with their no votes, that less is more when it comes to taxes.

I'd like to see this whole facility project approached from the opposite direction.

Instead of trying to figure out what we need and want first, then trying to pass a millage to cover the cost of those needs and wants, let's come up with the bearable price tag first.

Will voters support 1 mill for 30 years? Is that too much? Will they support .6 mill for 20 years?

Maybe.

OK, so how much money do you get if you levy .6 mill for 20 years? Five million? Six million?

When the board and facility committee figure out how much voters will approve, and how much the millage will net them, then they can easily roll up their sleeves and start tackling the wish list.

Let's pretend voters will approve .6 mills and it will bring in $5 million.

Will a new auditorium fit in a $5 million plan?

Yes? Great.

No? Then throw it out.

Can a new high school be built for $5 million?

No?

Then nix that idea.

Can the old middle school be renovated and a new wing be added to accommodate grades 5 through 8 for $5 million?

Yes? Then do it.

Can new land be purchased in a convenient, in-town location and a new school be built there for $5 million?

No?

Then forget it.

It's no different than the way most of us approach all of our major purchases. We know how much we can afford to spend on a new home or car, and we eliminate anything that's out of our price range. A family may "need" a Chevy Suburban to haul ski equipment, band instruments, four kids and an English sheepdog around, but can they afford it? If the answer is no, then they settle for a smaller vehicle and put a rooftop carrier on it. (For the skis, not the dog).

The school board would serve us well by settling on an affordable price tag first and working from there.

Boyne Falls School District was able to pass a millage for a new school because they had a good idea of what the voters, the taxpayers, would support. They didn't ask for a penny more than that amount.

Boyne City School District has had two bond proposals fail miserably, even though its citizens wanted some changes, because they didn't listen to the voters. They asked for too much money.

People in this community seem to be ready to support some sort of bond proposal for school facility improvements.

One millage has already been passed to fix up the high school. It passed because it was a reasonable request.

If the school board can come up with yet another reasonable request, it too, might pass. Giving up some of the bells and whistles won't be horrible. Whatever it is, it will be an improvement on what we have.

Innocent until proven guilty? Not always

Editor:

I remember an editorial by your predecessor requesting respect for the Ramseys because they have not been charged or convicted of a crime. I certainly agreed, at the time. Please let me relate a recent experience which gives me pause.

Last week I attended a handwriting analysis lecture. The lecturer spoke about being employed to analyze handwriting for employers interviewing prospective employees, lawyers choosing jurors, police analyzing clues in a crime, etc. This woman certainly knew her "stuff," as she showed how handwriting characteristics matched personalities of many well-known people.

As an example of how she goes about matching handwriting for legal or crime purposes, she used the JonBenet Ramsey "ransom" note. The writer had tried to disguise his/her handwriting.

This handwriting expert showed how Mr. Ramsey's handwriting matched many parts of the ransom note. The match was very convincing, but as the woman said, this wouldn't prove that the Ramseys killed their daughter. But it would show that they knew who did, and are involved in covering up evidence, and the solution.

I don't know the legal aspects of this, but it sure emphasizes the way our supposedly "blind justice" system is being circumvented by the wealthy and/or powerful.

O. J. Simpson hired an expensive, capable team of defense attorneys who were able to go to extraordinary lengths to find the means to discredit a key police witness. He is free after murdering two people. President Clinton lied under oath to a federal grand jury, but he's being allowed to continue to "lead" us. And the Ramseys hired attorneys to keep the "keystone cops," known as the Boulder Police, from questioning them while evidence in the crime became tainted.

I just don't know if "innocent until proven guilty" works anymore.

Middle school Is in bad shape

Dear Editor:

This is Lindsey Miller. I am an eighth grader at Charlevoix Middle School. I would like to let everyone know how old and run down my school is. Charlevoix Middle School was built in 1927. That means that it is about 72 years old. On March 1, 1999 something in our school's heater system went wrong and we had no heat for two days. Then, the next day, school was canceled because the classrooms were too cold and it was not healthy for the students to be in that environment for that period of time. It really distracted the students from learning and teachers from teaching when people came in during the middle of class to fix the heaters.

We had a very bad rain a while ago. The doors and roof of the middle school started to leak badly. Trash cans were placed in the middle of the classrooms and hallways in order to catch water. With the cans in the middle of classrooms, kids were distracted by water dripping. So, teachers could not teach because students were watching the dripping water instead of listening to teachers. Finally, I would like to address the issue that Charlevoix Middle School in not handicapped-accessible. Students who get hurt and are on crutches are not able to get up and down the stairs easily. My dad hurt his knee and had surgery on it. He wanted to come to school with me (it was eighth grade parents' day) but could not because of the school's layout and because he was on crutches. He would have had to go from one end of the school to the other with ice, water and stairs in the way. I believe that school should be a place where all kinds of people may get around. I want people to have the chance to learn in a good environment. Please think about the education of your children and grandchildren when deciding if we need a new school. You should come to our school for a day and see the environment that we have to work in. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Lindsey Miller

An ordinary tree bud is really more like a microcomputer

Ear to the ground

Miniature items are always fascinating. Maybe it is the mental exercise of having to see something we know to be large reproduced in small form. The huge wall portraits of the 18th and 19th century were sometimes redone in full color on a piece of ivory the size of a half-dollar.

In today's technology there have been dramatic accomplishments in miniaturization. The clocks that once occupied the steeple of the town church were gradually reduced to something small enough to be carried in a ring on your finger. Radios that were once pieces of parlor furniture are made small enough to be literally stuck in your ear.

Computers probably provide the most extravagant example of miniaturization in recent years. The earliest computers used thousands of vacuum tubes, produced enough heat to warm your house for the winter and filled whole rooms. Now you can carry with you a machine of sufficient power that would have required a dozen rooms full of vacuum tubes in another era.

Nature makes miniatures too, although they are often hidden carefully, so we are not aware of them. At about this time of year when most of the trees and shrubs around us have no leaves, the ends and sides of most of the younger branches bear a precisely spaced and ordered arrangement of buds; every one of them an extraordinary miniature and something of a computer as well. A single bud, a fraction of an inch long, may contain all the leaves and flowers that will adorn a two foot-long branch next June.

The miniature computer on the end of each branch of your local maple tree has a built-in program that directs not only the next year's growth, but also the formation of the bud for the year after that; a process complex enough to make the production of an automobile simple by comparison.

The program in the bud is responsive to its external environment and has feedback mechanisms that even the most sophisticated microcomputer might envy, if it could envy. If the leaves on a particular branch are eaten by some wandering insect early next summer, the built-in program will direct the development of a new branch and a new set of leaves, even though summer is not the usual time for the growth of new leaves and branches. We may not be able to reprogram a bud to do something other than grow leaves and branches, but it is never the less reprogrammable. Some sorts of gall wasps and other small insects can inject materials that redirect the bud's growth into something that may resemble a pine cone on a willow tree or even a spherical Christmas tree ornament on an oak. The bugs that can plague our computer-like bud are outside rather than inside, but they can be equally troublesome.

A bud that will produce a branch one foot long with 10 leaves contains somewhere close to a hundred million individual cells, which may become a billion cells as the branch grows. The number of transistor equivalents on a microchip that operates today's or tomorrow's microcomputers may approach a million, but even with that degree of computer miniaturization, the potential amount of information in a maple bud is greater. It may only be the prejudice of a botanist, but I believe that an ordinary bud, one of thousands on a small tree, must win the miniaturization contest with even the smallest microcomputer.

After all, what is an apple but a bud that has grown up?

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Duane Nelson
Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene

We are about one-quarter of the way through the year. Dare I remind us of the resolutions we made? Have you found success or failure with your resolutions? Most of us have probably lapsed into failure; however with God, we can still find success and a fresh start.

Years of observation, coupled with spiritual leadership, have led me to opine that most people have given up on any success to their New Year's resolutions or goals because of years of unseen accomplishments and very apparent failures. Some have concluded that change is impossible in their lives. So how can we have the success in the different areas of our lives? We will cover two aspects to help — one this week and the other next week.

The first one is common with most resolutions or goals, especially if they don't directly relate to our Christian growth. God is wanting to be active in every area of our lives. He aches when ignored in a decision or a resolution. A scripture comes to mind every time I find myself "ignoring" God in my daily routine.

"Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, says the Lord Almighty." (Zechariah 4:6, NIV). There isn't a need to parse this verse, rip through a Bible commentary, or uncover the Hebraic meaning. It simply means what it says; human strength (self-sufficiency) will never be enough; God through His Spirit will give us the strength to succeed in His directives for our lives. He wants to give us the power and directions. He also knows what is best for us.

The difficulty of any fresh start is really thinking God doesn't care to be involved in the mundane areas of our lives. This is completely untrue. God does want to be involved. He yearns to be included in every decision and direction we take.

So our first step in finding success with our resolutions and goals is to include God in our lives and daily decisions. By finding forgiveness in Christ, we've taken a good first step. Do that today. Seek the God who cares for you so much that He gave His Son, Jesus Christ, to die for you.

A Message to Our Community from Burns Clinic

In the early 1920s, Dr. Dean Burns dared to dream a little dream. He wanted to bring together a group of specialty physicians to practice medicine in a tiny town on Little Traverse Bay. His dream grew into their reality of Burns Clinic, and for the past 70 years, the Burns Clinic has been devoted to delivering premier health care to this region. Throughout these years, we have been fortunate to employ physicians and staff who have dedicated their lives to caring for you.

As time has passed, changes have occurred around us in the field of health care. We have weathered many challenges together, and have now come to a point in time that for many of us here at Burns Clinic, and for many of you in our communities, would have never thought possible. Within the next 60 days, the Burns Clinic will cease operations as a multi-specialty group practice.

What does this mean to you, our patients?

First and foremost, we want to make clear that at no point in time will the doors to the clinic close. The changes occurring are legal and structural changes. Patients should plan to keep their appointments, whether they are in March or December. And patients should keep their appointment whether it is at the main Petoskey offices or at your doctor's location in Gaylord, Rogers City, St. Ignace, Sault Ste. Marie or Bellaire.

Throughout these times of great challenge and change, one thing has remained constant, and that is the complete devotion of our physicians and staff to this community. They have been here, and will continue to be here in the future, although it will be in a different legal structure. You will see many of the same faces that have served you over time serving you in the future.

What does this change mean to our physicians?

For the physicians, it gives them greater independence within their practices. Some of our physicians may choose to partner with, or become employees of, Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey. Other physicians may choose to become independent and remain on staff at Northern Michigan Hospital or another area hospital. These opportunities have revitalized our medical community and mean that the same high-quality health care you received in the past will be available to you in the future.

What does this change mean to our employees?

You may have heard that our employees received lay-off notices. This was a legal requirement in order to dissolve the Burns Clinic. For many of our employees, there will be job opportunities for them within a Medical Services Organization. Some employees may be directly employed by the same physicians they currently partner with to provide patient care. More specific information for employees will come in the weeks to follow as we work through this process.

The Burns Clinic has considered itself blessed to have been able to employ so many devoted workers throughout the years. We thank each and every employee, past and present, for their dedication and for weathering these times of challenge with us. We wish our employees only the best, and are offering them support in these times of change.

Change is almost always a double-edged sword. It brings about sadness and confusion, and also opportunity and excitement. There is a great sadness knowing that the Burns Clinic name will no longer be a part of our communities. However, it is important to know that this is not the end of Dr. Dean Burns' vision, but only a change needed to keep that dream alive. This change will ensure that the same high-quality health care you have depended upon in the past will exist in the future, with worlds of possibility awaiting it.

The Burns Clinic has been honored to serve you, and our physicians look forward to serving you in the future under a different, improved structure. We understand that you may have many questions and concerns, and want you to know that we are available to help you sort through those. Please feel free to call HealthAccess at the following number so that we can continue to help you.

For more information regarding this change, please call: 1-800-248-6777.

Sincerely,

The Administration, Physicians,
and Staff of Burns Clinic

Rep. fights state's road funding plan

By Jamie MacMillan

Andy Neumann won't let an executive order issued by Governor John Engler go into effect without a fight.

Neumann, (D-Alpena), is sponsoring a resolution rejecting Engler's Executive Order 1999-1, which will consolidate the state's economic development programs. Neumann's contention is that by doing so, the order will strip over $9 million from local road projects.

In an interview, Neumann said he isn't fundamentally opposed to the order, but that he would like to see the section of the order which transfers operator and chauffeur license fees into the newly formed Michigan Strategic Fund taken out of the decree.

Those fees, typically divided and sent directly to local road commissions, will now go into a "semi-private corporation," which in turn will dole out the money on an as-needed basis, Neumann said.

"There is no guarantee that any of this money will come back locally," the Alpena Democrat said. "If there are big projects going on in Detroit or Grand Rapids, they will be the ones getting this money."

Neumann's district, which includes Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Alpena and Presque Isle counties, would lose $168,000 of the total $9.6 million expected to be diverted as a result of the order.

Neumann

While Charlevoix County stands to lose $38,629, that figure is lower than what most other counties will lose. Only 10 other counties will lose less than Charlevoix County. Neighboring Emmet and Antrim counties stand to lose $48,260 and $43,632 respectively.

Pat Harmon, engineering/manager for the Charlevoix County Road Commission, said every cut in funding hurts, but the full effect of this order remains unclear.

He expects about $13,000 of that cut to be slashed from the commission's category D funds, which go toward turning seasonal roads into all-season roads.

The commission is amid work turning the Boyne City-East Jordan road into an all-season road, and Harmon said that project's funding shouldn't be affected by the order. He did say that the commission's next such project on Thumb Lake Road could be delayed by the stripped funding.

"It's going to have a big impact," Harmon said. "It might put a project off a year, or maybe we'll only be able to six miles of a 10-mile project."

As for Neumann, he's asked that a hearing be held regarding his resolution during a House Oversight and Operations committee meeting on Tuesday, March 16.

If no hearing is held, Neumann said he will introduce the resolution when the House reconvenes on Wednesday, March 17. Engler's order is slated to go into effect on Monday, April 5.

"This is a big issue for people on both sides of the aisle," he said.

Rayders roll past Rams, 87-52, and into regional semis

Twelve Rayders score in title game romp to lead school to its first district championship since 1991-92 season

Minutes before the tip-off of Friday night's district title game between the Charlevoix Rayders and the Harbor Springs Rams, Charlevoix coach Keith Haske was worried about his team's transition defense against the run and gun Rams, Harbor's 3-point shooting ability and the usual pratfalls that are March basketball.

Haske was a confident coach, however, because he knew he had the ultimate trump card: a deep, talented basketball team bent on a championship and thrilling its raucous home crowd.

"The kids have heard for years about this Charlevoix tradition," Haske said, nodding to his charges as they went through their final warm-ups. "They want to establish their own tradition and be the first group to revive the old tradition."

Consider that mission accomplished.

Behind a trio of scintillating performances, the Rayders showcased superior talent, frontcourt dominance and oppressive pressure defense en route to the school's first district championship since 1992. The peak was an 87-52 dismantling of the Rams in the title contest during which 12 different Rayders scored baskets.

"This was a big step," senior forward Matt Dennis said. "It's a great feeling, I don't know how to describe it. It's just awesome."

The game itself was highly anticipated, but many in the crowd expected a handy win for the Rayders. Harbor entered the contest with an 8-13 record, nine fewer wins than Charlevoix. Also, a week earlier the Rayders crushed the Rams, 98-64, in the regular season finale.

The Rams, however, began the game determined to shock the world.

Using their quickness, the Rams pushed the ball in transition and forged a pair of early leads. Charlevoix's Adam Wood sank a late 3-pointer to key an 8-2 run which gave the Rayders an 18-14 lead after the first quarter.

The Rayders stretched the margin in the second stanza with relentless work on the offensive glass. Dennis, Sean Stockman, Justin Thorp and Tom Cunningham scored hoops after offensive rebounds to push the lead to 36-20.

The Rams countered with perimeter jumpers from Mike Szocinski and Randy Wood, but some late turnovers kept the Charlevoix advantage in double figures, 40-28, at intermission.

"We knew that wasn't our best basketball," Dennis said of the team's halftime mood. "It wasn't Rayder basketball, so we wanted to come out in the second half and really get on them."

In the third quarter, the Rayders hammered the ball down low to their interior threats on every possession. Thorp and Dennis combined for 10 points and Stockman came off the bench to add another five free throws during a 15-4 stretch that pushed the lead to 55-32. Wood and Cunningham drained 3-pointers late in the quarter to give the Rayders an insurmountable lead, 63-36, headed to the final frame.

"We didn't want to let them hang around," senior guard Matt McClellan said of the third quarter outburst. "We didn't want to go into the fourth quarter with them believing they still had a shot to win the game. We came right out and buried them."

Twelve Rayders scored, paced by Thorp's 16 points. McClellan and Dennis added 12 apiece. Stockman grabbed nine rebounds, Thorp and Dennis each snared eight and McClellan grabbed six. Jim Kanine, Dennis and McClellan each dished out four assists.

Not only did the Rayders clinch their first district title in seven years, but it was also the first district championship for Haske in his 15-year head coaching career. Prior to coaching the Rayders, he had plenty of quality teams at St. John's High School, but his clubs never got over the hump and beyond district play.

"It hasn't really sunk in yet," he said afterwards. "To take a bunch of kids and watch them grow together and see them have success, that's just fun."

The Rayders advance to the Houghton Lake regional tournament where a semifinal date against Whittemore-Prescott awaits. The Cardinals are coached by Joe Powers, former varsity girls basketball coach at Charlevoix. The teams battled last night, but results were incomplete at press time.

Should the Rayders win, they'll advance to the title game at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 18 against the winner of the Manton-McBain contest. The game will be at Houghton Lake High School. The regional champion secures a bid in next week's state quarterfinal game at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 23 at Ferris State University.

"Anything can happen in the state tournament," McClellan said. "We feel we can beat anyone in the state, make it to the Breslin Center and go all the way."

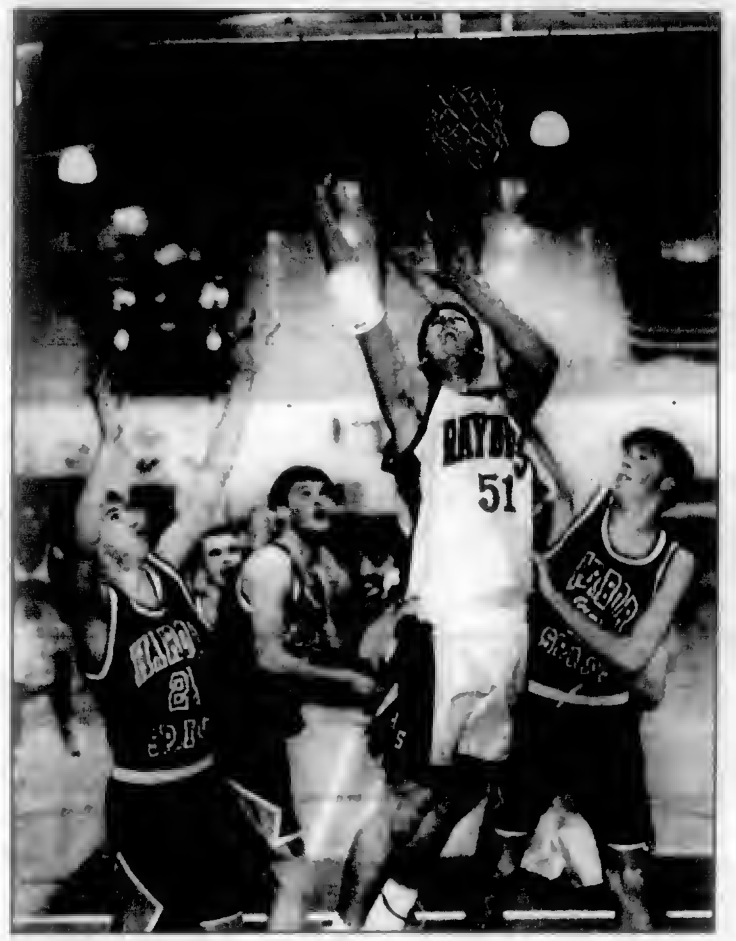
Rayders roll into b-ball regionals

LEFT: Would the Rayders have won all three tournament games without the support of a rabid following, which packed the local gymnasium all week? Said guard Matt McClellan, "They picked us up all week, it was a great atmosphere to play in."



LEFT: Senior pivotman Justin Thorp snares an offensive rebound and powers back up for a goal despite being surrounded by a trio of Ram defenders. Thorp and frontcourt mate Matt Dennis were superior all week. Said Thorp, "When the two of us are on the same note, we can dominate games."

400 turn out for wrestling

For a wrestling fan, there was no better place to be on Saturday other than the Charlevoix High School gymnasium.

Charlevoix hosted the largest middle/elementary school tournament in Northern Michigan last weekend. Over 400 grapplers from 12 different schools hit the mats, and a near capacity crowd packed in to watch the action.

Schools participating were Alpena, Benzie Central, Charlevoix, Petoskey, Onaway, Gaylord, Grayling, Rogers City, Mancelona, Kalkaska, Traverse City West and Traverse City Central.

The home team performed admirably, as 21 young Rayders earned medals, including seven first places.

In the elementary division, Shannon Gillespie, Nathan Golovich, Corey Gottshall, Mitchell Crandall and Shawn Sabourin went undefeated on the day to win first place in their respective fields. Matt Loper and Dan Hedrick matched those feats in the middle school tournament to win first places.

Other results for Charlevoix included Brett Probert and Nick Ditlow earning seconds in the middle school tournament. Kyle Winstone, J.P. Fiedorek and Delos Lanterman each earned fourth places.

As for the elementary school tournament, Jeff Golovich and Nick Gottshall earned second places. Earning third place honors were Chris Bradley, Ray Jones and Chris Waha. Cody Harp, Danny Waldron, Kyle Jones and Cliff Jones earned fourth places.

As always, the annual invitational was a success and Charlevoix coaches Dave and Craig Golovich expressed thanks to all those who made the event possible.

"Without the support of many dedicated individuals and area businesses, this program would not be successful," Golovich said.

Charlevoix schools ponder middle school football league

With the district basketball tournament beginning just down the hallway, it was only natural that the Charlevoix Board of Education dealt mostly with athletic issues during its session earlier this month.

The board heard a proposal regarding a new middle school football league, hired a new coach and tabled a motion to hire another.

Varsity football coach Todd Klinger and middle school principal Dennis VanGuilder endorsed the district's involvement in a new middle school league that will attract teams from Charlevoix, Petoskey, Mancelona, Central Lake, Harbor Springs, Pellston, East Jordan, Inland Lakes and Bellaire.

VanGuilder noted that interest is high enough to support two teams from both Charlevoix and Petoskey.

The Charlevoix district has offered a football program to its middle school students for the past six years, but only on an intramural basis with occasional scrimmages. A new league will give players a "chance to knock heads with kids from other schools," VanGuilder said.

A similar league involving Harbor Springs, Petoskey, East Jordan and Pellston was in action this past fall, but now school officials want to expand the league and firm up certain rules and regulations.

The new league was portrayed as a low-key venture that will give budding football players a taste of the competitive aspects of the game.

"A number of people share the same philosophy that we do, so I'm comfortable going into this league," Klinger said. "We're going to stress fundamentals, and there won't be much pomp and circumstance."

The plan gives each team a four-game schedule to be played on consecutive Tuesdays next fall. Practices will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 7, and league rules prohibit games played after Tuesday, Oct. 19.

As a safety precaution, there will be a 165-pound weight limit to players in the offensive backfield and no blitzing is allowed.

A couple issues need to be ironed out before the local school board approves Charlevoix's participation.

The main issue is whether or not on-site medical care needs to be provided at all games.

"Football is football," board member Dennis Halverson said. "If it can happen in a varsity game, it's hard to argue that it won't happen in a middle school game."

As it stands now, schools hosting games will try to have some form of medical care at each game, possibly via an on-site ambulance or by contacting local EMTs and having them attend games.

"I'm worried about tying up our vehicles," board member Larry Levengood said. "Can we afford to have our ambulances sitting at every athletic event."

Another concern for Charlevoix is where to play home games. Kipke Field is busy hosting high school football and soccer games and might not be available every Tuesday for middle school football contests.

League officials will meet next month to continue hashing out league regulations and the school board tabled any action pending resolution of the above issues.

Sticking with athletics, the board accepted the resignation of assistant tennis coach Vinnie Klooster and hired Cindy Elliot as a replacement.

The board tabled a motion to hire Josh Block as the junior varsity girls' soccer coach. Athletic director Keith Haske said Block, the varsity boys' soccer coach and middle school computer teacher, withdrew from consideration.

A JV girls' soccer team is a new addition to the Charlevoix athletic scene and the team will hit the field this spring. Twenty-three students were on the varsity team last spring and with 20 of those expected to return this year, Haske said the school would have to cut kids if it didn't start a JV team.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX

ORDER FOR HEARING

No. 98-1567-18-PZ

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

The State Treasurer has petitioned this court for a judgment in favor of the State, against each parcel of land described in Schedule A, for the unpaid taxes, interest and charges on each parcel of land, and that the lands be sold for the amounts claimed due by the State.

It is ordered that the petition will be brought on for hearing and judgment at the April term of this court, to be held at Charlevoix, in the County of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of April, 1999.

At the opening of Court on that day, all persons who have an interest in the lands or any part thereof, who wish to contest the lien claimed by the State, shall appear in this Court and file their objections with the clerk on or before the first day of the term of this Court mentioned above, and a judgment will be made as requested in the petition if the amounts due are not paid.

It is further ordered that the lands described in the petition, will be sold for the taxes, interest and charges on the first Tuesday in May thereafter, beginning at 10:00 A.M. on that day or days after, that are necessary to complete the sale of each parcel, at the office of the County Treasurer, or at a location selected by the Treasurer, at the County seat of the County mentioned above.

STATE TREASURER PETITION

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX.

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix

Mark A. Murray, State Treasurer of Michigan, shows unto the court:

1. That he is the Treasurer of Michigan and files this petition under the provisions of P.A. 206 of 1893, as amended, and P.A. 380 of 1965, as amended.

2. That the attached Schedule A is the tax record required by the act and contains the description of all lands in the above county upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein and have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned delinquent or for land identified as certified special residential property under section 55a, 90 days after the lands were returned as delinquent.

3. That the amounts opposite each description of land are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes which may lawfully be sold at the next annual tax sale, (b) interest calculated as provided by law to the first day of May, (c) a county property tax administration fee of four percent, with a minimum of $1.00, and $10.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the act mentioned above.

4. That all of the taxes, interest and charges are valid and have remained delinquent for sufficient time to require the sale of the lands against which they were assessed at the next annual tax sale, and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land, and that a judgment be issued in favor of the State against the land for the payment of the amounts specified, and if not paid, that the lands be sold.

Therefore your plaintiff requests:

a. That within the time provided by law this court determines that the taxes, interest, and charges on lands described in Schedule A are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land.

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final judgment in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of land for the payment of the taxes, interest, and charges, in Schedule A, and that the amounts in the column headed "Aggregate" shall constitute the amounts adjudged against the lands, unless amended by this court;

c. That if the amounts in the schedule are not paid, the lands, or the portion that is necessary to satisfy the amount adjudged against the lands, shall be offered separately at the tax sale as the law provides;

d. That your plaintiff may have such other and further relief that this court finds just and equitable.

¿Habla Español? These first-graders can

By Jamie MacMillan

As their teacher led them through a review of Spanish numbers, a measure of excitement was detected amid the first grade classrooms at the Charlevoix Elementary School last Wednesday morning.

For the first graders, the exciting part about learning the Spanish language wasn't so much speaking in a foreign tongue, but who was tutoring them in how to do so.

For the past couple of months, high school seniors in Pete Scholten's Spanish IV classes have left their own classrooms and desks to guide first grade students through lessons in Spanish.

"They ask everyday, 'Is today the day they're coming?'" first grade teacher Molly Randall said of her pupils' enthusiasm.

The high school students come in once a week and have been charged with the task of teaching first graders the basic nuts and bolts of the Spanish language such as numbers, animals, body parts, colors and everyday phrases.

"To be the teacher is a new experience," senior Jerry Borths said.

Added classmate Erik Butcher, "To see the look on their faces once they understand something is really fun."

Last Wednesday was the final session for the first graders and their teenage tutors, and it was spent with the high schoolers reading them children's stories, which they penned and illustrated themselves, in Spanish.

"It's an outstanding way for our older kids to contribute something to the community and pass along some of their knowledge," Scholten said. "It's a real life experience to try out teaching."

Scholten began the program in 1996 and revived it this school year after shelving it last year because of scheduling problems. He said that, more and more, the accepted theory is to begin teaching the basics of foreign languages to much younger students.

High school seniors Colin Carr and George LaBlance lead a group of first-grade students through a story which the seniors wrote and illustrated themselves. The story was read in Spanish and this duo with their Spanish IV classmates have been tutoring first-graders in the basics of the Spanish language this winter.

"Research has proven that the best window of opportunity is at a young age because they're still learning English," he said, noting that younger children have a greater capacity to learn accents such as the trilled 'R.'

"A majority of these kids now have a good grasp of the basics, which is phenomenal," Scholten said.

Scholten said that initially his students had doubts about how effective they could be with first graders, but, according to the first grade teachers, the sessions have been a resounding success because of the seniors' ability.

"They've done a lot of hands-on activities, which is appropriate for this age," teacher Alison Mellon said. "I've been impressed, they've been well-prepared."

Mellon noted that her students' enthusiasm is manifested by the fact that many of the youngsters have seen their older counterparts on athletic fields, drama stages and in other endeavors.

"They've seen them before and know who they are," she said. "They can relate to that. It's exciting for them to see these guys on a different level."

For the seniors, Scholten said the project not only has been a great way for seniors to review their Spanish, but also has been demanding, with the preparation involved with teaching a class.

"It's really given them something to aspire to," he said.

Odyssey of the mind

Charlevoix's Odyssey of the Mind team qualified for the state finals with a creative performance last month at Johannesburg-Lewiston High School. The team, coached by Valerie Pedersen, performed in the "O, My Faire Shakespeare" event. Their chore was to present a classic Shakespeare scene, but with original characters, songs and dialogue. They had to set their scene with an historical backdrop and at least 10 lines of the actual Shakespeare scene had to be used. The team will now fine tune their performance for the state finals at Central Michigan University on Saturday, April 17. Pederson thanked local merchants for their sponsorsip and lauded her students' performance saying they were outstanding, creative and natural actors. Team members are Josh Stevenson, Cortney English, Tess Hoagland, Danielle Kimble, Brittany Hernden, Allison Holmes and Heather Biddick. All seven attend Charlevoix Middle School.

Singing into spring

Marina LaBlance leads first-graders through a rehearsal of the elementary school's upcoming spring musical. The players will perform "Come Swing with Us to the Big Band Sound," a tribute to the revived art of swing music and dancing. Among the songs performed will be "Java Jive," "I Got a Girl in Kalamazoo," "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" and "Chattannooga Choo Choo." The Up North Big Band will be the pit orchestra and a special dance exhibition by professional swing dancers is scheduled. The performance will be at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 18, in the high school gymnasium.

Rayders headed to Final Four

By Jamie MacMillan

Stirring faith that there may be no limit, the Charlevoix Rayders eased past the Manistique Emeralds, 47-41, to advance into the class C state semifinals for the first time since 1948.

The "No Limit" mantra, invented by the student fans at the season's onset, will no doubt be chanted by everyone as the Rayders travel to the Breslin Center on the Michigan State University campus for a semifinal match-up with Bath High at 2:50 p.m. Thursday, March 25.

"It's a realization of a lifelong dream ever since we began playing basketball," senior forward Tom Cunningham said. "It's unbelievable, it's the number one thing we talked about since the beginning of the season."

To advance into the school's first final four in more than a half-century, the Rayders had to endure a gritty, slow paced game that was defensive minded from the opening tip.

The game was a classic battle of conflicting styles, with the Emeralds playing a slow, almost stall-like, tempo bent on hammering the ball inside to their pair of post threats, 6-4 Mike Mickelson and 6-3 Nick McGuire. The Rayders, meanwhile, countered with a full-court game punctuated by a varied scoring attack.

"They like to pack it in and we like to run," senior guard Colin Carr said. "We got after it a bit more in the second half and when it was on the line our big man showed up more than their big man did."

Carr's reference was to senior pivotman Justin Thorp, who scored all his team-high 12 points in the second half, including two hoops early in the final frame to break ties and a nifty hook shot, punctuating a 6-0 spurt later in the quarter lifting the Rayders to a 40-36 lead with 2 minutes, 26 seconds left in the game.

Justin Thorp goes up for two of his team-high 12 points in the second quarter of Charlevoix's win over Manistique.

With frontcourt mate Matt Dennis in foul trouble most of the game, Thorp also keyed a defensive effort that limited the Emeralds' two towers to a combined 17 points after the pair scored 42 of their team's 58 points in their regional title victory over Negaunee.

"It's almost a dream," Thorp said afterwards. "We seem to find a way to make it happen and pull through. I don't know where it comes from, maybe it's a power above us, but we pulled it off."

Neither team appeared ready to pull anything off after a miserable first quarter shooting display that saw the teams combine to make only four of 25 shots. The game remained scoreless until the 5:35 mark of the

New director takes helm of Charlevoix Commission on Aging

By Jamie MacMillan

Susan Bergmann

Charlevoix County officials are hoping that the hiring of a full time director will help revive a Commission on Aging (COA) that many say has fallen short of its potential.

"Charlevoix County does need some upgrading," county commissioner Shirley Roloff said. "We need to begin to push forward with some of the things we should be doing."

Roloff, who serves as county board liaison to the Commission on Aging, pointed to the recent hiring of Susan Bergmann, a registered nurse working for the local health department, as the COA's first full time director will be a big step toward upgrading county programs.

Previously, the commission had been directed by Art Saworski, who also doubled as county transit director. When Saworski retired earlier this year, county officials took it as an opportunity to split the position into two different jobs. Saworski's expertise was transit and Roloff said he spent about 70 percent of his time on transit issues, especially in light of the county's recent participation in the new regional transit system.

"He didn't do a bad job, it's just that there is only so much time one has to spread around," COA chairman Morton Walls said. "With our own director, it will make a big difference."

Bergmann, who the county board hired earlier this month at a base salary just shy of $30,000 in addition to benefits, said her expertise in the medical field is just what the local commission needs.

"What's been missing in Charlevoix County has been a nurse running our programs," the 39-year-old said, reiterating her message to county officials during the job interview process.

The Commission on Aging is a seven-member board which meets monthly to administer aging issues.

The biggest project the commission handles is offering congregate meals to the elderly at sites in Boyne City and East Jordan along with a meals-on-wheels project for those who are housebound.

The COA also has in place a homemakers program where volunteers go into the homes of those who need help with household chores such as laundry, cleaning and meal preparation. The COA has 37 clients in its homemakers program and have made 543 service visits to date this year, according to Walls.

"Our purpose is to try to keep people in their homes as long as possible," Walls said.

During its most recent session, the commission met with officials from the Boyne City Housing Project regarding a future expansion of the Litzenberger Place and the possible inclusion of senior activity center.

Charlevoix survives slow tempo, advances to Final Four frame when the Emeralds' Nick Peterson banked home a jumper.

Jim Kanine got the Rayders on the board seconds later with a 3-pointer and three free throws from Sean Stockman nudged the Rayders ahead, 8-4, after one period.

The Rayders extended their advantage to 16-8 midway through the second quarter behind six points from Carr, including a coast to coast drive after swiping an Emeralds' pass.

Manistique clawed back into the contest with marksmenship from the free throw line. The Emeralds swished eight freebies during a 10-2 run that tied the contest at 18-18. Baskets by Andy Granath and Kanine to close the quarter gave Charlevoix a 22-18 advantage headed into intermission.

Charlevoix pushed its lead to 26-18 after back to back hoops from Cunningham and Thorp, but the Emeralds scored the game's next 10 points to seize their first lead since the opening basket, 28-26.

Thorp gave the Rayders back the lead, 30-28, at the end of the quarter with a pair of free throws.

In the fourth quarter, momentum swung toward Manistique, however, when Dennis was disqualified with fouls and the Emeralds drilled the ensuing free throws for a 36-34 lead with 5:54 remaining.

The Rayders didn't falter and outscored Manistique 13-5 the rest of the way with Kanine, Stockman, McClellan and Thorp scoring points.

"We didn't make a lot of shots, there was a lid on the basket," Kanine said. "The game wasn't to our tempo, but we played our style at the end and our big guy stepped up."

The Rayders are confident they can step up and play with some of the state's best.

"No matter where they're from, you can play with anyone," senior Tom Cunningham said of the team's attitude headed into the match-up with Bath.

Charlevoix coach Keith Haske agreed. He said the talent was always their to pull off a long tournament run, but the key was playing as a team and showing up each day with a good work ethic.

"If those two things come together, that "No Limit" motto is pretty close to reality."

Commission on Aging will offer more to county residents

That idea, according to COA board member Joan Blanchard, is five years down the road. The present chore, however, is an attempt to increase the scope of their respite and home health care programs to include more senior citizens in a county with an above average senior population.

Recent census figures show a state average of residents above the age of 65 to be about 11 percent per county. Charlevoix County has 17 percent of its residents above the age of 65.

Despite a high elderly population, the county's COA only offers respite and home health care to seven clients. Respite care is a substitute service for the primary caregiver, typically a family member, so that person can get away for a break. Bergmann would like to see Charlevoix County offer those services at the level of Antrim County which handles over 200 clients.

"The difference in services between Charlevoix and other counties is that most of the others have had senior millages for many years," local activist Kris Curtain said.

Antrim County receives money from a .4 mill, three year levy which will be up for renewal in the year 2000. They receive $350,000 of their close to $900,000 budget from that millage.

"A millage is definitely the way for counties to go," said Antrim County COA director Carol Mitchell. "So much is being held back from state and federal sources and cutbacks are constant so that a millage is a way to make sure a certain amount of money flows in."

Charlevoix's COA relies on county, state and federal monies to run its agency. About $80,000 comes the county's general budget and the remainder of the COA's $320,000 comes from a variety of state and federal grants, Walls said.

The competition for government funds is a catch-22, Blanchard said.

"It's the programs you offer that you get money for, but if you have no money, you can't get any of the programs started," she said.

Walls said starting a COA senior millage has been discussed at various times, but never became a "prime issue."

"I think we're doing quite well with the programs we're offering now," he said. "If we have any new ideas that we want to get started, then we'll probably at least talk about it."

In addition to expanding the scope of its respite care, Bergmann would like to begin a chore service program, which offers help with labor tasks like mowing the grass or shoveling the driveway. She also wants to work on a county senior center, offer recreational trips for seniors and offer more affordable assisted living. As a registered nurse, she would also like to take over assessment duties and administration chores for each of the COA's cases. Now, Munson Home Health Care handles those duties.

"The COA has never run on its own," Bergmann said. "I'd like to figure out how to become more independent and a more thorough commission."

Bergmann, a native of Maine, began her nursing career in 1980. She worked in Fairbanks, Alaska as a labor delivery nurse as well as working in the infirmaries of the Alaska State Department of Corrections.

In Alaska, she met her husband, Charlevoix native Dan Bergmann. The couple moved back to Charlevoix in 1990 and she began her current job for the local health department. The couple lives in Hayes Township with their 13-year-old daughter Brenna. Bergmann recently earned her bachelor of arts degree in nursing through Lake Superior State University.

Giving of oneself — literally — for a good friend

By Jamie MacMillan

Jane Bremmeyr (left) shares a moment of friendship with Diane YoungeDyke, who is donating a kidney to Bremmeyr this week. (Photo by Jamie MacMillan)

At some point this summer, local resident Jane Bremmeyr will roll out of her sleeping bag, take in a healthy breath of the outdoor air and proceed to spend the whole day teaching her 3-year-old grandson Parker the finer arts of fishing.

With grandfather Terry in tow, the trio will idle their day away and, if lady luck shines on them, Parker might just land his first big trout. If not, they'll just relocate to another stream or lake.

"We'll just put the canoe on top of the car, and away we go," she said.

That fishing/camping trip will take place some time this summer because of a remarkable friendship between longtime co-workers whose boundaries in helping each other has proven limitless.

Bremmeyr has battled kidney disease most of her life, but now the 59-year-old needs an organ transplant to stay alive. Her family members couldn't help because of different blood types and other physical reasons.

While Bremmeyr never doubted she would find a donor, it still came as a surprise when her friend of 22 years stepped to the plate.

"I had absolutely no hesitancy to offer her my kidney," Diane YoungeDyke said. "I come from a medical family and it says I'm an organ donor on the back of my license. I'm glad to be the one who could do this for her."

YoungeDyke and Bremmeyr became friends over two decades ago when they started working together for the Charlevoix County State Bank. A couple of mergers later (the bank is now called Citizens Bank) the pair remain on the job where Bremmeyr is a teller and YoungeDyke is regional service manager.

"I cried," Bremmeyr said recalling when the pair decided to go forward with this endeavor. "I did tell her that it's not something I can give back."

The pair are in Ann Arbor this week at the University of Michigan medical facilities undergoing the seven-hour transplant procedure. Ironically, YoungeDyke, the donor, will have the largest incision cut into her body.

Both have been told to expect a month of rest and rehabilitation, but both said that afterward they will return to their jobs.

Bremmeyr found herself in her current condition after battling kidney disease most of her life. About 10 years ago, her condition began to worsen and she began swelling and some of her body functions began to decline. When her functions were reduced to 90 percent capacity, she went on a salt-free diet. Her decline continued steadily over the next decade. Two years ago her kidneys were functioning at 40 percent capacity and she eliminated proteins from her diet.

The human kidneys are lined with feather-like filters. Each kidney has about 100 of those feathers, but Bremmeyr's condition has declined to the point where she

OPINIONS

Spring cleaning produces interesting, outdated cookbook

EDITH

EDITH GILBERT

It's a good thing that some people start their spring cleaning earlier than others.

Thanks to my industrious neighbor, Vicky Voisin, I am now the proud possessor of an outdated cookbook called "Tender Lovin' Cookin'." This was a Charlevoix Hospital fund-raising project, published in 1978 by the employees and members of the hospital family. The reason she gave me the outdated book instead of pitching it, is because there were several recipes in it from my mother including one for "Koenigsgratz Dumplings." If you like capers you're in luck because this bland recipe calls for a half a bottle. Still, I'm not sure that I will ever try that recipe or any of the others in the future.

Ninety percent of the recipes point out clearly how food fashions have dramatically changed along with beehive hair-do's and long sideburns.

The book is filled with recipes passed down from the depression era of the 1930s, when, and I quote from Anne Mendelson's book, "Stand Facing The Stove," "The spokeswomen of the big commercial food processors invented new products at an amazing rate and worked hard to explain them to people... like the pineapple distributors, who happily passed along formulas for (Heaven help me), biscuits, scrambled eggs, French toast, baked stuffed tomatoes and frozen cheese salad... all featuring pineapple or pineapple juice!"

In addition to the pineapple addiction of the day, the 1930s cook was lost without packages of cream cheese, miniature marshmallows, lime Jello, bottled Worcestershire sauce, and assorted cans of cream of mushroom, tomato, celery or chicken soup. There were darned few seasonings or spices such as ginger, paprika or herbs to be found on the pre-microwave kitchen shelves.

"Tender Lovin' Cookin'" reflects this ready-to-serve, tin can era by offering us such tempting recipes, believe it or not, as a Hobo Roast, a Coke Cake, a Refrigerator Cracker Cake, Cornflake Apple Pudding, Roadside Potatoes, Applesauce Jello, and of course, for salad, a combination of canned pineapple and canned beets!

Publishing a cookbook is no easy task, especially one that is kitchen-tested. I used to think, when I was learning to cook, that short recipes are merely the ones with the skimpiest instructions. Many cookbooks are bought on impulse and never used, and others like "Joy Of Cooking" are dog-eared and treasured for a lifetime.

Today we have the opportunity to cook from scratch and select fresh produce from all over the world, an unparalleled blessing. The last time we experienced such a food upheaval was during the 16th century when East met West, and noodles were imported to Italy from China and tomatoes from the New World, resulting in original popular dishes that we still enjoy today — spaghetti and lasagna! Ethnic restaurants are flourishing and still experimenting in blending new dishes like Italian Sushi, and both men and women are experimenting in modern kitchens using uncommon roots, peppers, and fruits never before available in local supermarkets.

Rumor has it that Charlevoix's Beta Sigma Phi sorority is coming out with an attractive, updated cookbook for charity this summer. It sounds as if this book may be a keeper. It will include recipes of a few local restaurants such as Monte Bianco, Grey Gables and Tapawingo, the Rowe Inn, etc., as well as a section on Healthy Alternatives, featuring oils and spices, and a Kid Section. So take a tip from Vicky Voisin and pitch those outdated cookbooks and make room on your shelf for some of the truly challenging books on the market that reflect today's healthier food fashions.

Letters to the editor

Law enforcement agencies do a great job

To the Editor,

I am the owner of the Flight Deck and Paul Bunyan Lanes in Charlevoix. On the morning of Thursday, March 19, 1998, over a year ago, I was told by my cleaning staff that the business had been broken into and robbed overnight. What a way to start your day! After picking myself up off the floor, I headed to the business to see what the extent of the damages were. To look into my office and see the destruction caused only made me feel worse.

From that point on, things turned around. Sgt. Owens from the Charlevoix County Sheriffs Department was already on location gathering what evidence he could. Soon after, Deputy Hague and Deputy Reeves arrived to assist. After all was collected, they allowed me to start putting the pieces still strewn about back together and start the day's business as usual. If there is such a thing as "business as usual" after something like this.

Later in the morning I received a call from one of my managers. She said that The Lodge desk manager had called and said some items that may belong to the business had been found by the housekeeping staff in one of the guest rooms they were cleaning. Almost immediately, Deputy Hague sent Detective Wheat to The Lodge to continue to investigate. Charlevoix City Police officers were also sent because Alexander's restaurant had also been burglarized overnight. Things happened fast from there. On Friday, in Indian River, off duty Tuscarora Twp. officer Feagan spotted the suspect that had stayed in the room at The Lodge. He was assisted by Tuscarora Twp. Chief Wagner and officer Towers in apprehending the subject.

I know that all of the officers and agencies involved would say, "It's all part of the job." But I feel all of these people went above and beyond the call of duty to investigate, apprehend, and recover most of the items taken.

Others who I know were involved are Charlevoix Police Department officers Shrift, Meredith and Schlappi, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Sproul and Deputy S. Sproul, Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and her staff, Cheboygan County Dep. Bregge, Emmet County Dep. Arman, and 911. And, had it not been for the housekeeping staff at The Lodge, this man may not have been apprehended.

All of northern Michigan can be proud of the jobs these agencies are doing for the communities they serve. Thank you all, for all you have done.

Competition between schools should lead to better academics

Editor:

An open letter to the Charlevoix Board of Education President Allen Telgenhof:

I was both surprised and shocked to read your comments about the potential cooperative agreement between Northwest Academy and the larger public school regarding athletic programs. You indicated that you were not in favor of a cooperative effort by stating, "We want what both schools can offer to be a factor when parents decide where to send their kids. Nobody is saying let's stick it to the charter school, but I do think it's important to keep in the back of our minds that we are in a competitive environment... it is the environment Governor Engler has put our schools in."

It sounds to me like you have missed the concept behind Governor Engler's initiative entirely. The effort is to offer our children a choice of schools, based on where their academic needs are more fully met for their individual circumstances. This should promote academic competition in a positive sense, stimulating each school and each individual teacher to put forth their best effort. As in all areas of business, competition can be healthy and a positive experience, bringing forth an ever evolving and more beneficial product or service.

Instead of competing on an athletic basis for students, I would think it a more positive experience if you would compete for students on an excellence-in-academics basis. Don't bar the Northwest Academy students from athletics, just to put pressure on them to change academic environments. Lure them back to your school with an excellent academic program. I challenge you, Mr. Telgenhof, and the rest of the board of education, to help create positive competition, fostering academic excellence. Then we will all benefit.

Being sued shouldn't affect judgment of township board

Editor:

To: The Marion Township Board

Subject: Zoning meeting 3/15/99

It seems that Mr. Reibel has circumvented zoning regulations by going to court and thus may be able to build whatever he wants. The storage buildings will hurt property values. The development is against the wishes of the neighbors and is a violation of current zoning regulations according to our understanding of the rules.

Is it wise to allow one person to have such a detrimental effect upon the lives and property values of so many members of our community?

We hope you will agree to our position and turn down his request to any changes to current zoning regulations.

Sincerely,
Virginia and Richard Lepman

Elementary school music director deserves prize

Dear Editor,

Marina LaBlance deserves to be named Charlevoix's Citizen of the Year.

Once again she has produced, organized and given to our community her annual Elementary School Spring Musical. This year the theme was Come Swing With Us To That Big Band Sound. The Up North Big Band made the music.

What a heart-warming spectacle. Imagine getting 612 children to stand up, sit down, file to the gym floor, and then dance!! Together!! Incredible. All 36 teachers helped, showing pride in each child and loving every moment of it.

It was another shining example of what's good about our Charlevoix.

It proved, too, what a sound school system we have, with teachers that can support such a project and bring out each student's unique talents.

Certainly, Marina LaBlance deserves to be named Charlevoix Citizen of the Year.

Please spread the word.

Friends of John Miller Music Festival give thanks to helpers

Dear Editor:

Family and Friends of the 1999 John Miller Music Festival would like to thank the many businesses and individuals who donated so generously to the festival for the Kids of Camp Quality.

We were able to raise $6,000 for the Kids of Camp Quality Michigan.

We found that many people still did not know who or what Camp Quality was. It's a non-profit, volunteer organization, providing camping experiences, and year-round support and much more for children with cancer.

Sincerely Thank You,
Family and Friends of the John Miller Music Fest Committee

Cedar Ridge landfill should not be expanded

Dear Editor:

Attention Citizens! Waste Management is at it again. About a year ago the Charlevoix County planners denied a request by Waste Management to expand the Cedar Ridge landfill. Waste Management is appealing that decision to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ).

The DEQ will hear input on this important issue at 7 p.m. Monday, March 29 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 15144 Bells Bay Road, Charlevoix. If you are a member of Watch and/or signed the petition opposing expansion of the landfill, it is extremely important that you attend this meeting. We must act now to protect the Lake Charlevoix and the Nowland Lake watershed.

If you have any questions, please call Jerry Puhl, 547-9084 or Nancy Ferguson, 547-2285. Plan to attend the public hearing and bring a friend!

Sincerely,
Jerry Puhl, president

Obituaries

Henry P. Supernaw

Life long Charlevoix resident Henry P. Supernaw passed away late Sunday, March 21, 1999, at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Mr. Supernaw was in the presence of his family at the time of his death.

A funeral mass will be celebrated at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix on Wednesday, March 24, 1999 at 2:00 p.m. Father Thomas Neis will be the pastor. Burial will be at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mr. Supernaw — known to most as "Supie" — was born May 13, 1915 in the village of Norwood to William and Sadie (Olmstead) Supernaw. They moved to Charlevoix where he graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1933. On Jan. 6, 1940, he married Elvira Gillespie of Beaver Island. They were married until Sept. 16, 1994 when she preceded him in death.

Henry was a butcher by trade, and owned and operated Supernaw's Grocery Store in Charlevoix from 1945 until 1959. He then was a cook on the Steamer John L.A. Galster and the Medusa Challenger for many years. His work-related activities were concluded as a school bus driver for the Charlevoix Public Schools from 1978 until 1990, when he retired.

"Supie" was a member of the Masonic Lodge, yet — for many years, because of his Beaver Island connection — was the chief cook and bottle washer along with his brother-in-law Emil Pischner and Captain Edwin McCann at the St. Patrick's Day dinner at St. Mary's in Charlevoix. He was an incredible softball pitcher (The Knight Owls) and also served many years on the Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department. He was with the original group that developed the Mt. McSauba Ski Hill and also was a founder of the Alano Club in Charlevoix. "Supie" was a friend of Bill W. for the past 21 years, for which he credited his longevity. He was a dedicated family man and was loved by many.

Henry is survived is his son, William J. "Supie, Jr." Supernaw, Mary Janice (Donald) O'Brien, Arlene Grace (Terry) Blissett and Julie Kay Supernaw, all of Charlevoix, and Linda Ann (Dennie) Warner of Swartz Creek. Other survivors include grandchildren Donald (Heather) O'Brien, John (Jennifer) O'Brien, Christopher (Amy) Warner, Lindsey Warner, Tricia Blissett (Tim) Petrosky, Travis Blissett, Rebecca Blissett and Jennifer Supernaw. Also surviving is sister-in-law Lucille Osborne of Williamsburg, Iowa. He was also preceded in death by a son, Robert Allen, in 1945; sisters Genevieve Smith and Arelyne Coleman; and by his brothers William I and Jack Supernaw.

Memorials may be made to the Intensive Care Unit of Charlevoix Area Hospital or to the Alano Club in Charlevoix.

Margery H. Malone

Margery H. Malone, 76, of Charlevoix, died Sunday, March 21, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Funeral service was at 11:00 a.m. Wed., March 24, at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Reverend Philip G. Schairbaum of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix officiated. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery.

Margery was born on March 30, 1922, in Menominee, Mich., the daughter of Edward and Ethelyn (Morrison) Edwards. She was raised in Charlevoix and attended Charlevoix High School, graduating in 1940. She went on to receive nurses' training at Henry Ford Hospital.

At the age of 27, Margery moved to Lansing where she worked for several private practice physicians. She also worked in the Jacksonville area and did clinical research.

Margery returned to Charlevoix in 1984, where she was a member of the First Congregational Church.

She is survived by one son, Paul E. Malone and his wife, Barbara, and granddaughter, Tess Malone, all of North Oaks, Minn.

Memorials may be made to the First Congregational Church. Envelopes for that purpose are available at the Winchester Funeral Home.

Barbara J. White

Barbara J. White, 73, of Charlevoix, died March 20, 1999, at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The funeral service was Tuesday, March 23, at Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Dale P. Ostema of the Charlevoix United Methodist Church officiated. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery, Charlevoix.

Barbara was born May 2, 1925, in Charlevoix, the daughter of Jake and Hazel (Cross) White. She graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1943.

Barbara worked as a controller in guest services at Sequoia National Park in California, retiring in 1992.

She was a member of the Charlevoix United Methodist Church.

Survivors include two brothers, Jake "Chum" White and Marc (Donna) White, all of Charlevoix; one sister, Ruth Currall, of Arizona; five nieces, Kathy Agnello, Debbie Ogg, Lisa Johnson, Barbara Lundholm and Helen Earls; and one nephew, Mark Jr.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to Charlevoix United Methodist Church or to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Church offers Palm Sunday concert

The Charlevoix Area Community Chorale and soloists will present Theodore Dubois' "The Seven Last Words of Christ," and excerpts of Leo Sowerby's "Forsaken of Man" at 4:00 p.m. on Palm Sunday, March 28 as one of the Sundays at Four concert series offered by the Charlevoix Congregational Church.

"The Seven Last Words of Christ" was composed 132 years ago by Dubois, who was considered a representative of the classical school of French musicians. The gospel narrative of the work depicts the last hours of Christ and its lovely lyrical lines, as well as its furious crucifixion choruses, have made it a popular cantata with choirs and audiences.

The Lenten cantata "Forsaken of Man" by the contemporary American composer Leo Sowerby, earned him the prestigious Prix de Roma. Dubois succeeded the composer Camille Saint-Saens as organist at Madeleine, the cathedral in Rheims, France. Sowerby, considered the outstanding composer of sacred music of our generation, was organist and choir master at Washington Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

Returning as soloists are Mark Puchala, tenor, Jeffery Norris, bass-baritone, and lyric soprano, Debra Lehmann.

Mark Puchala is chair of the vocal department at Northwestern Michigan College, director of its chorale and director of the Northwestern Michigan Boy's Choir. He has appeared most recently with the Charlevoix Area Community Chorale in the Mozart Requiem.

Jeffery Norris, bass-baritone, is a versatile musician, equally comfortable in opera, oratorio and chamber music. He was enthusiastically received as a member of the "Charlevoix Opera Night" artists. Debra Lehmann, Lyric Soprano, from the Grand Rapids area is making her first appearance with the Chorale. Ellen Addington, Director of Music at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix will conduct Sunday's performance and Elizabeth Humphrey will be organist.

A reception will follow the concert. There is no charge but a free will offering will be accepted. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Student teacher helps direct school band

Stacie Kristick

When the Charlevoix High School and Middle School bands perform their spring concerts in May, a new face will be at the podium conducting the budding musicians.

Stacie Kristick, a student-teacher from Central Michigan University, has been tutoring students in band director Raphael Rittenhouse's classes and will conduct the bands in a number of musical pieces during the spring concert Thursday, May 20 in the high school gymnasium.

While the program for the spring concert isn't finalized, Kristick's portion of the performance will include leading the sixth graders in "Songs of the Sea" and "March Militaire," the seventh graders in "Alto Rhapsody" and a percussion ensemble in "The Evening News."

"It'll be different, I'm used to being a performer," the 24-year-old said. "I do like to interpret music, and I look at this as my turn to do that."

A native of Yale, Mich., Kristick graduated from Yale High School in 1993 and is slated to earn her B.A. degree in musical education this spring from Central Michigan University.

At CMU, Kristick was a section leader for three years in the school's marching band, played first chair clarinet for CMU's Wind Symphony and was the fourth chair overall among 30 clarinetists in the school's general orchestra.

Kristick is using her skills as a clarinet player to form a clarinet choir among high school students, which is also expected to perform during this spring's concert.

"The instrument has one of the better sounds," she said. "Its range goes as low as a tuba and as high as a piccolo."

Giving a kidney to a friend in need only has two such filters in one of her kidneys.

As her kidneys kept slipping, she continually asked herself, "What's going on?" She said she never lost hope.

"It's all about mind over matter," she said. "You just don't quit. You just keep going — who else is going to do it for you?"

"I'm happy I've been able to make it the last two years, but my body is telling me that it's getting to be time to do this."

When told she would require a transplant for survival, Bremmeyr wasn't prepared to ask anyone. How in the world do you bring up a need like that, she said. Her doctor had to give her a big pep talk in order to get her to ask anyone.

Both Bremmeyr and YoungeDyke said the experience has opened their eyes toward the issue of organ donations.

"It can do so much good for people, but not everyone can be comfortable with it," YoungeDyke said. "For those who are even considering it, I would say to look into it a little more."

Bremmeyr encouraged anyone who wants to put themselves on a donor list for their organs after death to talk to their family about the issue.

"I can't imagine having to make that decision for a loved one," she said.

Going into this week's surgery, Bremmeyr said her energy levels are low. She's short of breath and moving a little slow. She's anxious to assess to post-surgery condition and YoungeDyke can't wait to see her friend with more bounce and energy.

"I want to know the difference," Bremmeyr said. "Is it going to be better than yesterday?"

If there is a difference, it no doubt will mean trouble for the local trout population.

Local dental group rolls up their sleeves in Jamaica

Left: Dr. David Strawbridge, working on a patient with hygienist Lori Ivester, called the dental work they faced in Jamaica both hard and brutal.

By Jamie MacMillan

A week after returning from the slums of Jamaica, David Strawbridge easily summed the plight of that island's natives.

"They have basic needs. Food, clothes, a roof over their head are their first priorities," the local dentist said. "Dental care, literally, is a luxury."

Strawbridge was part of a local sextet who provided that luxury to residents in Jamaica's poorest borough. A trio of dental hygienists, Jeannie Seymour, Lori Ivester and Terri Bergmann, accompanied Strawbridge, as did his wife, Beth, and Ivester's husband, Matt. Seymour and Ivester work with Strawbridge in Charlevoix while Bergmann works with another local dentist, Jay Balasz.

Their destination was Kingston, the island's capital, and the dental team did their work on the city's east side in a reputable neighborhood dubbed by the locals as the murder capital of Kingston.

The days were hot, punctuated by the burning stench of garbage. A blue haze from that garbage hung in the air and wafted indoors through the many open windows. At night, with the smell of burnt trash still hovering, dogs, which all the residents have for protection, began an all-night barking session. As dawn approached, native roosters joined the canines in the noise-making.

Amid all this resides a woman dubbed as the Hopester. Hope Fox oversees the Caribbean United Evangeline Clinic, a local medical outlet that tries to cover the neighborhood health needs. The clinic is associated with many American churches with a northern Michigan affiliation through David Behling, pastor at Northern Michigan Hospitals. Behling has been responsible for connecting the clinic with a handful of visiting medical teams from the Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

Strawbridge's crew was the first dental team to venture to the clinic and for everyone involved it was an eye-opening first experience. Arriving at Hope's clinic, they found a fly-by-night, but serviceable operation. They had two chairs available and were shown early on about the equipment differences as they tried to manage an awkward, hand-held X-ray machine.

As desperate as the natives were for dental care, they were very patient and waited all day, starting at 8 a.m., to get their turn in one of the chairs. Kingston, as a city, has a shortage of dentists, Strawbridge said. Kingston has 70 dentists in a city of 1.1 million people. Charlevoix, for example, has five registered dentists in a city of 3,200.

In four days of work, the dental crew helped 77 patients, doing 99 extractions and 50 fillings. Strawbridge described the action as "brutal, hard dental work."

Strawbridge admitted that he has become accustomed to the condition of teeth in most American's mouths. Maintaining good dental hygiene is a main factor in American lives and the problems he faced in Jamaica went way beyond the dental work he does on his local patients. Of those he helped in Kingston, most were lucky to still have half of their teeth, but, even in those cases, the remaining teeth were scattered throughout the mouth.

"Halfway through the third day, one lady came in with the most rampant decay I'd seen in 25 years," Strawbridge said. "I just cried."

The locals were able to find refuge in their long, spiritual church services. The dental crew attended a pair of three hour services which were highlighted by singing, clapping and dancing.

"Everyone came away from that really uplifted," Strawbridge said of the services. "They look at church as one diversion that's a positive in their lives."

Seymour said she hopes other local dentists pick up their lead and aid Hope's clinic.

"There are so many people with so many needs," she said.

The local doctor said that what they did was only a "drop in the bucket" in terms of goodwill. They plan to pour more into that bucket with return visits.

"Where I am in my life, I'd like to do this on a yearly basis," Strawbridge said. "Everyone wants to give back and this was a rewarding experience for all of us."

Local golf course design firm wins annual association award

Furness Golf Construction Co., of Charlevoix, was named Golf Course Small Builder of the Year, at the recent Golf Course Builders Association of America banquet in Orlando, Fla.

Furness was honored for its construction work for such courses as the Wuskowhan Players Club in West Olive, Mich. and for the new Arcadia Bluffs Golf Course, also designed by Rich Smith, that will open this summer in Arcadia, just north of Manistee, Mich.

Receiving his honor, company President Tim Furness thanked Rick Smith and Senior Designer Warren Henderson of Rich Smith Golf Course Design.

"Thank you for allowing us to build your great golf courses," Furness said.

Furness Golf Construction won in the category for builders completing fewer than four 18-hole courses in 1998. Furness finished at 79.2 out of a possible 80 points.

Charlevoix rolls to a regional title

The Charlevoix Rayders won two very different games en route to earning the school's first regional title since 1983.

In the semifinal game with Whittemore-Prescott, the Rayders were losing most of the game while in the championship contest against Manton, they staked out to an early lead and never relinquished it.

Against the Cardinals, the Rayders had to scrape back from an 11-point deficit with only three minutes remaining in regulation or they would have been eliminated from the tournament.

Five players scored during an 11-0 run which sparked the Rayders to a 17-15 lead after the first quarter. Most of the cheering the rest of the way, however, echoed from the Whittemore side of the arena as their Cardinals slowly built a double digit lead headed into the game's waning minutes.

The game was tied six different times in the second stanza before a 9-4 spurt by the Cardinals ended the half to give them a 36-31 intermission edge.

Charlevoix quickly sliced the margin to a point with consecutive hoops to open the second half, but the Cardinals reeled off the next seven points for a 43-35 lead. The Cardinals scored the third quarter's final four points to maintain an eight point bulge, 53-45, headed to the final frame.

Each attempt in the final quarter that the Rayders made to inch closer to the lead seemed to be thwarted by the Cardinals. A trey by Adam Wood was answered by a Cardinal 3-point make. After Charlevoix stole an inbounds pass for an easy deuce, the Cardinals drilled an acrobatic basket plus an ensuing free throw after a foul call. When Charlevoix created a critical turnover on a 10-second call, the Cardinals' defense forced a Charlevoix turnover.

Charlevoix turned the ball over 23 times, including five traveling violations in the first quarter. It set a sloppy tone for the game and with 44 seconds to go and a 75-70 deficit those lost possessions loomed big.

Lady Luck then donned the maroon and white. Justin Thorp scored a lay-up and a Cardinal player was whistled with an intentional foul. Thorp hit one free throw to trim the advantage to 75-73, but Charlevoix maintained possession because of the intentional call.

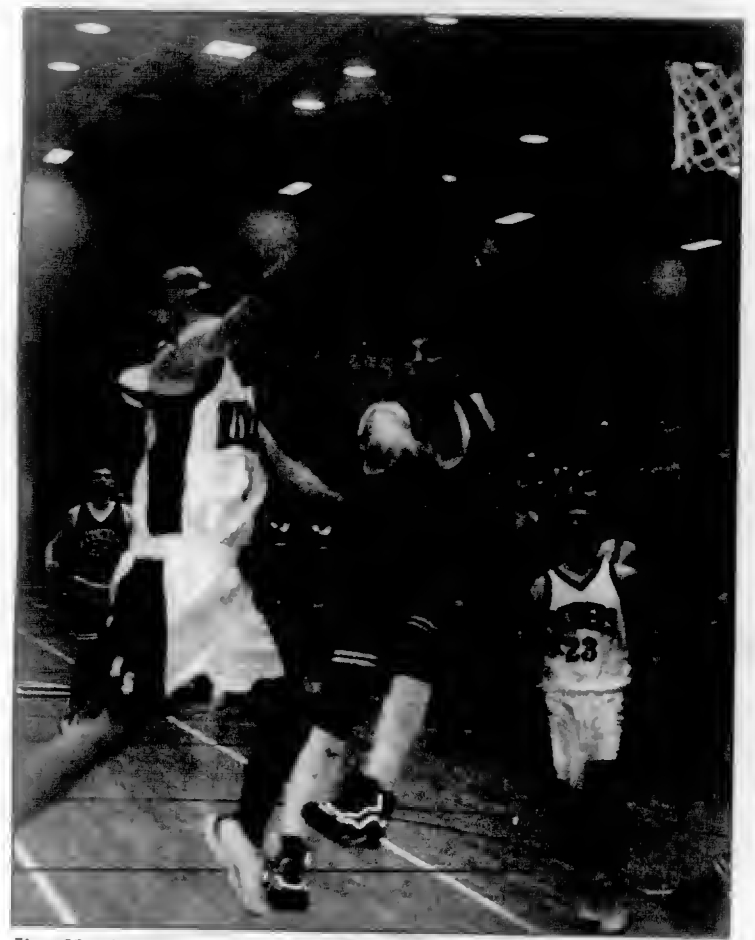
Working off the left side of the key, Charlevoix's Matt McClellan faked left then drove right for a scoop shot which tied the game. Matt Dennis secured a defensive rebound after a Cardinal attempt at the goal failed, setting up Charlevoix for a possible game winning shot.

Jim Kanine found himself double teamed, but escaped a turnover by passing to Wood. Wood then flipped the ball down court where a streaking Thorp corralled it and laid it in the goal for the game winner.

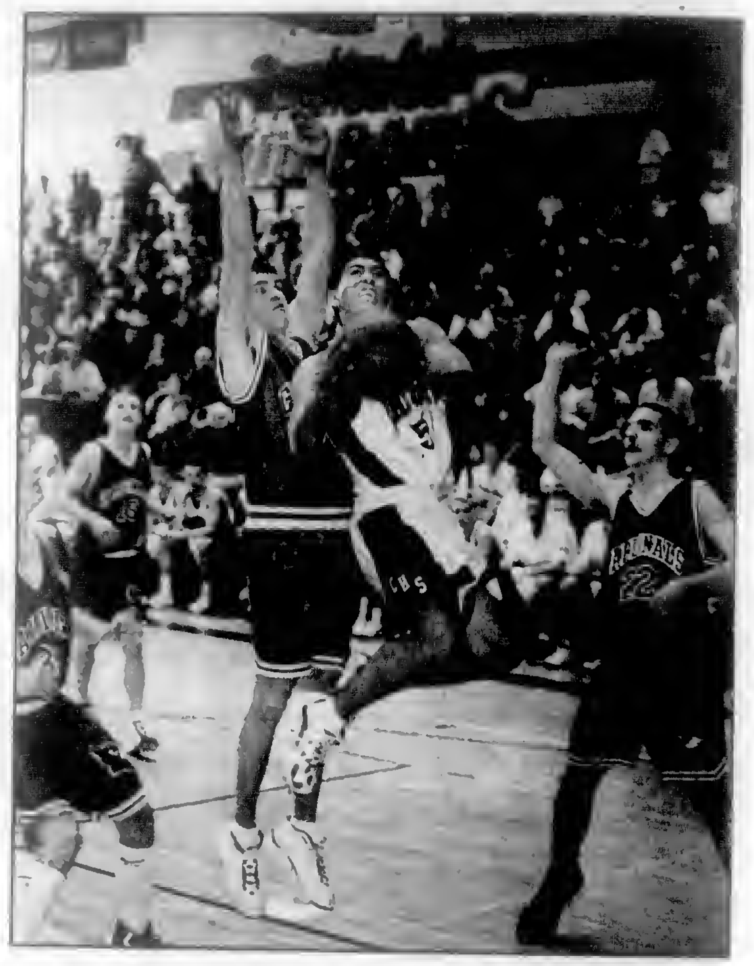
In the finals, Charlevoix trailed only once, 3-2., and held advantages of 15-13, 28-26, and 40-35 at the quarter breaks. The game was a defensive struggle, and Charlevoix could never totally shake the Rangers who were the defending regional champions.

The Rayders appeared to break through with a 7-0 run midway through the final frame. Sean Stockman scored off the offensive glass, Wood hit his fifth trey of the game and McClellan intercepted a pass and took it the other way for a Charlevoix hoop to stake the Rayders to a 47-37 lead.

After Manton trimmed the lead in half, Dennis scored a pair of buckets, both on assists from Kanine and Thorp canned three free throws to ice the win and put Charlevoix in the state quarterfinals for the first time in 16 years.



Jim Kanine drives hard to the goal. He scored nine points in the Rayders' regional wins last week, but the steady floor leader dished two key assists down the stretch in the championship game, won by Charlevoix 54-48 over Manton.



Matt McClellan hangs between a trio of defenders during last week's semifinal game. McClellan scored 12 points in the come from behind 77-75 win over Whittemore-Prescott.

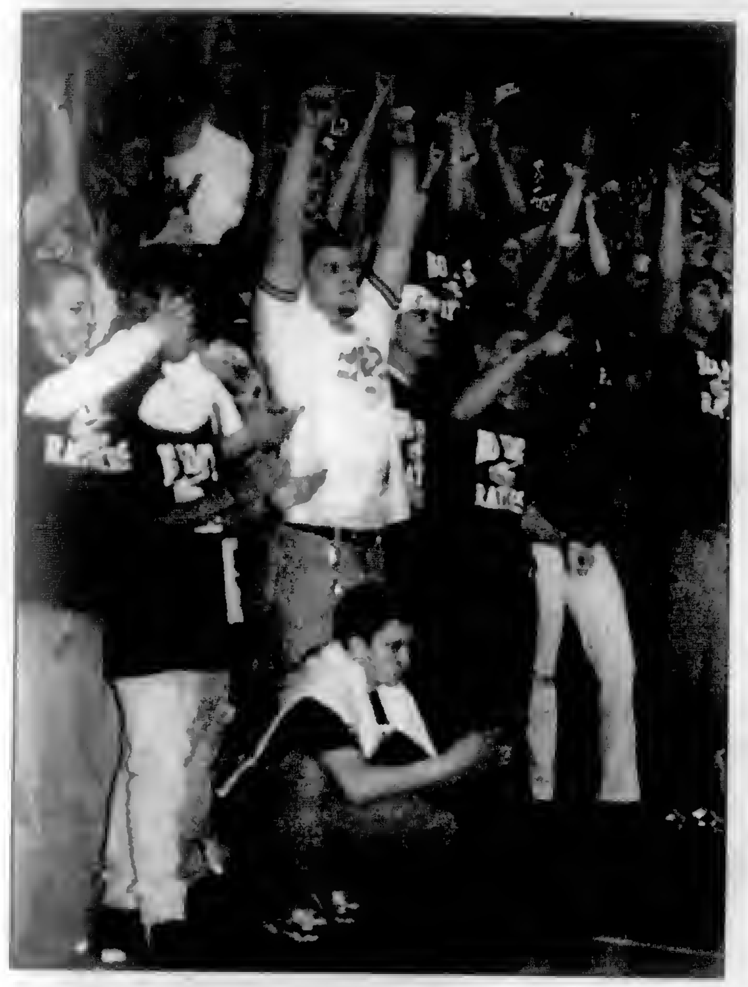
SPORTS



Hundreds and hundreds of Charlevoix fans packed the Houghton Lake gym during regional play last week. The Rayders made fans nervous by falling behind in the semifinals, but in the finals there was no anxiety, just celebration, like this group of students showed after the Rayders canned a 3-pointer. School board will create a facility committee

By Jamie MacMillan

Despite working in closed session for 45 minutes at the end of their meeting Monday evening, the Charlevoix Board of Education didn't inch any closer to securing land for a possible facility project.

The board did discuss three different properties, but board president Allen Telgenhof gave no comment regarding the lands' locations other than saying that one was in town and the other two were out-of-town locations.

He cautioned that the board is only in the preliminary stages regarding these properties and that the board isn't even sure if any of the parcels are for sale.

"We're in a targeting stage," he said. "We wanted some feedback on how to approach the landowners."

Previously, the board's focus regarding land options had centered around a quartet of properties: eight acres between Division and Petoskey streets across from the Community Reformed Church, a series of parcels along May Street, a triangular parcel north of town bordered by U.S. 31, Waller and Martin roads and along Old Orchard Road across from the Charlevoix Township Hall.

Telgenhof said the board did not address those properties. He did say that enthusiasm is waning regarding the May Street properties and the eight acres across from the Reformed Church because the board doesn't want "to squeeze a school onto a piece of land."

The idea of returning to the M-66 property along Wickersham and Shaw roads also appears to be finally falling by the wayside.

"I think that's a dead deal," the board president said. "There was no discussion about it last night."

Prior to the closed session, the board began initial discussions regarding the set-up of a steering committee which will help guide the board toward an eventual facility plan.

Using results from the facility forum earlier this month, the board wants this new committee to create solutions for three highlighted problems: overcrowding at the elementary school, the outdated middle school and the lack of auditorium facilities.

After the committee comes back to the board with viable solutions, then the board will send out a postcard survey to district voters to get a feel for what they would support.

"It's one last piece of information," Superintendent John Sturock said.

The board would like to have at least 20 people on the committee, including an administrator and staff member from each of the district's three schools.

Board members were charged Monday night with the task of coming up with at least three community members who they think would be interested and effective serving on the committee. The goal is to get a wide range of people, including parents from all three schools, business and church leaders, and senior citizens.

The board will meet at 7 a.m. Wednesday, March 31 to exchange names and plans to unveil the committee names during its next regular session at 7 p.m. Monday, April 12.

Performing at the top

A quartet of musicians from Charlevoix recently took top honors during regional competition last month. Heading to state competition will be (from left) Caitlin Dulaney, Dena Sheldon, Lori Stargardt and Marcy Bennett. All four are soloists with Sheldon, Stardgardt and Bennett playing the flute while Dulaney plays the clarinet.

STATE OF MICHIGAN ANNUAL TAX SALE

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX

ORDER FOR HEARING

No. 98-1567-18-PZ

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

The State Treasurer has petitioned this court for a judgment in favor of the State, against each parcel of land described in Schedule A, for the unpaid taxes, interest and charges on each parcel of land, and that the lands be sold for the amounts claimed due by the State.

It is ordered that the petition will be brought on for hearing and judgment at the April term of this court, to be held at Charlevoix, in the County of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of April, 1999.

At the opening of Court on that day, all persons who have an interest in the lands or any part thereof, who wish to contest the lien claimed by the State, shall appear in this Court and file their objections with the clerk on or before the first day of the term of this Court mentioned above, and a judgment will be made as requested in the petition if the amounts due are not paid.

It is further ordered that the lands described in the petition, will be sold for the taxes, interest and charges on the first Tuesday in May thereafter, beginning at 10:00 A.M. on that day or days after, that are necessary to complete the sale of each parcel, at the office of the County Treasurer, or at a location selected by the Treasurer, at the County seat of the County mentioned above.

This sale will be open to the public and each parcel described in the judgment shall be separately offered for sale and sold to the person who pays the full amount charged against the parcel and accepts the smallest undivided interest in the property. Any parcel of land that is not sold on the first offering shall be reoffered on the succeeding day, or before the close of the sale. If not sold on the second offering the County Treasurer shall bid off the parcel in the name of the State.

Witness the Hon. Richard M. Pajtas, Circuit Judge, and the seal of the said Circuit Court of Charlevoix County this 1st day of February 1999.

Countersigned, Cecelia Borths, Deputy
Richard M. Pajtas, Judge

STATE TREASURER PETITION

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF CHARLEVOIX.

In the matter of the Petition of the State Treasurer of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for unpaid property taxes.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix

Mark A. Murray, State Treasurer of Michigan, shows unto the court:

1. That he is the Treasurer of Michigan and files this petition under the provisions of P.A. 206 of 1893, as amended, and P.A. 380 of 1965, as amended.

2. That the attached Schedule A is the tax record required by the act and contains the description of all lands in the above county upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein and have remained unpaid for more then one year after they were returned delinquent or for land identified as certified special residential property under section 55a, 90 days after the lands were returned as delinquent.

3. That the amounts opposite each description of land are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes which may lawfully be sold at the next annual tax sale, (b) interest calculated as provided by law to the first day of May, (c) a county property tax administration fee of four percent, with a minimum of $1.00, and $10.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the act mentioned above.

4. That all of the taxes, interest and charges are valid and have remained delinquent for sufficient time to require the sale of the lands against which they were assessed at the next annual tax sale, and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land, and that a judgment be issued in favor of the State against the land for the payment of the amounts specified, and if not paid, that the lands be sold.

Therefore your plaintiff requests:

a. That within the time provided by law this court determines that the taxes, interest, and charges on lands described in Schedule A are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the parcels of land.

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final judgment in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of land for the payment of the taxes, interest, and charges, in Schedule A, and that the amounts in the column headed "Aggregate" shall constitute the amounts adjudged against the lands, unless amended by this court;

c. That if the amounts in the schedule are not paid, the lands, or the portion that is necessary to satisfy the amount adjudged against the lands, shall be offered separately at the tax sale as the law provides;

d. That your plaintiff may have such other and further relief that this court finds just and equitable.

It was a swinging time at the Spring Musical

Elementary school music director Marina LaBlance leads the entire elementary school student body during the opening song of the school's spring musical.

First grade students Alli Telgenhof and Doug Reynolds ham it up for the camera during the dress rehearsal last week. (Photos by Jamie MacMillan)

EVENTS IN BRIEF

Volunteer speakers available for older citizens

The nation's leading organization for people age 50 and older is now operating a Speakers Bureau in Michigan. AARP and its network of trained volunteers throughout the state are offering to give presentations on a wide range of policy concerns including financial protection, home modification, Medicare and Medicare Options, Long-Term Care, and Telemarketing Fraud.

"AARP has a fundamental commitment to informing the public about trends and issues affecting the experience of aging," said AARP Acting State President Leila Burney. "The Baby Boom is rapidly becoming the Senior Boom. Our newly formed Speakers Bureau gives us the opportunity to share important information and perspective on key issues in the lives of Seniors and their families."

Civic and fraternal organizations interested in making arrangements for an AARP speaker to appear before their group should contact the AARP Michigan State Office at (517) 482-2772.

Car wash offered by firefighters

The Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighter Association will host a car wash from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, April 3 at the fire station, 210 State St. in Charlevoix. Cost for the car wash is by donation.

Abstinence training program offered

The Abstinence Partnership of Northwest Michigan is hosting a "train the trainer" program for anyone interested in providing the "Can We Talk?" parent education program for parents. It will be from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday, March 25 at the Community Health Education Center on the Northern Michigan Hospital campus. There is no charge to attend the training.

"This is a great opportunity for PTOs, churches, and anyone working with parents," said Jane Sundmacher, from the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, "because parents need to take the lead when it comes to sexuality education."

"Kids are bombarded with information," added Mary Ann Cox, also from the health agency, "from sexual ads, sitcoms, and web sites daily. And even though most kids are learning sex education at school, the curriculum may leave out families' values. 'Can We Talk?' gives advice on how to bring up sensitive topics at home."

The training will cover the four-part "Can We Talk?" program designed for parents, to help them start discussions with their kids about self-esteem, puberty and sexuality, mixed messages in the media, and peer pressure. Trainers will learn to facilitate the "Can We Talk?" activities and small group discussions that will help parents talk about important issues facing the kids, including alcohol, drugs, and AIDS. The program was developed by the National Education Association Health Information Network and is funded locally with a grant from the Michigan Abstinence Partnership.

For more information, telephone Mary Ann Cox or Jane Sundmacher at the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency at 547-6523.

Lecture series offered at Petoskey college

A lecture series begins at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 23 in the Student Center at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. The lecture series features Colonel Nancy Jaax, Chief of Pathology at the United States Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases.

Jaax and her husband Jerry are among the world's leading specialists on "hot" or extremely infectious viruses and high hazard biological research. Jaax was featured in the best-selling book "The Hot Zone."

In 1989 Nancy and Jerry Jaax were called in when America faced a real life outbreak of Ebola, the highly contagious hemorrhagic fever virus which kills, because of massive internal hemorrhage and is capable of jumping from one species to another. The lethal virus broke out among imported monkeys in Reston, Virginia.

Jerry Jaax led the team of space-suited Army soldiers who infiltrated the "hot" zone and contained the outbreak, while Nancy Jaax conducted emergency autopsies on the monkeys to determine their exact cause of death. It became the basis for the movie "Outbreak," with Dustin Hoffman and Rene Russo portraying the Jaax's.

Nancy Jaax and her husband have 20 years of experience in the Army Veterinary Corps and have served as consultants to the Surgeon General of the Army. They have conducted extensive research with hazardous organisms requiring bio-safety Level 4 containment and are acknowledged experts in medical defense against chemical and biological agents.

This program is co-sponsored by National City Bank. There is no admission fee.

A Message to Our Community from Burns Clinic

In the early 1920s, Dr. Dean Burns dared to dream a little dream. He wanted to bring together a group of specialty physicians to practice medicine in a tiny town on Little Traverse Bay. His dream grew into their reality of Burns Clinic, and for the past 70 years, the Burns Clinic has been devoted to delivering premier health care to this region. Throughout these years, we have been fortunate to employ physicians and staff who have dedicated their lives to caring for you.

As time has passed, changes have occurred around us in the field of health care. We have weathered many challenges together, and have now come to a point in time that for many of us here at Burns Clinic, and for many of you in our communities, would have never thought possible. Within the next 60 days, the Burns Clinic will cease operations as a multi-specialty group practice.

What does this mean to you, our patients?

First and foremost, we want to make clear that at no point in time will the doors to the clinic close. The changes occurring are legal and structural changes. Patients should plan to keep their appointments, whether they are in March or December. And patients should keep their appointment whether it is at the main Petoskey offices or at your doctor's location in Gaylord, Rogers City, St. Ignace, Sault Ste. Marie or Bellaire.

Throughout these times of great challenge and change, one thing has remained constant, and that is the complete devotion of our physicians and staff to this community. They have been here, and will continue to be here in the future, although it will be in a different legal structure. You will see many of the same faces that have served you over time serving you in the future.

What does this change mean to our physicians?

For the physicians, it gives them greater independence within their practices. Some of our physicians may choose to partner with, or become employees of, Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey. Other physicians may choose to become independent and remain on staff at Northern Michigan Hospital or another area hospital. These opportunities have revitalized our medical community and mean that the same high-quality health care you received in the past will be available to you in the future.

What does this change mean to our employees?

You may have heard that our employees received lay-off notices. This was a legal requirement in order to dissolve the Burns Clinic. For many of our employees, there will be job opportunities for them within a Medical Services Organization. Some employees may be directly employed by the same physicians they currently partner with to provide patient care. More specific information for employees will come in the weeks to follow as we work through this process.

The Burns Clinic has considered itself blessed to have been able to employ so many devoted workers throughout the years. We thank each and every employee, past and present, for their dedication and for weathering these times of challenge with us. We wish our employees only the best, and are offering them support in these times of change.

Change is almost always a double-edged sword. It brings about sadness and confusion, and also opportunity and excitement. There is a great sadness knowing that the Burns Clinic name will no longer be a part of our communities. However, it is important to know that this is not the end of Dr. Dean Burns' vision, but only a change needed to keep that dream alive. This change will ensure that the same high-quality health care you have depended upon in the past will exist in the future, with worlds of possibility awaiting it.

The Burns Clinic has been honored to serve you, and our physicians look forward to serving you in the future under a different, improved structure. We understand that you may have many questions and concerns, and want you to know that we are available to help you sort through those. Please feel free to call HealthAccess at the following number so that we can continue to help you.

For more information regarding this change, please call: 1-800-248-6777.

Sincerely,

The Administration, Physicians,
and Staff of Burns Clinic

Eleven teams of Future Problem Solvers (FPS) represented Charlevoix during last weekend's state finals at the University of Michigan.

Seven of the teams were comprised of middle school students, while the other four teams represented the high school.

One team of ninth graders placed second in their division and qualified for the international finals, to be held in June in Ann Arbor.

The quartet of Jim Shepherd, Scott Parrish, Shaun McDonough and Patrick Gowell won last year's state championship and came back this year with a strong second place.

To advance into the state finals, students had to address the issue of lifelong learning. During last weekend's state finals, the students had to tackle the controversial issue of alternatives to prison.

In addition to the ninth graders, seventh graders Sam Kupka, Alyssia McDonough, Rebecca Kanine and Shayna Drost placed fifth, but just missed qualifying for the international meet.

The competition was divided into three different age groups: junior, for grades 4-6; middle, for grades 7-9; and senior, for grades 10-12. This was the first year that Charlevoix was represented by students in all three divisions.

For FPS coach Tom Sothard, that accomplishment was extra special since this is his final year to lead Charlevoix's problem solvers.

Since 1983, he has headed the school's Future Problem Solvers program and four times his students took home state championship honors.

"It's been an awarding and fun filled experience," he said. "I like seeing kids excel academically and get a chance to be honored for their hard work."

Sothard received the Gordon Shewach Coach of the Year award for his work this year and throughout his career. Shewach was one of the founders of the Future Problem Solver competitions.

"It's a thrill for me to take kids from Charlevoix to the big meets and let them compete with the top of the state," he said. "Charlevoix is well-regarded all over for what we do and we like that."

Athlete resumes not guilty plea, gets new trial date

By Laurie Lounsbury
and Jamie MacMillan

When Charlevoix County prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur learned that basketball player Matt McClellan's attorney requested a plea and sentencing hearing to be scheduled after basketball season, she offered a word of legal caution.

"He (Matt) can, at any time, change his mind and get another bench trial date."

Her words turned out to be prophetic.

McClellan's attorney, Roy C. Hayes III, appeared in district court with the 18-year-old McClellan for a plea and sentencing hearing, but promptly changed direction.

"Matt wants a trial, wants to reaffirm his not guilty plea and we are requesting a jury trial," Hayes said.

The request for a jury trial was denied by district court Judge Richard May.

"Jury trials are only for criminal cases, and cases that apply to incarceration," the judge said. "A right to a jury trial does not apply in a minor-in-possession charge, which is a misdemeanor charge."

Instead, a bench trial was scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Thursday, April 15.

It was an anticlimactic outcome to a controversial case.

The case began when Matt McClellan, the star basketball player for the Rayder basketball team, was issued a ticket Dec. 5 for minor-in-possession of alcohol, which is a misdemeanor, and failure to submit to a preliminary breath test (PBT), a civil infraction.

The tickets were issued when a Charlevoix County Deputy Sheriff responded to a complaint of minors drinking at an Upper Bay Shore home. The deputy asked the teens in attendance to take a breath test.

One teenager refused the breath test, which checks for alcohol consumption.

That teen was Charlevoix High School senior Matt McClellan.

The incident occurred just as the Charlevoix Rayder basketball team was gearing up for a record season of play.

What ensued in the following months tested the school's 15-month-old Zero Tolerance policy, a policy that states the use of alcohol, tobacco or drugs by student athletes will not be acceptable.

The school conducted its own investigation, headed by high school principal Gary Grundman and assistant principal/athletic director Keith Haske. Haske is also the head basketball coach.

Haske admitted the situation may look "muddled" because of his dual roles, but the coach did suspend a starter on last year's team for violating the code of conduct portion of the policy.

When confronted by school officials, McClellan professed his innocence, unlike other student-athletes who have been accused of violating the Zero Tolerance policy.

"The individuals have been very honest, and, in all cases, every kid has admitted to what they did," Grundman said of past enforcement of the policy. "That's usually the rule, not the exception."

With a student claiming innocence, the school officials stepped up their investigation, reinterviewing McClellan as well as his parents and the arresting officer.

No conclusive evidence was shown to school administrators that would prove McClellan had had anything to drink that evening. According to the police report, the sheriff's deputy thought McClellan had been drinking, but never saw him with a beer in his hand.

Other factors weighed by the school, included in the police report, were the facts that the incident took place in a private home, McClellan's mother was present, she told her son not to submit to the breath test and that police entered the home without the approval of the parents.

"Every time we checked with Matt, every time we checked with his parents, the plea was not guilty," Grundman said.

The school's attorney also advised school officials not to suspend a student before he had his day in court.

McClellan's attorney entered a plea of not guilty on McClellan's behalf and a bench trial date was set for March 22, the day before the quarterfinal game in the state championships. As the date approached, however, the attorney went to the county deputy court clerk and asked for a plea and sentencing hearing to be scheduled for March 30, after basketball season concluded. The request was filed with the county clerk March 17.

Prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur was aware of the request for a plea and sentencing hearing, but couldn't make specific comments because the case was still pending.

"The only way that would happen (a plea and sentencing hearing would be scheduled) is if he didn't want a trial anymore," Kur said of the request. "The defendant has to indicate a change of the original plea for that to occur."

By changing his plea, Hayes was able to sidestep a trial date for his client in the midst of March Madness.

"I can't say that it (the hearing request date) didn't have anything to do with the basketball schedule, but that wasn't the full reason for it," Hayes said. "I had a conflict with my schedule and I thought we could resolve this without a trial."

The school administrators' position on McClellan had been that they wouldn't suspend him from the team until he'd had a fair trial and only then if he was found guilty.

Last year, a female student-athlete was acquitted by a jury on minor-in-possession charges brought forth by the same arresting officer.

Haske also said that there were three incidents this year when a teacher accused a student of having alcohol on their breath. A subsequent alcohol breath test administered by Haske proved negative.

"I work with the premise that I'll trust every kid until I am given reason not to," Haske said. "He (McClellan) has done nothing to me to create distrust. The day he left my office in December, I told him if the courts found him guilty, he was done with basketball."

The story of McClellan's charges and court date changes broke the day after the Rayders won their quarterfinal game and only hours before the team's bus departure to East Lansing for the state semifinal game. Haske said it was an attempt by some people to tarnish what the team had accomplished.

McClellan and his lawyer have two weeks to prepare for their trial date. In the mean time, school officials will continue to abide by their decision while weighing their options.

"Anytime you run into these situations, it's a good idea to reevaluate the policy and to see if it's what we want and if it's serving everyone's best interests," said John Sturock, school superintendent. "It's also good to review the policy and the case to see if we handled it properly."

Request for landfill expansion was withdrawn

By Jamie MacMillan

The battle to expand the Cedar Ridge landfill took yet another twist as company officials withdrew their expansion request, which was being reviewed by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ).

Waste Management, the company that owns the landfill, had applied for a 11.5-acre vertical expansion and a two-acre horizontal expansion to the southwest of their existing 40-acre landfill in Charlevoix County's Eveline Township.

The application to the DEQ was an appeal, of sorts, against the local county planning commission's denial of a similar request from the company in April, 1998.

At that time, county planners ruled that the company's request would not meet the siting criteria required for any additional landfill space. The commission had two reasons: the expansion would encroach too close to a nearby stream and that it would violate the local township zoning ordinances.

According to siting criteria, the landfill must be more than 2,000 feet away from a flowing body of water. Sears Creek, to the landfill's south, would be 520 feet away if the planned expansion was to be approved.

Waste Management was planning to counter to DEQ officials that the stream was not permanent and is often dried up. As a result, landfill territory would need only a 500-foot setback.

A battle of maps was expected at a DEQ public hearing in Charlevoix Monday, March 29, but that expectation fizzled with Waste Management's withdrawal of the expansion request.

Dave Barron, site manager for Cedar Ridge, denied speculation that the withdrawal came from any knowledge that the DEQ would eventually side with the local planners, saying it is only "conjecture and purely hypothetical."

"It's just our decision at this point," he said. "It has nothing to do with anything."

The DEQ had scheduled Monday's hearing to gauge local opinion before rendering a decision some time before June 18. With the request pulled off the table, two DEQ officials, John Ozoga

Caught in the net of Zero Tolerance

In the 15 months that the school's Zero Tolerance policy has been in effect, 14 students have had their extracurricular privileges suspended.

The policy prohibits any Charlevoix student involved in athletics, performing arts or other extracurricular activities from using or possessing narcotics, alcohol, tobacco and other banned substances.

Basketball coach Keith Haske helped drive the initiative to instill the policy when he arrived at Charlevoix to serve as coach, assistant principal and athletic director.

If an offense is proven in the course of a season, then that student-athlete is suspended from all remaining games. A violation between seasons results in the suspension from 20 percent of scheduled contests.

In non-athletic endeavors, the length of the suspension is measured in days, rather than games scheduled.

A self-disclosure clause in the policy allows a student to come forth, admit guilt and return to active participation after completing five substance-abuse classes and a suspension for a number of games equal to 20 percent of the season.

"The self-disclosure has been a very strong feature of this policy," high school principal Gary Grundman said.

Of the 14 students who received suspensions of some form since the policy's inception in December of 1997, six have come forward using the self-disclosure clause.

In each case, it was the parents of a student involved who caught students violating the policy and forced them to confess.

Over the summer, three students were caught smoking marijuana, while last month three students were caught drinking.

In the other cases, self-disclosure was not an issue.

Five students were caught by their coach smoking cigarettes on the bus during a team trip, one student was seen smoking a cigarette by a school administrator and another was caught stealing cigarettes from a local convenience store.

That student also violated the gross misconduct section of the Zero Tolerance policy which prohibits acts like theft, extortion, vandalism, assault, sexual misconduct and gross disrespect.

Haske suspended a starter from his basketball team last year for violating this clause when he copied a school key to enter the gymnasium after regular school hours. That player returned to the team this year and was an active member.

Is this policy effectively keeping students away from the pitfalls of teenaged social life?

"The tougher the policy, the more discrete the drinking becomes," Grundman said.

Haske defended the policy by explaining that the heart of the edict is to give students in the middle, who might go either way regarding peer pressure choices, a reason to say "No."

"If one kid stays away from all that stuff because of this policy, then it's working," Haske said. "I feel it's working. Can I give you proof? No, I can't."

OPINIONS

It was an illuminating week for the people of Charlevoix

LAURIE LOUNSBURY

When a basketball team achieves celebrity status for having accomplished an amazing feat — such as making it to the state semifinal championship game — the whole community might just as well strip buck naked and expose themselves to the world, warts and all.

That is essentially what happens when a small community finds itself in the limelight. The celebrity spotlight shines on everyone and exposes everything, both good and bad. The celebrity spotlight does not discern between ugly pimples and peachy cheeks.

This past week, Charlevoix found itself in the spotlight quite a bit.

The Rayder basketball team certainly deserved front page coverage. Their victory in the quarterfinal game was sweet, pure and well-deserved. And the loss in the semifinal game, while disappointing, was noble.

The team played with honor.

They played fairly and according to the rules.

They brought pride and spirit to Charlevoix, inspiring everyone in town to rally together in support of the outstanding hoopsters.

Score one point for the positive side of celebrity status.

Also on the bright side is an incident that definitely deserves to be brought into that indiscriminate celebrity high-beam.

Bill and Ellen Schuiling, a couple who moved to Charlevoix about five years ago, were so thrilled with the Rayder basketball team that they wanted to make sure every student and adult who wanted to go to the semifinal game in East Lansing was able to do so.

They walked into the high school and wrote a check for $6,000 to pay for five charter buses.

Because of their generosity, every student, mom, dad, aunt, uncle or friend of the team was able to be in the Breslin Center in East Lansing, cheering for the Rayders. The Schuilings weren't born and raised here. They have no longstanding Rayder basketball tradition in their blood. Yet they made a huge contribution to the team and the town out of the goodness of their hearts. They deserve thanks from the entire community.

Unfortunately, there's no getting around one other incident that came to light during March Madness. As we all know by now, senior basketball player Matt McClellan was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and for refusing to take a preliminary breath test at the beginning of this year's basketball season. (See related story, page 2).

At a time when the entire town was totally united in their support of the Rayders, this one issue drove a tire iron into the wheel of unity.

Some folks were bitterly angry that the school's Zero Tolerance policy appeared to have been manipulated for a key basketball player.

Other folks staunchly maintained that Matt was innocent until proven guilty, and should not have gotten any negative press coverage of the incident.

At the Courier, we knew about the story nearly a month ago. We chose not to write about it because, like the school officials, we believed Matt should have his day in court before we dragged his name into the news.

What transpired to make Matt's case newsworthy is the Zero Tolerance policy itself and a lawyer's steps to sashay around a court date until basketball season was over. What transpired might not have been noble, but it certainly was legal. That legal maneuvering enraged many people — but hey, that's just the way the basketball bounces.

My primary concern about this case is the bigger lesson that Matt might have gleaned from the experience. Did he learn about dignity and honesty? Or did he learn, like O.J. Simpson, that you can get away with just about anything if you have a good lawyer? We'll never know that because, regardless of the verdict, we won't know if he was truly guilty or innocent. Only he, his friends and family, know that.

All that remains is the core of this controversy. It is not Matt McClellan, and whether or not he got preferential treatment. It's the Zero Tolerance policy.

Zero Tolerance, translated literally, means being intolerant. It means no bending, no flexing, no forgiveness for kids who used poor judgment in one isolated instance.

I'm opposed to the Zero Tolerance policy because of those two words — Zero Tolerance. What kind of message does that send to kids? Someday they will grow up and have children of their own. They will have jobs and work with other people.

Will they be intolerant of their own children's mistakes? Will they be intolerant of their coworkers' foibles? Will they be intolerant of other people's cultural and ethnic traditions, which might include swigging a stout beer or sipping a red wine?

I applaud superintendent John Sturock's statement that the Zero Tolerance policy needs to be reevaluated to see if it is what we, as a community, want.

Is it?

At this time of year, the Easter season, perhaps the best quote that addresses the perils of intolerance is from the man whom we celebrate this week:

"Let he who is without sin cast the first stone."

Letters to the editor

Reader unhappy with daily paper coverage

Letter to the Editor of the Petoskey News-Review

Ken Winter

Editor:

My wife and I moved up to the Charlevoix area some five years ago from Washington, D.C. We fell in love with the area, but more importantly we fell in love with the people. We found such a different attitude here. People in this community cared about people, people helped their neighbors, people were not cynical about every little thing, and they exhibited humanity toward each other.

We were listening to the Charlevoix basketball game Thursday for the state semifinals, and we were pleased to hear how wonderfully a player named Matt McClellan played for us, being the high scorer for the team. We were so excited about the extraordinary season the Rayder baskethall team has had and the good feeling it has given the community. We paid for the transportation of six buses so as many as possible of the student body could experience this semifinal basketball event, an event which has not happened in 47 years for this community.

Even though the team lost, we were still happy and excited. I then went out my door to pick up the Petoskey News-Review, where on the front page, all along the bottom in large black, bold print, was an article about Matt McClellan written by three staff writers. Not only did it take up the bottom one-quarter of the front page, it went over to the second page and took over half of that page. I dare say there are at least 1,000 words or more in the article, and the object was to demean an 18-year-old honor roll student who may or may not have been drinking in his own home with his mother, and who is innocent until proven guilty.

You and your staff treated this possible minor offense as if it was a national crime or catastrophe, or a murder by the way they wrote the article. It did not even deserve to be written about. If you wanted to write about it, it should have been in the sports page in a more appropriate sized article, instead of making it one of the lead stories for the day. I am very unhappy to tell you that inhumanity does exist in our area here towards our fellow man and our children and it exists at your paper. You have made both of us very sad.

You owe Matt and his family an apology. I hope you are big enough to recognize your mistake and correct it. Can't you bring humanity to your paper?

Two very sad readers,
Bill and Ellen Schuiling

The Charlevoix County Land Conservancy, in cooperation with the Friends of the Jordan, Friends of Boyne River and Lake Charlevoix Association, is hosting a Soil and Conservation Week Celebration Saturday, May 1.

The groups are offering two events: a Watershed Planning Workshop and a Lake Charlevoix Watershed Ramble, which will be a rambling tour around the lake.

The watershed workshop will be from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday, May 1 at the Dilworth Hotel in Boyne City. It will feature Julie Stoneman of the Michigan Environmental Council and Rod Cortright of the Michigan Extension office. The workshop will focus on smart growth initiatives and coalition building for healthy communities.

The Watershed Ramble will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Dilworth Hotel in Boyne City. All participants should arrive five minutes early to pick up maps and schedules. Highlights of the tour will include a "River Stewardship on the Boyne River" presentation by Tom Sheets, the Introduction and Dedication of the Peter Faskey Preserve, Introduction to the Friends of the Jordan River Watershed's new Trading Post Office and Education Center. Also on the tour, Steve Hansen of the Lake Charlevoix Association will present shoreline protection tips and models and the Charlevoix County Land conservancy will present "Every City a Gateway City," and "What's Your Watershed Address" programs.

Following the tour, the group will gather at the Boyne River Inn for dinner.

There is no cost for the tour or the workshop, but reservations are needed to schedule buses. Reserve a spot by calling 237-9335 or 582-5824 by April 15.

The groups encourage township planners and zoning officials to attend. Anyone is welcome to attend either the morning workshop or the afternoon tour, or both.

Garden club poster contest winner

Nathaniel Sotuyo, a fifth grade student at Charlevoix Elementary School, won the poster contest sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Garden Club with this drawing of Smokey Bear and his vision of the forest reflected in his sunglasses.

Winners named in Charlevoix Garden Club poster contest

Children from St. Mary's Elementary School and Charlevoix Elementary School art classes participated in a poster contest sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Garden Club. The theme of the contest was Smokey Bear and Woodsy Owl, and protecting the environment.

Marybeth McGraw and Lori Bolt, art teachers at Charlevoix and St. Mary's, worked with their students to produce posters that were judged by the Charlevoix Garden Club. First place winners in each grade will have their posters forwarded to the state garden club for judging and winners there go on to the National Federation of Garden Clubs.

This year's overall winner was Nathaniel Sotuyo, fifth grade, Charlevoix Elementary School. He will receive a $50 savings bond at an awards party in May following the state judging.

The winners for grades one through five are: first grade, Jacob Waterman, first, Shawn Anthony, second, and Gunner Whitley, third. Marge McGoff, president of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club, expressed her pleasure at seeing the fine work of the local students and the wonderful cooperation of Lori Bolt and Marybeth McGraw in encouraging their students' participation.

Friends of the Jordan hosts second annual auction and dinner

The Friends of the Jordan River Watershed will host its second annual fund-raising auction and educational event Saturday, April 24, at the Charlevoix Country Club, located on U.S. 31 just north of Charlevoix. Items for the auction are being solicited.

The Jordan River Watershed, 125 square miles in size, embodies some of Michigan's most outstanding natural features. The Jordan is Michigan's first designated wild and scenic river. A nearly contiguous 25,000-acre block of state land in the upper part of the watershed, known widely as the Jordan Valley, provides a scenic, wilderness setting. However, this watershed ecosystem is fragile and is threatened by unplanned development, incompatible activities, recreational overuse, exotic species invasion, and forest fragmentation.

The Friends of the Jordan River Watershed, a grassroots nonprofit organization working to conserve the natural resources and protect the environmental quality of the Jordan River and its watershed, was formed in 1990.

Last year was a busy and effective year for the Friends. The group continued to successfully prevent oil and gas exploration and development within the Jordan Valley Management Area, and took important steps toward permanently preventing it by working to achieve State Land Reserve Status for the area. With assistance from Friends of the Jordan, many students from schools throughout the watershed participated in water quality studies. Production of an educational watershed handbook, targeted at students, residents, and visitors, got underway. The group again staged several river clean-ups where mounds of trash were removed from the stream and its corridor.

One of the most exciting happenings was the donation of "the Trading Post," East Jordan's oldest building, to Friends of the Jordan. The building will be moved (to make way for condominium development) to a new location near the Jordan River spreads and utilized for the group's office and community nature center. In February, the Friends of the Jordan received the prestigious 1999 Clean Waters Award from the Michigan Outdoor Writers Association in recognition of its efforts.

To continue to work effectively to protect this area, Friends of the Jordan needs broad-based public financial support. Please consider the donation of new or "gently used" merchandise, collectibles, or services for the April fund-raiser event. Donations are tax-deductible as allowed by law. If you are not familiar with this special area, plan to attend the event to learn more about it. For more information, please call John Hummer, director, at 533-5063.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Joe Johnston
Charlevoix Assembly of God

Do you feel hurried, or like there isn't enough time in your 24-hour day to accomplish all that you desire to do? Boy, some days seem like my list of things to do just keeps growing longer and longer. I'm working as fast as I can, but still can't keep up with the duties. I have, on occasion, found myself to be worked into non-productivity.

There's a story told of a young brawny lad who approached the foreman of a logging crew and asked for a job.

"That depends," barked the foreman. "Let's see how well you can fell this tree." The young man picked up an ax, stepped up to the base of a gigantic white pine, and skillfully felled the tree within five minutes. The foreman was quite impressed so he said to the lad, "you can start on Monday."

Monday rolled around and the young man felled more trees than any other workers. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday passed and Thursday afternoon the foreman informed the young man that, at the end of the day, he could pick up his check. Startled, the young man said, "I thought payday was on Friday."

"It is," said the foreman. "I have to let you go. You've fallen behind. On Monday you were the top lumberjack on the crew. But from Tuesday until now you have consistently fallen behind."

"But I'm a hard worker," the lumberjack exclaimed. "I arrive first, leave last, and often work through coffee breaks!"

The foreman sensing the young man's integrity, thought for a minute and then asked, "Have you been sharpening your ax?"

"No sir," the young man replied. "I've been working too hard to take time for that."

Our lives are often like the work habits of this young lumberjack. We sometimes get so busy that we don't take time to sharpen our ax. Most people pride themselves for having a busy schedule and we wear it like a badge of honor. But have we learned the art of staying sharp?

There's nothing wrong with hard work, but we must realize we can only effectively accomplish so much without getting burned out or becoming fruitless.

There's a principle in scripture laid out for such a problem as this. It's called Sabbath rest. God Himself created the world in six days and on the seventh day He rested. Not that He was tired, but He laid out a mold for us to follow. We need rest to become replenished to be more fruitful the following week.

For most of us that day is Sunday. I'm not so sure it has to be exactly the same day for everyone, but one thing's for sure, the Sabbath is holy to the Lord! Do you have a holy, godly, restful day?

The service involves the dramatization of the "Twelve Soliloquize," with Leonardo Da Vinci's painting of the Last Supper coming alive as the disciples strike the poses in the painting. They then tell of their lives in association with Christ and what tradition followed the command to "go into the world."

The service involves the extinguishing of candles as a reminder of the darkness that covered the earth after the passion and crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

This is the 24th year the church has presented the program. It was started by the Rev. Buzz Walls. Members from both Bay Shore and Boyne City congregations are involved.

Locals may have been cruel to visitor

Letter to the Community:

For nearly a month I have been battling my conscience. I don't intend to disrespect or offend any of you, but there is an underlying element here in Charlevoix that many people may not be aware of.

While on my way home from work on a Friday night not too long ago, I saw a young man standing on Bridge Street, his face covered with blood. Shocked, I drove on by. After a few seconds I realized he may need help, so I turned my car around and saw he was climbing into the cab of a truck. I turned around once again, this time following him. He drove slowly around the corner onto Clinton, obviously having trouble. He then parked his truck. I rolled down my window to ask if he needed help. He came over to my car, trying to stop the bleeding with a flannel shirt. I encouraged him to go to the hospital. He said he would be fine, it was just some of the locals don't like people from out of town.

Horrified at first, I realized this was not the first time I've heard this statement. I apologized for us all.

This is where you come in. I have to know, how can some of us stand by and let this happen? And why?

Plenty of us depend on people from out of town for our income. Whether they are here on business, vacation or just passing through, what does it matter? They are here enjoying what we enjoy every day in Charlevoix. They should not have to worry about bodily harm from any of us.

Why can't we be "Charlevoix the Beautiful" and "Friendly" too?

Life long resident,
Jennifer (Clock) Donker

Senior class appreciates community support

Dear Editor:

One of the wonderful traditions in our community is the annual senior class party. The drug and alcohol-free bash is organized by parents, and lasts all night after graduation. The financial burden of this event is shouldered in large part by local businesses and service groups. This is a note of thanks.

Organizational activities have been happening since last fall by our parents committee, and the party is taking fine shape. Recently we sent solicitation letters to businesses asking for support. Already we are seeing a heartwarming response. Those of us who are parents of students in this class are, of course, very biased in our positive opinions about them, but to feel others contribute to this same spirit is very much appreciated.

We all should realize that in a community the size of ours, local business members are constantly deluged with charity requests. We are fortunate to have generous, patient, and socially conscious people making up the commercial part of our town. On behalf of our parents' committee, thanks to those of you who have already found it worth your while and dollars to support this event. To fellow parents, friends, and community members, I urge you to return the favor.

Sincerely,
Jeff Kessler
Co-Chair, Senior Party
Parents' Committee

Exactly what won't be tolerated?

Editor:

As I see it, the "Zero Tolerance" policy of the Charlevoix High School Athletic Department has nothing to do with substance abuse.

It simply means that when the football, or more recently, the basketball team is on a roll, any threat to removing a star player will not be tolerated.

Sincerely,
Mary Pair

and Phil Reycraft, hosted an informal question-and-answer session with the nearly 50 residents who arrived at the Knights of Columbus Hall, most of whom spoke out against the landfill's expansion.

Most of the residents' fears revolved around potential pollution and the possible ruin of the Lake Charlevoix environment, a cornerstone of the area's social and economic viability.

"Cedar Ridge is a threat to those values," Nancy Fergusen said, noting the landfill is less than one mile from Lake Charlevoix. "To become a garbage dump for the whole region is too big a risk."

A small argument broke out between the DEQ officials and some residents over the quality of the landfill's soil and the availability and accuracy of well reports for the facility.

Elmer Crain, a local well digger, showed the state officials a report on one the facility's wells, which showed a mixture of clay, sand and rocks beneath the surface. Cedar Ridge officials have long maintained the facility is a prime landfill location because of the strong clay soil content, which traps potential runoff, something sand and rocks can't do.

Ozoga, however, disputed Crain's assertions, saying that all their 17 well reports from the landfill show strong clay soils and that the landfill is "the best geological site as far as clay goes."

Although the session wasn't the expected public hearing it was supposed to be, state officials said it was beneficial for them to get a feel for local concerns, especially regarding runoff protection.

The state officials didn't address whether or not they would have approved the permit.

"There's no way to answer that since we didn't finish our review," Reycraft said. "We made no judgment as to whether it met any criteria."

The landfill is expected to reach its capacity early in the year 2000. Speaking on behalf of the company, Barron would not say if they will revisit the issue and that it's premature to speculate if the facility will close down.

"As of this point, there has been no decision to close the facility," he said. "That's our concern and nobody else's."

College postpones election asking Charlevoix to join district

North Central Michigan College will hold a special election May 16 in the year 2000 to ask Charlevoix county residents to join the college district.

College officials had originally talked about having an election this spring, but decided to wait until next year to have more time to communicate with voters and to avoid interfering with K-12 school elections planned for this fall.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners approved the election date at their March 24 meeting.

"We're asking Charlevoix County residents to make a very good investment in the economic future of the county," said NCMC president Robert Graham during his presentation to the commissioners.

The college will ask Charlevoix County voters if they would like the county to join the college district and pay 2.5416 mills, which is the tax rate in the current college district of Emmet County. Of the total millage, 1.2416 is perpetual, 1 mill would be up for renewal in both Charlevoix and Emmet counties in 2006, and .3 mills for building and renovation would expire in 2016.

The college plans to use the additional revenue for new programs, expanded training for business and industry, and to develop a University Center where four-year colleges and universities would offer a variety of bachelor's and master's degree programs. Graham said seven institutions have already expressed interest in the project.

"When you need a law enforcement officer, odds are the person you'll end up talking to got some training at North Central Michigan College. When your granddaughter needs day care, odds are the person you'll hire got training at North Central," Graham said.

Charlevoix cement plant expands its storage capacity

Southdown, Inc. announced that it will be spending $11 million to increase their cement storage capacity at the Charlevoix plant.

The expanded storage capability will increase production at the Charlevoix plant by approximately 130,000 tons per year.

"Currently, we have a shortage of storage capacity so we can't maximize production capability in the winter months," said Southdown spokesperson Thomas Daman.

Daman explained that during the winter months when cement can't be shipped, the plant makes as much cement as it can store and then stops production. The company will now be able to maximize cement production and concentrate on sales and distribution in the spring and summer months.

The storage silo will be built on Southdown property at the plant. Permits have already been issued for the project, according to Daman.

The project also includes $12 million of improvements to the company's Great Lakes distribution system, including 50,000 tons of additional storage at water-served terminals in Chicago, Ill. and Ferrysburg, Mich. Most of this additional capacity is expected to be available for the year 2000 shipping season.

"These expansion projects are integral to the company's strategy to develop a system of large, low cost facilities with excellent distribution capability," said Clarence C. Comer, president and chief executive officer of the company. "In 1998, cement demand exceeded domestic capacity by 27 percent, or 24 million tons. The anticipated growth in cement demand over the next several years resulting from a strong construction economy and the new Federal Highway program should maintain the present favorable balance between cement supply and demand while absorbing all announced plant expansions."

Southdown is one of the largest producers of cement in the U.S. The company operates 12 portland cement manufacturing plants in the U.S., plus an extensive network of cement distribution terminals.

The Bath Fighting Bees were just too much for the Rayders

By Jamie MacMillan

The Charlevoix Rayders found their limit amid a quicker, sharper shooting display of basketball from the Bath Fighting Bees in the state semifinal game last Thursday afternoon at the Breslin Center on the Michigan State campus.

"It was awe inspiring," senior point guard Jim Kanine said of playing at the Breslin Center and in front of a crowd of over 7,000 people. "Inspiring, walking through the tunnel, being with all my friends and seeing the look on everyone's faces in the crowd."

Kanine and his mates, however, might want to forget a disastrous first quarter against the Bees, during which they fell behind by 19 points en route to a 72-58 defeat. The loss eliminated the Rayders one game shy of the state title game and snapped an eight-game winning streak.

The Rayders led only once, 2-0, after a Matt Dennis jump shot started the game. The Bees scored the game's next six points, but that run was only the calm before the storm.

As the Rayders turned the ball over and clanged their jump shots, the Bees had dead aim on the hoop, swishing 61 percent of their shots in the opening frame. Bath punctuated their early dominance with a 13-0 run to close the quarter and open a commanding 24-5 advantage.

"You blame your defense for not being able to stop that onslaught," coach Keith Haske said. "In reality, Bath had five kids who are very good either inside or outside and were very tough to defend."

The team was a little "smitten," Haske said, playing underneath the bright lights of the Breslin Center. Once they righted themselves, the club rebounded and gave Bath's sizable early advantage a good run for its money.

The Rayders fell behind 28-7 before scoring 10 straight points, capped by Tom Cunningham's 3-pointer, which sliced the margin to 28-17. A 3-point shot from Adam Wood closed the half, but Charlevoix still trailed, 34-22.

A baseline jumper from Dennis and a driving lay-up by Matt McClellan opened the second half and the Rayders closed the gap, 34-26.

Charlevoix never got any closer as Bath drilled consecutive 3-pointers to open a 13-1 run which pushed the lead to 20 points, 47-27.

Trailing 53-35 headed to the final quarter, the Rayders refused to die, instead climbing on the back of McClellan, who scored 13 of his game-high 29 points in the fourth quarter. On a series of drives to the hoop, 3-pointers and free throws, McClellan's efforts brought the club to within nine points, 58-49, with three minutes, 52 seconds left in the contest.

A week earlier the club stormed back against Whittemore-Prescott from an 11-point deficit late in the game to win a regional contest. Bath, however, was too strong and their ability to break Charlevoix's press prevented any Charlevoix miracles this time.
